$1,661,891,494 Contracts Let For Defense, Board Says

Roosevelt Calls Such Progress More Important Than Convention

President Roosevelt made public the first report of his defense advisory commission yesterday, revealing that $1,661,891,494 in arms production contracts have been awarded since June 6, and substantial progress made in meeting many problems raised by the extraordinary defense program.

Obviously pleased with the work of his seven-member advisory group during their first 40 days, Mr. Roosevelt said he considered the report more important than the news coming out of Chicago or than any political convention.

The seven-part report, each part contributed by a commission member, covered all phases of the vast preparedness program.

Synthetic Rubber

Outstanding developments listed were:

Adoption of plans for an extensive campaign to prepare citizens physically for Army or other defense in an emergency.

The anticipated removal of one of the chief wartime supply problems, by taking care of most of the Nation's rubber needs through synthetic rubber rather than reliance on imports.

Preparation of plans for acquisition of adequate supplies of 100 octane aviation gasoline and its storage in underground bomb-proof tanks.

A declaration that so far no skilled labor shortage has developed in defense industries and that from 30,000 to 40,000 persons are enrolled in training courses to supply future needs for qualified technicians of various types.

Acquisition of substantial quantities of special railroad rolling stock is planned by the Government, including "cellar" cars for carrying heavy tanks and other Army equipment which would not go through tunnels in ordinary cars.

Close attention is being paid to the domestic price structure and where price increases have appeared unjustified, the commission has called conferences for reaching a voluntary agreement with business. Thus far, it was stated, business has evidenced its desire to cooperate.

Tank Design Changed

Attention is being given to the location of new plants of defense industries, with a view to establishing them in agricultural areas to avoid "uneconomic concentration of industry."

That the design of heavy tanks for the Army has had to be changed because of lessons of the European war.

Progress made toward solution of the machine tool bottleneck.

In outlining the seven-part report to reporters, President Roosevelt

He Who Laughs Last

President Joyously Takes Press Conference by Surprise

Beguiles Reporters With Defense Data Then Reveals Plans

By William V. Nessly

A President in shirt sleeves, in most matter-of-fact manner, yesterday shocked a roomful of reporters, and through them the Nation, by revealing that his closely guarded stand on the third-term question was ready to be told.

Catching the newsmen unprepared for his drama-filled announcement, as he has done on previous occasions when affairs of moment were to be made public, Mr. Roosevelt delayed the word until he had first read through seven reports of Defense Commission members on the progress of their task to prepare the Nation for possible attack.

Throughout the conference, the President maintained his role, and it was only when reporters, after the formal "Thank you, Mr. President" that closes all Presidential press conferences, scurried for telephones to flash the news to the country, that he burst into loud laughter, revealing his appreciation of the turmoil he had caused.

Roosevelt Meant Yes, Party Thinks

He Didn't Say No, Delegates Observe As They Prepare Draft Movement

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, July 16.—He didn't say no.

That was the crux of President Roosevelt's dramatic message tonight, and now the Democratic Party is convinced that since he didn't say no, he must have meant yes.

The way is now clear for a third-term nomination.

The general reaction was that the President, in turning loose his more than 700 delegates, was seeking to kill the impression that this is a convention of robots performing in response to a master sitting in the White House in Washington.

But the truth is, the President's relayed message to the convention changes nothing here in Chicago.

The Roosevelt-pledged delegates are free, yes, but where are they to go except to Roosevelt when the balloting starts?

New Dealers Grin Broadly

The New Dealers, anxious to give the third-term nomination a strong "draft" aspect, looked on with broad grins late tonight as the delegates kept up their incessant bellowing, "We want Roosevelt! We want Roosevelt!"

Senator James Byrnes, of South Carolina, one of the draft-Roosevelt strategists, spoke for the others when he said:

"The delegates are making the statement, 'We want Roosevelt.' That's the way of the American people."

"Very Sincere," Says Tydings

Antithird-term delegates, for the most part, regarded the President's move as a smart move, executed with his customary skill in timing.

It came at a time when the delegates were getting restless, even sullen, as they milled around wondering when somebody was going to tell them what they had come here for.

It was smart in another sense, too, it was agreed, since it led extra millions to listen in tonight as Senator Barkley lambasted the Repub-

Stadium, Chicago, July 16.—Senator Alben W. Barkley's statement on behalf of President Roosevelt follows:

"I and other close friends of the President have long known that he has no wish to be a candidate again. We know, too, that in no way whatsoever has he exerted any influence in the selection of delegates or upon the opinion of delegates to this convention.

"Tonight at the specific request and authorization of the President, I am making this simple fact clear to the convention.

"The President has never had and has not today a desire or purpose to continue as President, to be a candidate for that office, or to be nominated by the convention for that office.

"He wishes in all earnestness and sincerity to make it clear that all of the delegates to this convention are free to vote for any candidate.

"That is the message I bear to you from the President of the United States by authority of his word."

At Long Last

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, July 16.—President Roosevelt tonight released all third-term delegates and told the Democratic convention he was not a candidate for reelection.

To electrified delegates, who have long awaited some sign from him, this meant the President would run if drafted. Cries of "We Want Roosevelt" followed the cryptic announcement by Senate Majority Leader Barkley. The second prolonged Roosevelt demonstration of the evening began. The draft parade was on.

It was the news that the country and the world had awaited for two years, and it transformed delegates from lethargy into a third-term hullabaloo.

In effect it threw this convention wide open to any candidate, without "hog tied" restrictions on Roosevelt-pledged votes.

Majority on Roll Call Friday Is Probable

But it meant that President Roosevelt on Friday's roll call probably will receive a large "draft" majority of all ballots cast.

Barkley announced the White House tidings at the end of a 5,000-word speech.

A pause momentarily followed completion of the statement as delegates sought to grasp its significance.

And then the shouting and marching began. The "We Want Roosevelt" chant mounted. Then came loud cries into the hall's loud speaker—"The country wants Roosevelt"—"New Jersey wants Roosevelt"—"The world wants Roosevelt"—Illinois, New York, California, etc., wants Roosevelt.

Some jester stepped up to the mike and shouted "Willkie wants Roosevelt."

The convention, which hadn't had a real demonstration until tonight, gave forth all the cheers pent up for two days while delegates awaited the White House message.

An hour earlier it had cheered itself hoarse at the first full mention of the President's name.

Word that Barkley would talk as the White House mouthpiece spread through Chicago like wildfire at dusk. Delegates and guests packed every available inch of space in the vast stadium. Raised in spirits by the knowledge that the damper at last was to be removed, they sang, yelled and celebrated generally in the long, tedious wait for the news.

Hopkins Certain Chief Will Be Nominated

Any doubt that the President's name will go to a vote was removed by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins six hours before the convention heard the message.

In a suite at the Blackstone Hotel, Barkley and Hopkins talked long-distance with the President and the brief but explosive message was phrased. A few moments later Hopkins stepped out to announce to reporters that the President was going to be nominated.

The effect of the statement was to assure the convention that the President, while not a candidate, nor desiring continuation in office, was willing to abide by the decision of the convention.

Effect also was to remove any onus that might be placed on the President if he attempted to hold third-term pledges in line. He set none of the many rumored "terms of acceptance" that have been circulating around this city for two days without an enthusiastic reception.

Statement No More Negative Than Coolidge's

Candidates, and they now number four, not counting the President, are freed by his statement to enter an open race.

They are Postmaster General Farley, whose "secret" is now out of the bag, Vice President Garner, Senator Wheeler, of Montana, and Senator Tydings, of Maryland. Others now may pitch in.

The President's statement was hardly more negative than former President Coolidge's "I do not choose," but Roosevelt people here interpreted it differently.

The demonstration following the announcement started at 11:10 p. m. and at midnight it was still underway, with the or-

Hitler Offers Britain Peace, Rome Says

Said to Demand Europe for the Axis Exclusively as Price

By the Associated Press

Rome, July 16.—The intention of offering Great Britain a last chance to escape a smashing attack by accepting an Axis-dictated political and economic settlement for Europe was attributed to Adolf Hitler here tonight.

At the same time, Italy claimed important gains against Britain, both in Africa and on the Mediterranean.

The possibility was expressed in diplomatic quarters that Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, may go to Berlin Thursday or Friday to discuss the three-point terms the Axis powers are said to offer as their peace price

German sources indicated that Hitler might deliver his ultimatum to Britain soon in a speech to the Reichstag, demanding:

Italy Reports Major Victory In African War

Salient of 187 Miles Smashed in Heavy Fighting, Rome Hears

By the United Press

Rome, Italy, July 16.—Italy today claimed her first important victory of the war in Africa with an official announcement that the 187-mile British salient of Dolo, between Italian Somaliland and Ethiopia, has been smashed in heavy fighting.

From the salient strong British forces had been striking out in repeated efforts to cut the important highway betwen Mogadiscio and Nechelli, which is a major artery for Italian military forces in Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland.

As result of the snipping off of the salient, today's war communique said, Italian troops are advancing deeper into British Kenya.

Meanwhile, Italian bombing planes were said to have badly damaged the port of Haifa in Italy's first attack on British-held Palestine.

In connection with the attack, the Fascist press and radio asserted that Italy has a "right" to exercise a protectorate over the Holy Land, now governed by Britain under a League of Nations mandate but scene of constant strife and unrest.

Italian general headquarters said that the aerial bombardment of Haifa caused fires which could be seen by aviators 125 miles away.

In the reported smashing of the Dolo salient the Italians claimed to have occupied four strategic points along the base of the salient, thereby enabling the Italian forces to strike deeper into Kenya including the Moyale region.

Wheeler Leads, 3 to 1, in Early Primary Returns

Helena, Mont., July 16 (AP).—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, isolationist leader, held a 3-to-1 lead over his opponent for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, Attorney General Harrison M. Freebourn, in early returns from today's primary voting.

Unofficial returns from 29 of the State's 1,495 precincts gave Wheeler, 3,246; Freebourn, 1,264.

Miss Jeannette Rankin, the Nation's first Congresswoman, and Jerry J. O'Connell, defeated two years ago, both were ahead in their House comeback attempts.

Willkie Sticks To View President Will Be Named

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 16 (U.P.).—Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, tonight reiterated his prediction that President Roosevelt will accept renomination by the Democratic convention in Chicago.

Willkie, in a statement to reporters grouped in his hotel suite at the end of the speech by Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, said:

"I'll make the same prediction that I made to you the other night—that the President will be renominated on the first ballot and will accept the nomination."

At the time of the long convention demonstration, after Barkley mentioned Roosevelt's name, Willkie said

"This is the answer," meaning, in his opinion, as to whether the President would seek a third term.

Foreign Policy Plank Placates Isolationists

A Drafter Reports It Fails to Mention Aid for Britain

By John B. Oakes

Chicago, July 16.—Complete and unanimous agreement on the platform to be presented to the full resolutions committee tomorrow was reached late tonight by the 17-man drafting subcommittee.

Settled were the fights over the foreign policy plank, an antithird term proposal and other issues that had kept the drafters tied up in a "smoke-filled room" all day and far into the night.

Though none would reveal details of the agreement, praise for the proposed statement of the party's stand on international problems indicated a compromise that would be acceptable to the full committee.

Senator Wheeler, of Montana, who once threatened to leave the party if it became a "war party," emerged from the platform drafting committee room with this comment on the foreign policy plank:

"It is a very good plank. I'm satisfied."

The foreign policy statement was reported by one member of the drafting group to make no specific mention of aid to Great Britain in her war with Germany except that it left the way clearly open for extension of such assistance as is permitted under the terms of the neutrality law.

Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, who announced that the subcommittee delegated to draft the platform was unanimous on all points, described the foreign policy link as "very excellent."

"It meets the objections of any and every group in the United States that wants to keep out of

Delegates Go Wild at Name Of Roosevelt

Mention by Barkley Starts 2-Barrelled Demonstration

By Hedley Donovan.

Chicago, July 16.—The Democratic Convention, all dressed up for 48 hours, found some place to go tonight.

Three words from Senator Barkley, of Kentucky—"Franklin Delano Roosevelt"—turned a four-acre expanse of delegates and spectators into a churning, full-throated third-term demonstration.

Delegates urged renomination of the present holder via cowbells, police whistles, automobile claxons and the public address system. They flourished State standards, straw hats, ten-gallon hats, and fans from Mayor Kelly, proclaiming "Chicago's Best Is Yours." The president of the Woman's Democratic Club of Kentucky waved a 3-foot twist of burley tobacco.

Committeemen Approve Plank For D. C. Suffrage

Chicago, July 16.—The proposed plank for suffrage for the District has met the approval of every member of the resolutions subcommittee which is preparing the Democratic platform, it was indicated here today.

A copy of the plank, as published in yesterday's Post, was presented to each member of the 17-man group, and, according to Melvin Hildreth of the District delegation, not a single dissenting voice was heard.

Eager to Do the Job

Windsors to Fly to New York This Week on Way to Bahamas

By the Associated Press

London, July 16.—The Duke of Windsor, eager to take up his new duties as governor general and commander in chief of the Bahamas, has arranged to fly by clipper to New York this week with his Baltimore-born duchess, the former Wallis Warfield Simpson.

Tarrying scarcely at all in the United States, they will speed on by air to Nassau to take up the colonial overlordship of the little island chain "sub-kingdom" off the Florida coast.

The next clipper is scheduled to leave Lisbon Thursday, so it will be possible for the former King and commoner-duchess to take over the governor's mansion on New Providence Island by the end of the week.

Dispatches from Lisbon, where the Windsors have been since July 3, said they did not intend to remain in New York, but would go on as quickly as possible.

The former King's selection for the Bahamas post was made just one week ago today, and his early arrival may catch the little colony "flat-footed."

Only yesterday, the incumbent governor, Sir Charles Dundas, asked the colonial legislature for funds to remodel the government house before the Windsors' arrival.

Subject to Draft

Farley Plans to Retire Sept. 1 From Cabinet and Party Post

By a Staff Writer.

Chicago, July 16.—Postmaster General James A. Farley plans to retire from the Roosevelt Cabinet and from his post as chairman of the Democratic National Committee on September 1.

He may not do so. But that, The Post learns on the very best authority, is his present intention.

On September 1, of course, the 1940 campaign will really be just getting under way and will become progressively more torrid until the balloting stage is reached in early November.

Some desperate efforts will yet be made to persuade "Big Jim" to run the campaign. For example, a resolution is to be introduced in the convention to draft him.

What happened here this afternoon showed how far the whole convention program had been taken out of Farley's hands by the New Dealers. Farley was plainly "scooped" by the White House statement that Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, would make President Roosevelt's attitude known to the convention tonight.

The news came over a United Press ticker in the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee in the Stevens Hotel. A boy

VOLTS FOR WILLKIE

WILLKIE SLOGANS: In a mildly spiteful way, due perhaps to the heat, a few Democrats are passing the time by inventing slogans for Willkie. So far the punchiest one is: "Volts for Willkie."

Harlan Miller

* * * *

Another version of this pastime is the tale that if Willkie (the human dynamo) is elected he will change "Washington, D. C." to "Washington, A. C." to modernize the place. Direct current to alternating current, savvy? (That one sounds as if just then a fuse blew out.)

* * * *

REMOTE CONTROL: Despite FDR'S positive "No!" on a trip to the convention, some of his more stubborn backers still want him to come, and are urging that he fly out . . . But the boys with the finesse agree that Presidential aloofness would be better . . . But if the demand becomes strident——!

* * * *

By the time word came that a message was on the way from President Roosevelt, the delegates were fit to scream from political tedium, like so many neglected wives.

On the second afternoon the leaders were telling each other that discord is better than apathy, shock better than uncertainty.

* * * *

If son Elliott Roosevelt campaigns at all, it will be for his father. He says that a Willkie-Roosevelt campaign will define squarely the issues of the last years. But the canard that he might go for Willkie is definitely, positively untrue. Elliott now describes himself as a Texas Democrat.

"—rumor with speed of light"

SPEED OF RUMOR: As at Philadelphia, rumor in the hotel lobbies travels almost with the speed of light. You can start a story at one end of the Stevens lobby and, by running at top speed, meet it halfway across, bouncing back at you in revised form, like an intoxicated butterfly.

* * * *

The crowning indignity, of course, is to hear a story you launched yourself retold a few minutes later as an exclusive inside tip, but with a twist which you don't approve, and which nullifies your original intent in starting the yarn.

* * * *

IN BACKGROUND: Tommy Corcoran declared positively that he isn't coming to this convention. "You don't need to push a snowball downhill," was his explanation. Few of the other brain-trusters are in evidence here. Don't want to ruffle the old Democrats.

* * * *

So far there has been so much pussy-footing, hair-splitting and fence-straddling here that when Ickes lashed out with some typical Ickes lingo even his severest critics relished it.

* * * *

NO PLACE FOR A GAL: Despite the mysterious "equal rights" plank insinuated into the G. O. P. platform, many Democrats agree that a convention is no place for a woman—at least not for a wife.

* * * *

A woman's feet can't endure the standing 'round; a woman's ears can't tolerate the endless reiteration of banalities delivered in hushed, confidential tones.

Here, instead of "It looks like Willkie," the whispered shibboleth is "It looks like a third term."

"—they'll swap phones for fans"

EARLY BIRD: An Iowan with a unique claim to fame is John Minchen, of Carroll, who airmailed his congratulations to Willkie the Sunday four days before he was nominated. Wanted to be on record maybe, as for-Willkie-before-the-convention.

* * * *

But he sent them in a large envelope on which the address was merely Wendell Willkie, in letters almost an inch high—not even U. S. A. He doesn't know whether Jim Farley ever delivered it. Maybe it'll catch up with Willkie in Colorado.

* * * *

A 1938 FDR BET: The only Democratic burst of loyalty that tops this is the $100 bet made by a furtive New Dealer, back in December, 1938, that Roosevelt would run in 1940 and be reelected.

* * * *

Right up to the eleventh hour imaginary odds on Roosevelt's running were quoted all the way from 50 to 1 up to 1,000 to 1. But even prophets said emphatically "Don't forget the one."

* * * *

FANS FOR PHONES: There has been some talk of plugging in a few phones right on the floor among the delegates, so they can get the last word from on high, in a pinch. Not that any last minute deals impend here, like the famous Dewey-Taft deal that missed the boat . . . But the delegates say they'll swap the phones for a few electric fans.

Ruling Gives Defense Agencies First Grab at U. S. Employes

Steps Also Taken To Prevent Raids By Other Bureaus

By Edward Ryan

Defense agencies have a new set of rules to help keep their employes on the job.

The new regulations, recommended by William H. McReynolds, the President's administrative assistant for personnel affairs, give the defense agencies first grab at the employes of other Government agencies, and protect the defense branches against employe raids by nondefense bureaus.

McReynolds' policy has been adopted in full by the Civil Service Commission and passed along to department and agency chiefs. In advising the new plan, McReynolds told the commission that "in ordinary times it would seem to be good public policy not only to permit transfers freely within the Government structure but to facilitate them."

Needs Called Urgent

"During the present period, however, the urgent needs of the Government itself may demand the retention of personnel in positions in which they can render the most valuable service to the national defense program," he said. "Consequently, shifting them to other agencies in which their services would not be as valuable might justifiably be prevented or postponed."

His program called for:

Continuing the present policy of facilitating employe transfers from nondefense to defense jobs.

Giving defense agencies the right to object to transfer of any of its own employes, either to another defense agency or a nondefense agency. Their objection will be final unless overruled by the Civil Service Commission.

List of Agencies Swells

Meanwhile, the commission's list of defense agencies has swelled to more than a score of departments and bureaus. It includes the War, Navy and State departments, Civil Aeronautics, FBI and Immigration Service, Procurement Division, Coast Guard, Bureau of Labor Statistics and the Apprenticeship Section in the Labor Department, executive offices of the President, National Defense Advisory Commission, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Maritime Commission, Panama Canal, Civil Service Commission, Social Security Board, Bureau of Employment Security, Vocational Education Branch of the Office of Education. Also included are key jobs in the Federal Communications Commission, Bureau of Mines, Geologic Survey, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Bureau of Marine Inspection.

The Government, already liberally staffed with ghost writers, now has a ghost teacher. His job is self-assigned, unique, and several cuts above the ghost-writing game. . . .

The teacher is William D. Boutwell, radio director in the Office of Education. For several days he has been teaching, by remote control, a class in radio writing at the National Music Camp in Interlochen, Mich.

He hasn't seen the class yet, doesn't know how many pupils he has, but he does know they're hard at work. All the students know about their teacher is that he has a voice. They've had half a dozen lectures from him—he delivered them in Washington to a recording machine and sent the records to Michigan to be played in the classroom.

Boutwell checks up on their class work by remote control, too. The class is writing continuity for the camp musical program, broadcast into Washington at 2:30 p. m. Saturdays, 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. Sundays. The teacher listens in and corrects faults by mail.

One lecture topic was "visualization," but Boutwell won't know until next week how it went over. He's going out to the camp then and continue the teaching in person.

J. R. Dille, wage-hour manager in Seattle, Wash., has been assigned to study wage and hour law enforcement in Alaska. He wil confer with Gov. Ernest Gruening, and with business and labor leaders.

The Gallup Poll

Willkie's Business Record Found Political Asset in Survey Analyzing Popularity

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 16.—To shed light on the meteoric rise of Wendell Willkie in national popularity, the American Institute has just completed a survey in which voters in all sections of the country and in all income levels were asked whether they thought Willkie would make a good President. Both those who thought he would and those who thought he would not were asked why they felt so.

DR. GALLUP

Their reasons are particularly revealing because they show that the feeling against big business which was current five or six years ago has been substantially altered. In fact, over half of those voters who think Willkie would make a good President say it is because "he has been a successful businessman and a good executive."

Not a Politician

Moreover, even among those voters who oppose him, the chief reason cited is "lack of experience in politics" rather than his connections with big business and Wall Street.

In an Institute survey conducted after the Republican convention but before the Democratic convention, Willkie ran a close race in a "trial heat" against President Roosevelt. The results, as reported last week, showed 53 per cent of voters polled favoring Roosevelt, 47 per cent favoring Willkie.

This represented a sharp rise in Willkie's popularity, for in an earlier "trial heat," conducted about two weeks before the Republican convention nominated Willkie, Roosevelt polled 63 per cent, Willkie only 37 per cent.

Willkie's phenomenal rise in popularity took place in the short space of three months. In March, when the Institute asked Republican voters in a survey what candidate they wanted for President, less than 1 per cent named Willkie. Just before the opening of the Republican convention, the Willkie percentage had reached 29.

A Growing Respect

In the first few days of the convention, before the nomination was actually made, Willkie topped all other Republican candidates in popularity with the rank and file of G. O. P. voters, polling 44 per cent in a Nation-wide survey, against 29 per cent for Thomas E. Dewey and 13 per cent for Senator Robert A. Taft.

Such a rise furnishes striking evidence of a growing respect throughout the country for practical businessmen as national leaders.

Oddly enough, the statement made by several Democratic leaders the day after Willkie's nomination suggesting "foreign influence" in his political thinking was nowhere reflected in the poll. Only a tiny fraction of 1 per cent said they feared possible Fascist leanings in the Republican candidate.

Two Points of Appeal

Equally interesting is the fact that only a handful of voters said they were for Willkie because he might be able, through his business experience, to rearm the country faster than the New Dealers.

Willkie's two chief points of popular appeal, as analyzed in the thousands of comments gathered by the survey, are his business ability and his personality.

Among those Democrats who think he would make a good President, nearly two-thirds cite his business record, while among Republicans about half name his business achievement and the rest his personality or other factors.

Those who oppose him cite, in about equal proportions, his "political inexperience" and his connections with Wall Street and the utility industry. Some of the typical comments of this type are:

"He's too close to J. P. Morgan and the rest of the bankers," "He's not familiar with the problems of the laboring man," "He'll be the stooge of Wall Street."

On the other hand, people who favor Willkie take the view expressed by a chemical engineer, a former Roosevelt voter: "Willkie's a business man, not a politician. I'm fed up with politicians."

Others express the view that "Willkie is a self-made man, has sound judgment, good sense, and gets along with people."

BankheadBlast At Stock Orgy Pleases Willkie

Nominee Also Joins In Praise of Bank Deposit Insurance

By the Associated Press

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 16. Wendell L. Willkie today invited Herbert Hoover to visit him here.

Asked for comment on the keynote address of Speaker Bankhead at the Democratic Convention in Chicago, Willkie dictated a statement to his press conference that he agreed with Bankhead's condemnation "of the speculative orgies of the nineteen-twenties."

"I always have thought that such speculation was to be condemned, whether it was in the securities or utility companies, vending machine companies or took the form of gambling in foreign exchange, such as German marks.

Gives Vandenberg Credit

"I am very proud that I had absolutely nothing to do with that phase of American economic life."

There were several questions regarding his references to vending machine companies and gambling in foreign marks, but Willkie declined to elaborate.

The nominee said he was glad to hear Bankhead commend enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act. "My very good friend Senator Arthur E. Vandenberg was chiefly responsible for securing passage of that act," he added.

Willkie gave his oral message for Hoover to Paul C. Smith, an editor of the San Francisco Chronicle. Smith, who attended the nominee's press conference, said Hoover was "100 per cent for Willkie and will campaign or do anything else he can to help him."

Gov. George Wilson, of Iowa, called Willkie to advise that he would come to Colorado Springs tomorrow.

To Confer With Dailey

Willkie said he would talk tomorrow with Joseph L. Dailey, of Albuquerque, N. Mex., whom he described as "a leading Democrat" and an assistant to Rexford G. Tugwell while the latter was a New Deal official.

Dailey is a son of Frank G. Dailey, of Indiana, a candidate for Governor of that State in 1928. The elder Dailey, Willkie said, once advised him to "keep out of politics and go into law."

Willkie said he would have lunch Friday at the Denver stock yards and would discuss with cattlemen and sheep growers the agricultural sections of his forthcoming acceptance address at Elwood, Ind.

Representative Halleck (Republican), of Indiana, will be in charge of arrangements for the Elwood talk, Willkie announced.

U. S. Allots $1,810,000 For Va. Parkway Work

Richmond, Va., July 16 (AP).—Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley has been advised of the approval by the Secretary of the Interior of a $1,810,000 program of construction on the Blue Ridge Parkway in Virginia, involving the grading of approximately 23 miles of the drive.

Foreign Policy Plank Placates Isolationists

war," he said.

Senator McCarran, of Nevada, called the plank "pretty emphatic," and said it was satisfactory to him.

McCarran told newsmen that an antithird term plank was not suggested in the subcommittee deliberations.

[It was reported reliably, the United Press said, that the foreign policy plank provided:

[1. No United States Army, Navy or air forces will be sent to fight on foreign lands across the seas.

[2. The United States will defend the Monroe Doctrine.

[3. We are sympathetic toward democracies fighting for their lives and will aid them within the law and in such a manner as not to interfere with out own national defense.

[4. The Democratic Party stands four-square behind a strong program for the defense of America.

[Isolationists won another victory, it was said, in the committee's failure to include a plank on conscription of armed forces.—Editor's note.]

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said the farm plank satisfied him. He added that Senators Bankhead, of Alabama, and Hatch, of New Mexico, "deserved lots of credit" for the work done on that plank.

Pledged to secrecy, the drafters dodged questions as to details but some of them said the farm plank was largely a commendation of what the Roosevelt Administration had done in the agricultural field in the last seven years. The social security plank, they said, called for extension of the present system benefits without stating specifically what new groups would be brought under the program.

Warns on "Pussy-footing"

Despite the subcommittee harmony on the subject, there still was plenty of possibility that a row would develop within the full resolutions committee or even on the convention floor itself. Senator Pepper, of Florida, who was left off the drafting group, has served notice that if the platform "pussy-footed" on aid to Great Britain, the issue would be taken before the convention where, he predicted, the platform would be "repudiated." The Florida man said the plank should call for "all aid short of war" to Britain.

Although Senator McCarran had told newsmen earlier in the day an attempt might be made to write into the platform a plank opposing third-terms for Presidents, Senators Harrison, of Mississippi, and Neely, of West Virginia, corroborated his subsequent statement that the subject was not mentioned during the morning session.

There were some reports that part of the strategy behind the anti-third term proposal was to offer it to the platform committee with full expectation that it would be rejected and then take a minority report on the matter to the convention floor as a vehicle for speeches against third-terms.

200 Methodists Greet New Pastor

More than 200 members of the Brookland Methodist Church last night packed the assembly hall at 1305 Lawrence street northeast to formally greet Dr. S. Paul Schilling, new pastor, and Mrs. Schilling.

Frank L. Hess, master of ceremonies and Sunday school superintendent, welcomed the guests.

Responding, Dr. Schilling thanked the congregation and said he hoped he would be able to give a well-rounded and productive ministry.

Dr. Schilling, who became pastor several weeks ago, and Mrs. Schilling received with Mrs. William Leonard, president of the Women's Guild, sponsors of the function; Marvin McLean, Mrs. Dare C. Hall, Mrs. Coke Carlton and Hess.

Text of Barkley Speech, Laying Unpreparedness to G. O. P.

Put Partisan Rancor Aside, Senator Urges

No Room for Personal Aggrandizement Either, Conclave Told

By the United Press

Chicago, July 16.—The text of Permanent Chairman Alben W. Barkley's address to the Democratic Convention follows:

To the National Committee which recommended and to this convention which has chosen me as permanent chairman, I express my profound appreciation.

I shall endeavor to preside over your deliberations with promptness and fairness to the end that you may consummate your task in dignity and good order.

We assemble here in circumstances so uncommon, in the midst of world disorders so unprecedented and surrounded by domestic obligations so compulsive as to charge us with the duty of preparing our Nation to meet consequences which will project themselves indefinitely into the unpredictable future.

The Democratic Party has faced one crisis after another during its long and glorious history.

It has been tested in the crucible of faith and achievement. It has never faltered in its devotion to the higher interests of the people of America. It will not falter now.

But we do not come together in any vainglorious spirit prompted by the mere desire for a partisan or personal victory. Unless by our record in the past and our concept of duty for the future we are equipped for the tasks of statesmanship, we have no claim on the American people for further preferment.

Vehicle for Fixation Of Responsibility

The record we have made is written in the history of the Republic. While we lay claim to perfection and fulminate no pretensions that this record contains no errors, nevertheless we contemplate with pride the great tasks we have undertaken and accomplished in behalf of democracy and those who believe in it and strive to advance it.

Let us be equally unequivocal in the program we shall here announce, so that the American people and the world will know what we think and what we proposed to do.

The chief, if not the only reason, for the existence of political parties is to afford a vehicle for the molding and expression of public opinion and for the fixation of responsibility in the conduct of the public business.

There have been occasions when political organizations were afraid to speak plainly or intelligently on problems of transcendent importance to this Nation when language was employed not to convey but to conceal thought; when each pronouncement made a frontal attack on all others, and the whole appeared to have been written in mud by the migratory feet of a weasel. Such is the platform adopted by the Republican Party at Philadelphia three weeks ago. It is the perfect example of the uncertainties and ambiguities of men who do not know where they are going or what they will do when they arrive. The day on which it was written was described by Walter Lippmann as "Black Tuesday in Philidelphia."

Heroic Battle Of Kilowatt

Having assembled this political ragout and found it without form and void, its fabricators concluded that what it lacked and needed was color. They wanted not only color, but they wanted a variety of colors. But while they wanted color, they did not desire fast color. They desired color whose changing shades and shadows would be determined by the degree of regulation which a fearless Government saw fit to impose upon a vast empire of power hitherto uncontrolled in its exercise of dominion over the social, industrial and economic life of millions of Americans. They seemed unwilling or afraid to nominate any man who had been a Republican for more than two years. Hence, they chose a political chameleon.

The Philadelphia convention constituted the second charge of the Light Brigade, in the heroic Battle of Kilowatt.

It is not my province or my purpose on this occasion to attempt any detailed review of the history of the world or our own country during the past eight years. Much of that history has been spread before our eyes with such kaleidoscopic rapidity as to render the succession of events a little vague to all but the meticulous historian. It is no exaggeration to assert that no similar period in our history has been so crowded with engrossing spectacularity or fraught with such consequences to our institutions or our methods of life.

Our efforts here at home have not been inspired by the punitive desire to set group against group or to array section against section. We inherited chaos eight years ago. We inherited fear, which was almost universal. We inherited lack of confidence, not only in private enterprise, but in our public institutions. The American people had been led to the brink of a precipice by the fallacies of a smug and blind regime, which found itself impotent to draw back or to avert the disaster which it had contrived.

This impotence had wrought its devastation, not only in the field of business and industry but had set a blight on all financial activities. Banks and confidence in them collapsed. Wheels of industry were motionless. The market places for both money and commodities were bereft of constructive or profitable activities. Agriculture drooped and died from a dry rot inflicted by legislative and administrative incompetence, while the feet of 15,000,000 American laborers wandered in vagrant anxiety over the question of tomorrow's food and shelter.

Status Quo Became The Law of Our Being

Homes of firesides, millions of them, which must be the sanctuary of the true spirit of America, were on the verge of permanent loss through the cry of the auctioneer.

Abuses of the financial, economic and social realms of our existence had grown so chronic that the Nation despaired of any constructive or effective remedy against them. The status quo became the law of our being, and the Government imitated that backward-flying bird which never knows where it is going but can only see where it has been.

American commerce with the world, which in every great industrial nation has been and must be a substantial portion of the yardstick of its prosperity, had fled from the seas and the marts of trade.

Encouraged by our own example of folly, insurmountable barriers had been erected by nation against nation through the effort of provincial minds to set metes and bounds to the genius and initiative of man. In our own hemisphere, peopled by the children of those who had fought for the creation of a new ideal of democratic thought and conduct, suspicion and fear, political and economic, retarded the efforts to consummate a solidarity essential to the preservation and protection of the common interests of all the Americas.

The effort of the past seven years on the part of our Government has been devoted to the task of remolding the faith of our people in their own brand of democracy.

We have heard much from complacent throats in recent years about free enterprise.

Republican Candidate Protested Utility Act

The spokesmen of the Philadelphia assemblage invoked the spirits of the departed in behalf of free enterprise, and former President Hoover began his diatribe by proclaiming it the duty of his party to save America for free men. He, of all men, ought to cry for the return of freedom, because he and his regime fastened more shackles on the physical, economic and spiritual aspirations of the American people than any other group who ever mismanaged the affairs of this Republic.

What freedom is it that we have destroyed, and, by the same token, what freedom is it that the platform and nominees of the Philadelphia convention will restore?

Is it the freedom to juggle and manipulate and determine the value of the securities of American corporations in which millions of our people have invested their savings?

Do they propose to destroy the freedom we have guaranteed to labor in the United States to sit across a table from its employer on terms of equality and bargain collectively over wages, hours and working conditions?

Do they propose to restore the uncontrolled freedom of some employers to exploit employes by long hours and low wages?

Do they propose to remove from agriculture the freedom to cooperate within itself and with the Government of the United States in securing a larger portion of the national income for the service they render to society?

Do they propose to return the American farmers to the income of 1932 instead of twice that income which he has received under the New Deal?

Mr. Hoover, who constitutes the remaining living symbol of Republican wisdom, in his speech at the convention, said the Republican Party was the first to bring relief to the American farmer. What he no doubt meant to say was that Republican leadership was the first to bring the need for relief to the American farmer.

What freedom have we destroyed that they propose to restore?

Will they restore the freedom of vast holding companies, drawing their substance from local utilities and their consumers to continue their depredations upon the public to prevent which the Utility Holding Company Act was passed over the vehement protest of the present Republican candidate for President.

In truth, the reason for the shifting of his political robes was the enactment of this legislation, plus the completion and development of a great natural resource in the Tennessee Valley, begun during the first World War in the Administration of Woodrow Wilson.

Will they destroy or undermine the laws we have enacted for the aged and unemployed?

Will they restore the freedom as well as the compulsion of old age to descend to the grave in penury and want?

Will they restore the freedom as well as the compulsion of unemployed men to walk the streets in search of work or take their places in bread lines where they stood in 1932?

Just a Beginning In Social Security

We have made but a beginning in this great field of social security. It is my opinion that we must strengthen and simplify the law not only to provide greater assistance but also to provide greater uniformity in the benefits accruing to those entitled to them under the social security law. There ought to be greater uniformity throughout the Nation in the provisions for old-age pensions; and I am convinced that this uniformity can be secured only when the Federal Government assumes greater responsibility for the administration of the benefits which the law accords.

What is freedom which we have driven out and which they will entice back to this land of the free?

Is it the freedom now possessed by American youth to share the physical, moral and intellectual training which the New Deal is helping them to secure under conditions compatible with both pride and responsibility?

Do the Philadelphia guarantors of a return of freedom propose to abolish the Civilian Conservation Corps or the National Youth Administration?

The task which lay at our feet seven years ago was a task of restoration. It has not been completed. But the ascent from the depths of the valley has been constant and is still in progress.

Mr. Hoover, in his Philadelphia exegesis, announced that the New Deal had stabilized unemployment. Having himself multiplied it beyond all previous calculations even he ought to welcome some degree of stabilization.

Hoover Inaugurated Succession of Deficits

During this pretended eclipse of free enterprise in America the national income has increased from 38 billions to 71 billions of dollars per annum. The last Republican Administration had reduced it from 80 billions to 38 billions and had inaugurated that succession of annual deficits which they now proclaim as the peculiar patent of the Roosevelt Administration.

The fundamental difference between the two situations is that Roosevelt deficits have been reflected in vast improvements and additions to the values of property and life in every community in the United States while there cannot be found in any part of the Nation any evidence of value or increased enjoyment of life that previous deficit spending had accomplished.

In this same period during which they believe freedom has fled from our shores and the credit of the Government has been jeopardized, the price of Government bonds on the markets of the Nation and the world rose from 80 cents on the dollar to nearly $1.20, notwithstanding a substantial decrease in the rate of interest which these obligations bear.

During this same period the total indebtedness of the American people has decreased by more than 10 billion dollars, which does not indicate that they are headed toward predicted bankruptcy.

These improvements, these aids to industry and to labor and the general restoration of the morale of our people have cost money. We do not deny that. They have made it necessary for us to borrow money and levy taxes which under normal conditions would have been unnecessary and undesirable.

Measures to Restore Faith in Government

But the American people are not and will not be frightened into panic when they realize that during the past seven years, while the debt of the National Government has increased by 22 billion dollars, their total other public and private debts have decreased by more than 30 billion dollars, and that during this same seven-year period their aggregate income has increased four times as much as has the indebtedness of the Federal Government.

All this has been done in order to restore the faith of the American people in their Government and to emphasize the fact that our Government is not an austere, unapproachable, inanimate thing off yonder in Washington, taking no account of or interest in the affairs of those who support it. All this has been done to demonstrate that the processes of democracy can be made to respond to the needs of men and women. It has been done in order to prove that under our Constitution and without changing or undermining our form of Government, it can be made an instrument of service under the stress of a great crisis.

It can not be denied that democracy was in sore need of this proof of its efficacy and its power.

Never before in our history has democracy been under attack on a wider front than during the last decade.

For a century and more prior to the World War, the races of men were moving toward the goal of freedom and self-government. Beginning with our own Revolution and a little later with the French Revolution, the theory of democratic institutions found acceptance in all parts of the world. During this century, most of South America established its freedom from Spain and other foreign dominations under republican forms of government, patterned largely after our own. France drove the last Bonaparte from the throne and established the French Republic. China proclaimed a republic throughout her vast territory, and among the far-flung elements of the British Empire, a commonwealth of nations emerged, in which the people strengthened their local institutions and extended their privileges of independent action.

Autocracy Rears Its Ugly Head

In the smaller nations of Europe, even those which clung to the traditions of monarchy, the people increased their power over and participation in their governments.

In Russia the Czar and all that he represented were unhorsed in what was supposed to be a revolution of the people. In Germany, the Kaiser abdicated and fled his country following the establishment of a republic. In England the House of Lords was shorn of some of its ancient prerogatives. In Italy, the King became a puppet, and in South Africa the principles of self-government became an established fact following the Boer War.

Everywhere it seemed that the doctrine proclaimed by Thomas Jefferson that all governments derived their just powers from the consent to the governed was on the march and would at length cover the earth like the waters cover the sea.

But in the past decade or two this process seems to have gone in reverse. Whether as the result of some evil spirit loosed by the agonies of the World War, or in consequence of the impotence of existing regimes to understand or respond to the needs of the people, we need not here undertake to determine. But we do know that autocracy rears its ugly face in larger portions of the world today than at any time since the formation of the American Republic, and we do know that we are confronted with the alternative of defending and preserving our democratic institutions as we have built them and enjoyed them, or seeing them confounded by the convergence of antagonistic ideologies in a world dedicated not to the proposition that all men are created equal but that all men are created to feed the maw of a grasping, greedy, totalitarian state.

This Does Not Mean That We Desire War

In the midst of these alternatives there is but one choice that the American people can make with honor to themselves and fidelity to the traditions and principles for which the Nation was created and to which it is dedicated.

That choice is to fight against those who would assault our territory, our independence, our ideals, or our vital interests, or anything which we are committed or pledged to defend and preserve, whether that assault is launched from a foreign source or is instigated by disloyal or subversive influence within our own borders.

We are charged with the responsibility of determining for ourselves whether this democracy which we have instituted and developed is, first, worth preserving; and, second, whether we have the courage, the fortitude and the intelligence to exert the effort and make the sacrifice essential to its preservation. We must determine whether the restoration of confidence in the American system for which we have labored these last eight years, after all, was worth the effort, and whether we are ready to announce to all the world that, not only the United States but the entire Western Hemisphere has been dedicated as a sanctuary for free men, and that any effort from any outside source to encroach upon it territorially, politically, or by any other form of insidious penetration will be met by the total impact of all our resources of men, money, and material, until the encroachment and those who undertake it shall have been broken and driven back.

This does mean that we desire war. It does not mean that we do not cherish peace and good will among all nations and all races. It does not mean that we propose to become involved in the military conflicts among foreign nations. It does not mean that we propose or intend to send the armed forces of this Nation to the battlefields of Europe or Asia for the purpose of determining military superiority among the nations involved.

Brilliant Piece Of Fiction

But it does mean that we propose to see that at least one continent on this earth shall be kept free for the exercise of the individual and collective rights and privileges of free men. It means that we propose to hold fast to the doctrine that the state is created for the service of the people and not that the people are created for the exploitation of the state. For this task we must be prepared, morally, spiritually, physically, mechanically, economically.

In the inept conglomeration, called the Republican platform, adopted at Philadelphia, we find the following brilliant piece of fiction: "The Republican Party stands for Americanism, preparedness and peace. We accordingly fasten upon the New Deal full responsibilwity for our unpreparedness and for the consequent danger of involvement in war."

No responsible political party ever promulgated a more deceitful alibi in all the history of political parties in the United States.

Let us take a look at the record. I do not relish the necessity to indulge in partisan dispute over the question of preparedness. It ought not to be a partisan question. But, in view of the fact that the Republican platform seeks to make it a partisan question, I am not afraid to discuss it on that basis.

Following the World War, the nations sincerely sought peace and disarmament.

The United States, in the early days of the Harding Administration, called the Washington Disarmament Conference. This conference was hailed as a great step toward lifting the burden of armaments from the people of the nations involved. War vessels were sunk. Blue prints were torn to pieces; and ships under construction were ordered scrapped. But following this conference it turned out that under the administrations of Republican Presidents, our naval building program did not approximate the ratio allowed by the agreement entered into. Our actual ratio began to fall below that which the treaty allowed us to maintain. While other nations built, we took a nose dive in the ratio of our naval establishment.

Hope for World Peace Excuse for Reductions

Then came the so-called "Nine Power Pact" entered into by nine nations during the control of our Government by the Republican Party, under which the construction and maintenance of an adequate Army and Navy were still further retarded.

Then came the so-called "Briand-Kellogg Pact," by which nearly all of the nations of the world agreed to renounce war as an instrument of national policy.

This hope for world peace was made the excuse for further reductions in appropriations and in construction for our national defense.

I do not decry these efforts for world peace. The American people, in common with most of the peoples of the world, sincerely hoped and prayed that war would not again drench the earth in human blood.

But it cannot be claimed by those who were then in power in this nation that anything substantial was done to build up or even maintain the minimum requirements of our national defense equipment.

In his address at the Philadelphia convention former President Hoover made the statement that in the six years preceeding the Roosevelt Administration, the Nation had expended $680,000,000 on preparedness, but that in 1934 Roosevelt had drastically reduced expenditures for our defense to $550,000,000, reducing the appropriation for the air corps by $20,000,000; that President Roosevelt had reduced by 50 per cent the commissions issued the graduates of the Naval Academy; that the National Guard had been reduced in its appropriations and equipment; that the Roosevelt Administration had reduced the Regular Army to the point of having only 75,000 fully equipped men in the United States Army.

If Mr. Hoover had made these misstatements of facts in the heat of debate, we might excuse him, but in these delicate and unsteady hours of our Nation's history the people have a right to the truth from one who has been honored with the highest office within their power to bestow.

Mr. Hoover did not make these misstatements in the heat of debate. He made them deliberately in the quiet, sequestered drawing room where he composed his prepared address. But when he made these statements he knew that it was he who, in his budget message to Congress for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, recommended the reductions to which he refers and they were made before he retired from the Presidency and before Franklin D. Roosevelt assumed that office on March 4, 1933.

Instead of reducing the equipment for the National Guard and the Regular Army, which had been brought about under Mr. Hoover, President Roosevelt recommended and secured increased appropriations not only to restore the decreases Mr. Hoover had brought about but to increase these branches of the armed services beyond the figures attained at any time during the previous Administration.

Instead of having only 75,000, we have 241,000 equipped soldiers in the United States Army, and the present Congress, on the recommendation and under the leadership of the President, has authorized an increase to 375,000 men and will authorize further increases as fully and as rapidly as may be required.

In view of the abortive effort of the Republican convention to fasten on the New Deal the responsibility for any lack of adequate preparedness that may now exist and to elude any portion of that responsibility, let us make some comparisons.

Republicans Sorely Neglected Defense

During the seven years since 1933 our Government has expended $1,300,000,000 more on the Army than was expended during the previous seven years.

In these same seven years the United States has expended $1,500,000,000 more on the Navy than was expended during the previous seven years.

These expenditures were recommended and appropriated under President Roosevelt, and they were made necessary largely because Republican Administrations had sorely neglected both arms of our national defense.

During the last year of Woodrow Wilson's Administration, when Franklin D. Roosevelt was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, appropriations for the Navy amounted to $960,000,000. In the first year of the Harding administration they were reduced to $485,000,000. During the 12 years of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover they continued to decline until the fiscal year of 1934, when they reached the insignificant sum of $266,000,000, which was the last naval appropriation enacted as Mr. Hoover was about to retire from office.

During those 12 years not a single battleship was laid down for construction, and only 20 other types of combatant vessels, such as cruisers, submarines and gunboats, were constructed.

During the past four years we have completed 115 combatant naval vessels. We have under construction now 238 additional vessels, consisting of 10 battleships, five aircraft carriers, four heavy cruisers, 17 light cruisers, 61 destroyers and 41 submarines.

In addition to those vessels now under construction we have provided for the construction of enough naval warcraft to give us the largest navy in the world, sufficiently strong to protect our interests in both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans against any aggressor from any source in any part of this world.

What else does the record reveal?

When the Naval appropriations bill for the fiscal year 1939 was passed in the Senate, a majority of Republican Senators, including the Republican candidate for Vice President, Senator McNary, voted against it.

When, in the spring of 1939, there came before the Senate the bill increasing the number of Army airplanes from 5,500 to 6,000, a majority of Republican Senators, including their present candidate for Vice President, voted against it.

When in the Senate, the naval appropriations bill for the fiscal year 1940 was adopted, nearly half the Republican members voted against it.

When, in May, 1939, the naval appropriation bill carrying a billion dollars for the Navy was before the House of Representatives, of the 58 votes cast against it, 54 were Republicans.

When the House of Representatives was considering the Army appropriation bill for 1940, four amendments were offered by Republicans to reduce the sums for signal service, ordnance and airplanes. Of the 150 members voting for these reductions 145 were Republican. Only eight Republicans voted against the reductions.

In the United States Senate one of the Republican candidates for President, Mr. Taft, urged an amendment reducing appropriations for the Army and Navy by 25 per cent; and so far as I have been able to learn, the man who nosed him out for the Republican nomination, Mr. Wendell L. Willkie, uttered no warning or advice to his newly made Republican brethren on the subject of national defense. He was probably too busy talking about balancing the budget and trying to prevent the efforts of the Securities and Exchange Commission to unscramble his billion-dollar utility holding omelet, and endeavoring to thwart the objectives of the great Tennessee Valley project which was begun 22 years ago as a part of our national defense program.

And as late as last Thursday in the House of Representatives, when, at the urgent request and recommendation of William R. Knudsen and Edward Stettinius, members of the Advisory Committee on National Defense, and also at the urgent solicitation of Mr. Dunn, a member of the engineering firm which Mr. Willkie consulted in his fight against the Tennessee Valley Authority, an effort was made to provide for the construction of an additional dam for the purpose of inaugurating the speedy manufacture of necessary aluminum for the construction of airplanes, the effort was blocked by Republican members of the House of Representatives.

In spite of these unfortunate records made by those whom the people have trusted, I am convinced that the vast majority of Republican voters of the Nation are in full agreement with the President and those who are working with him on his defense program and on his foreign policy.

But what of our involvement in war?

No Greater Sacrifices

The Republican platform mechanics have sought to conceal their own past attitude and record by proclaiming themselves as simon-pure, 100 per cent, blown-in-the-bottle preservers of peace for the American people.

No man who ever occupied the Presidency of the United States ever strove more valiantly to avert the present war in Europe before its outbreak than did Mr. Roosevelt. No man ever condemned in more unmeasured terms the wicked determination to resort to the brutal force of arms in conquering peaceful and friendly nations, or in settling any legitimate controversies among the nations of Europe.

No political party or Administration in the history of this or any other nation ever made greater sacrifices to avoid involvement in war than have been made by the Democratic Party and its present Administration.

For more than a century we, as a Nation, have insisted on the freedom of the seas. We have insisted that our flag and every flag had the right to sail the seas in time of war, subject to certain rights of search and seizure. We have insisted on the right of Americans to trade and travel under an international law that had been recognized for centuries. It was our insistence on the observance of these rights that finally drew us into the World War in 1917.

But in order to avoid the possibility or likelihood of our involvement in this war through incidents incapable of being foreseen we have in the neutrality law, recommended by the President and enacted by the Democratic Congress over the protest of the Republicans, prohibited American ships to sail in belligerent or dangerous waters or American citizens to travel there; and we have prohibited even the granting of credit to belligerent nations and required them to pay cash for what they buy and to transport it in their own or other foreign vessels.

If the Republicans in Congress had been successful in defeating this legislation, we might already be involved in the war which they pretend so much to fear.

But, notwithstanding the puny efforts of our antagonists to pitch this campaign on the low level of narrow partisanship, in the task that lies ahead of us there is no room for partisan rancor or personal aggrandizement.

It serves no purpose now to blame one man or group for not knowing in advance what the world was coming to. But we, with all the world, have learned our bitter lesson. The events of recent years have wrought changes in our thoughts and attitude which may be irrevocable. New obligations fasten themselves upon us as a Nation and as a member of the sisterhood of nations.

In 1823, James Monroe proclaimed the doctrine which bears his name. Under that doctrine any effort on the part of any foreign nation to gain a foothold in America was to be regarded as an unfriendly act and inimical to our safety.

That doctrine is even more vital today than when it was uttered 117 years ago. We have set the Americas apart as a proving ground for a new type of liberty and self-government in the world. We have thus far defended, preserved and extended it. But we cannot assume that wishing alone will continue to make it so. We cannot assume that those who have no respect for democratic institutions elsewhere will respect them in America. They respect only those whom they fear or whom they know to be able to repel their assaults.

In these days of peril and uncertainty, we invoke the spirit of a united America.

We shall expect to make sacrifices. We shall expect to forego some luxuries and conveniences. Already the impact of world conditions has colored our thoughts and remolded some of our conceptions and methods of life. But it has not lessened our resolution. It has not made us afraid. It has not cowed the spirit which discovered, populated, developed and civilized this America of ours. It has but served to strengthen our determination and fortify our resistance.

In the midst of these threats we call on our people for unity. The relationship between a people and their Government is not a one-way thoroughfare. The obligations are reciprocal. They call for that concert of soul and purpose which knows no distinction of race, origin, color or religion.

We know that Jew and Gentile, Catholic and Protestant, white and colored, rich and poor, native-born and foreign-born will rise in all their might and holy zeal to guard these portals against the fate which has wrecked other peoples and other civilizations.

To this high commitment we pledge ourselves and all that we shall here undertake.

In its consummation we invoke the guidance of God, who, we believe, still sits upon his throne, still rules in earth and heaven and still holds in the hollow of his hand the destiny of nations and of men.

Not Seeking Renomination, Roosevelt Says

Movement to Draft Him Follows Notice To Convention

gan pumping up every lag in enthusiasm.

Much of the "We Want—We Want" noise was injected by Edward J. Hart, of New Jersey, who carried around the hall a portable loud speaker into which Hart and other delegates shouted.

As soon as Barkley finished speaking, Gov. Maybank of South Carolina grabbed his State mike, which was turned on by prearrangement, and began shouting "Mr. Chairman—We want Roosevelt." Maybank had a draft resolution to present but in the confusion was unable to do so.

Alaska delegates, right next to South Carolina, shouted "We want Farley."

Lasts 53 Minutes

Before the convention recessed for the night at 12:05 a. m., after 53 minutes of continuous Roosevelt demonstration, Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, stepped to the rostrum.

Byrnes, who will be the Roosevelt floor manager, told delegates that "tomorrow night you can finish the job you came here for—drafting Franklin D. Roosevelt."

The phrases that set off the first demonstration were not in Barkley's advance text but were uttered by him extemporaneously.

Added a Name

The text had read:

"The effort of the past seven years on the part of our Government has been devoted to the task of remoiding the faith of our people in their own brand of democracy—"

Barkley added:

"—under the leadership of one of the world's outstanding Democrats, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Then the outburst came. And for 25 minutes the din continued while Barkley tried vainly to halt it so he could continue his address and deliver the President's word.

Then the outburst came.

Word that the President would tell the world tonight was flashed to this thereby transformed convention from the President's White House press canference.

Antithird term Democrats were threatening a floor demonstration in a show of resistance designed to influence his choice. Postmaster General Farley was beseeching Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, to place Farley's own name in nomination in another third-term rebuff.

But in room 308 of the Blackstone Hotel, this convention's smoke-filled room, Senator Barkley and Secretary of Commerce Hopkins were guarding the message that spells the fate of this convention and more.

Senator Barkley was in conference with Secretary Hopkins for more than an hour before tonight's sessions.

Hopkins was asked whether the news from Washington—the momentous statement of Roosevelt's attitude that was to be revealed by Barkley—had in any way changed his plans.

"Not any, brother," said Hopkins.

"Do you still expect the President to be nominated on the first ballot?"

"Yes."

"Who is going to place him in nomination?"

"I have nothing to say on that."

Overtaken by reporters as he entered Hopkins' hotel suite, Barkley said:

"After my speech there will be a minute-and-a-half or two-minute statement.

It Will Be Definite

"This will be a definite statement of the President's attitude toward the convention."

This was all the news reporters could squeeze out of the usually voluble Barkley, but he laughingly remarked that there would be no advance copies.

The joke was on reporters, who had searched through the official "advance" on his speech in vain for a clew.

Postmaster General Farley himself was taken by surprise by the move. Farley was holding a press conference of his own when the President in Washington advised newsmen there to listen in on the radio tonight for an answer to their question on why he had delayed disclosure of his position.

At precisely the same moment the President was speaking in Washington, Farley was dodging a question on his Hyde Park "secret" with the President.

Asked what the President would do, Farley said: "What do you think."

Senator Barkley spoke briefly with reporters again as he left the Barkley suite at 6:30 p. m.

He disclosed that he had been in telephonic conversation with the White House "during formulation" of the President's message. He declined to say whether the language of the message was the President's or his own.

All Is Hunky-Dory

Barkley turned aside a barrage of questions as he entered the elevator with the remark that "everything is hunky-dory and that's all there is to say now."

He smilingly declined a reporter's offer to carry the manila envelope containing copies of the President's message. When several newspapermen expressed the intention to "stick with" him until he left for the convention hall, the usually affable majority leader said wearily, "I think you ought to let me lead a normal life."

Callers at the Hopkins headquarters during the conference with Barkley included Edward Flynn, Democratic leader of the Bronx, and Governor Lehman, of New York.

Asked whether he "would make the nominating speech," Lehman said, "I don't expect to." He was asked if that meant there would be a nominating speech for President Roosevelt.

"I can't say," he answered. "I don't know anything about that."

Senator Barkley's speech leading up to the exciting climax coupled a clarion acceptance of the Republican challenge with a "call on our people for unity." Barkley lauded the defense and foreign affairs record of "Franklin D. Roosevelt."

He said the American people must expect to make sacrifices in this time of world peril, foregoing some luxuries and conveniences.

Calls for Total Defense

Lashing at "grasping, greedy, totalitarian states," he declared America's one choice is to fight against any assault on its territory, its independence, ideals, vital interests "or anything which we are committed or pledged to defend and preserve."

An effort from any "outside source" to encroach on the Western Hemisphere territorially, politically or "by any other form of insidious penetration," he said would be met by the total impact of American resources, men, money and material.

Barkley said this did not mean that this Government proposes to become involved in military conflicts abroad or to send armed forces to Europe or Asia. But he said "it does mean that at least one continent on this earth shall be kept free for the exercise of the individual and collective rights and privileges of free men."

His speech highlighted the convention's first frontal attack on the Republican Party, its platform, its candidate, Wendell L. Willkie, and the last Republican President, Herbert Hoover.

The Republican platform he called an "inept conglomeration," which he said was "written in mud by the migratory feet of a weasel."

Repeatedly he asked, until the words became a refrain: "What freedom have we destroyed that they propose to restore?"

He chided Republicans for having nominated a former Democrat, and attacked Willkie's former power connections.

"The Philadelphia convention," he said, "constituted the second charge of the Light Brigade, in the heroic battle of Kilowatt."

The bulk of Barkley's speech was an answer to former President Hoover's attack on the New Deal record, delivered in Philadelphia.

He called the Hoover speech a "diatribe" delivered by "the remaining living symbol of Republican wisdom."

He asked by what right Hoover proposed Republicans "save America for free men," declaring the former President's regime had "fastened more shackles on the physical, economic and spiritual aspirations of America" than any other group.

Denies Relief Claims

He denied Republicans were the first to bring relief to the farmers or employed, assailed the Republican legislative record on preparedness measures, and charged Republicans with weakening American defenses from the time of the Washington Disarmament Conference until Roosevelt's inauguration in 1933.

The morning session of the convention was in strange contrast to tonight's packed attendance. When Speaker Bankhead tapped the morning gavel at 12:05 p. m., spectator seats were only about one quarter filled and whole reserved box sections were empty.

Mrs. Thomas McAllister, director of the women's division, then summarized women's gains in the Democratic Party and drew applause in defense of the President's foreign course. "In our President," she told the convention, "we recognize a power of leadership that is worldwide."

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, colored Representative of the Second Illinois District, next roused delegates by proclaiming the safety of the colored vote for the Democrats.

The morning session recessed at 1:12 p. m., leaving delegates free to sit around hotel lobbies all afternoon in seemingly endless debate on the President's plans, at long last resolved tonight.

Women Win 50-50 Representation on Platform Committee

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, July 16.—Democratic women scored an important victory tonight when the natiinal convention granted them a 50-50 representation on the platform committee.

In her plea for the recognition, Mrs. Mary T. Norton declared her sex had served the party well for 20 years and that during the present emergency they would be asked to accept additional responsibilities and make sacrifices.

"It is fitting that Democrats be the first to give women this voice in party deliberations," she said.

Earlier today, while masculine delegates sulked in their rooms or stood in lobbies whispering about "Roosevelt's plans," women Democrats today picked their candidate and began his campaign build-up with as much confidence as if they were in direct communication with the White House.

"We are about to nominate a man to serve for a third term," Secretary of Labor Perkins told an applauding audience at an early morning breakfast.

"This is no cheap decision we are making," she declared. "One breaks tradition only for a good and sufficient reason. I don't believe there is a woman here who has not examined her heart—just as the President has examined his—and has found a reason.

"The New Deal," she asserted, "must be put on a permanent basis in the United States," suggesting that as the principal reason for the third-term tradition break.

"We will say to the people that we stand on the New Deal platform," she said. "This is what we have done. If you like it, vote for us."

Above all, she advised the women they must not be on the defensive about the step they are to take.

That New Deal reforms that have "improved conditions for the great mass of people in this country," she said, has been due not only to the "fact that we have had a great President."

That President has had a most remarkable woman for a wife and helper. She symbolizes for every woman in America the very real desire of women to help in the solution of political and social problems of the country."

Representative Mary T. Norton, speaking at the same meeting, forecast some opposition for her resolution that women be given equal representation on the Resolutions and Platform Committees before the convention is ended.

"But I trust the majority of those in charge of this convention will see eye to eye with the President on this matter, and he is in favor of it.

Asks for Loyalty

"He knows the loyalty and ability of Democratic women," Mrs. Norton declared. "If you feel today as I do, that America is at the crossroads, you will put aside every other consideration and go forward with the President of the United States."

Both Mrs. Norton and Secretary Perkins expressed their belief that there can be no "effective fifth column in this country" as long as "principles of the New Deal prevail."

Mrs. Norton, chairman of the important House Labor Committee, decried efforts which she said already were being made to scrap wage and hour provisions "in the name of national defense."

"This is but a new point of attack by persons who never have liked the laws, anyway—if it becomes necessary to lengthen the hours of work or to make any other sacrifice, I believe workers of this country will be the first to respond.

"However, this sacrifice should not be necessary until the great army of unemployed has found work to do."

Following up this session, the women carried their enthusiasm onto convention hall, where Mrs. Dorothy McAllister, chairman of the women's division, made an address that won applause from her sister workers—and from the few men who were able to arouse themselves from the uncertainty that slowed all their reactions to utterance from the platform.

One gathered that if the President kept his "secret" much longer, only the women would be able to keep up a convention front.

Mrs. McAllister declared that American women are trusting President Roosevelt to use his unique sense of world events and his instinct for the forces and issues which are shaping human destiny to guide our country through this terrible crisis with peace, dignity and honor."

She, too, paid tribute to the "courage, kindliness, and inspiration" of Mrs. Roosevelt and asked support of the resolution to give women 50-50 representation on convention committees.

"Women work as hard as men in a political campaign," she declared. "They cast 50 per cent of the vote. With the men of the party, we carry on the fight, side by side. We ought to have an equal voice in what we fight for. And we are satisfied that this convention, following democratic principles, will give us an equal voice."

The women's division, she said, has 109,000 trained women "who are ready to go into this campaign."

Mrs. Robert Jackson and Mrs. Harold Ickes were presented at the breakfast meeting, where three women conducted a forum on the subject of "power." Forum speakers were Mrs. Nan Wood Honeyman, former Representative; Mrs. Merrill Hudson and Mrs. Hudson H. Collier.

Roosevelt Might Accept Johnson or Wallace on Ticket

Chicago, July 16 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, were reported on high authority tonight to be acceptable to President Roosevelt as possible Democratic Vice Presidential nominees.

Word that Mr. Roosevelt would be satisfied with selection of either of these two members of his "official family" spread shortly after Johnson returned from Washington and a 10-minute private conference with the Chief Executive.

Ostensibly the reports were not linked with the third term movement or the probability that Mr. Roosevelt himself may head the ticket. Rather it was indicated that Mr. Roosevelt talked with Johnson in his capacity as head of the Democratic Party.

Ever since Estes delegations arrived here last week-end they have been picking and choosing among the men available for the place, but instead of shortening the list of possibilities this process had added to it.

Hull Opposes Move to Close Burma Route

Takes Direct Issue With Both Britain And Japan in New Note

Copyright by New York Times

Secretary of State Hull took direct issue with Great Britain and Japan yesterday over the proposed closing of the Burma route for supplies to China. He served notice through a statement issued by the State Department of opposition to the closing of the road.

Whether this means that steps may be taken to support the opposition or only that the United States was merely giving notice that she did not acquiesce in the stopping of essential traffic over the road will become known only as events unfold.

The text of yesterday's statement follows:

"The Secretary of State, in reply to inquiries by press correspondents for comment in regard to reports, at the instance of the Japanese government, the British Government would prohibit temporarily the movement of certain commodities through Burma into China over what is known as the Burma route, said that this Government has a legitimate interest in the keeping open of arteries of commerce in every part of the world and considers that action such as this, if taken, and such as was taken recently in relation to the Indo-China Railway would constitute unwarranted interpositions of obstacles to world trade."

It was on this basic position that Hull rested his case, rather than on the open door policy, the Nine Power Treaty or other international engagements. The bare fact is that closing the Burma route will shut off American products from China, and so the interests of the United States are affected.

Community Chest Officials Among Those Attending Rites at Site of New Building On Grounds of the Hebrew Home for Aged

Led by Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, founder of the Jewish Foster Home, corner stone-laying exercises for the new Jewish Social Service Agency were held yesterday afternoon at 1131 Spring road northwest.

Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Community Chest, with which the agency is affiliated, and Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies, spoke.

Earlier, at a luncheon in the Hebrew Home for the Aged nearby, civic and religious leaders were welcomed by Charles A. Goldsmith, president of the home, and talks given by Alvin W. Hall, vice president of the Community Chest and director of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, and others.

Also participating in the day's exercises were Morris Cafritz and Max Gorin, cochairman of the building committee for the new project; Joseph D. Kaufmann, Mrs. Milton W. King, Joseph A. Wilner, president of the Jewish Social Service Agency; Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, of Adas Israel Congregation; Rabbi Julius T. Loeb, retired spiritual leader of the Southeast Hebrew Congregation, and others.

Roosevelt Hails Defense Report

laid emphasis on a discussion in the section prepared by Edward R. Stettinius, jr., on the proposed expansion of the Tennessee Valley Authority to produce additional power for defense industries.

Stettinius noted that the commission had asked Congress for a $25,000,000 appropriation for enlargement of the TVA, but that its immediate consideration had been blocked by three Republican members, Representatives McLean, of New Jersey; Taber, of New York, and Dirksen, of Illinois.

He went on to say that the commission's materials division holds the increase "absolutely essential" for defense and that a few weeks' delay in authorizing it may mean a year's delay in getting the required power, because the proposed dam must be complete by next spring to catch the flood waters.

Mr. Roosevelt said he supposed this situation would not be reported by 85 per cent of the newspapers. When a reporter remarked that they had published it, he replied that it ought to be written again as coming from the President. That was all that was said, but in the back of every newsman's mind were reports from Chicago that the Democratic platform would contain a strong public power plank and that the power connections of Wendell Willkie, the Republican nominee, will be made an issue in the campaign.

MATERIALS

Stettinius reported also that "substantial supplies" of strategic and critical raw materials are being acquired. These include manganese, tin, rubber, silk and other materials not produced in quantity in the United States. He cited numerous steps being taken to remove this defense deficiency, such as the use of synthetic rubber and the establishment of tin smelters to relieve our present dependence on British plants to process tin ore produced in South America and Asia.

PRODUCTION

William S. Knudsen, in charge of the production division, reported that a total of $1,390,575,404.87 in contracts for Navy equipment and $271,316,089.13 in Army orders had been cleared by his division since it was set up.

"Material covered under these contracts," he stated, "includes airplanes, tanks, battleships, ammunition, antitank guns, antiaircraft searchlights, machine guns, various fire-control precision instruments, tractors, trucks, blanket, overcoating, serge cloth, worsted shirting, service shoes, ship propulsion machinery, storage batteries for submarines, airport and airstation construction, barracks and many other items necessary in equipping the United States Army and Navy."

Reporting the placing of an order for 627 tanks and the expected completion of a contract for 9,000 Rolls-Royce airplane engines, Knudsen said that a plan to reserve a definite percentage of the machine tool industry for defense needs would be taken up today.

LABOR

Sidney Hillman, reporting on labor supply, said that the intervention of his division, acting with Labor Department conciliation service had averted several "serious production stoppages"—threatened labor deadlocks in General Motors, Pacific Coast shipping, Gulf shipbuilding, the Utah copper industry and the aluminum industry.

Telling how the facilities of the NYA, WPA, CCC and Office of Education have been co-ordinated to forward the training program for industry, Hillman declared that all training "is in anticipation of meeting such demands for labor as may arise in connection with the defense program."

"It is interesting to note that up to the present there have been no specific requests for skilled labor made to the Defense Commission. It is evident that thus far needs of private industry for skilled and other labor are being met," he continued.

PRICES

Leon Henderson, reporting on the division of price stabilization, declared that the primary effort of his office has been directed toward determining the effects of the arms program on the Nation's price structure.

"Analysis of both the materials and resources have been coupled with consideration of measures for control and price stabilization," he stated. "Numerous proposals for price regulation are being studied.

"With Donald Nelson, coordinator of defense purchases, consideration is being given application of priorities from the viewpoint of their impact on prices. Surveys are also being made by this division of the economic organization and controls within the belligerent countries."

President Roosevelt, commenting on this phase of the report, said that the question of Government control over industry through the issuance of priority orders had not yet reached the point of considering its adoption.

AGRICULTURE

Chester Davis, member in charge of agriculture problems, said his division had undertaken extensive collaboration with the Department of Agriculture toward the following:

Promotion of increased use of surplus farm products at home, and where possible abroad, to minimize the effect of curtailed export outlets.

Maintenance of agricultural production at most favorable levels for national defense and health needs, promoting simultaneously the objective of parity prices for farm products.

Protection of producers from the unfavorable effects of international developments.

CONSUMERS

Miss Harriet Elliott, in charge of consumer protection, reported the plans for an educational campaign to arouse public sentiment for physical preparation for emergency defense heads.

Appointment of a coordinating committee to carry forward this "health for defense" campaign was announced, composed of Surgeon Gen. Thomas Parran, Dr. M. L. Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture; Miss Katherine Lenroot, head of the Labor Department Children's Bureau, and Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board.

TRANSPORTATION

Ralph Budd, in charge of transportation, reported a dislocation of car loadings, with some sections having increases and others decreases. He told of plans for acquiring special rolling stock for handling troops and military equipment.

Roosevelt's Name Sets Them Wild

cago's huge indoor stadium crashed out "Anchors Aweigh" and "Happy Days Are Here Again." A leather-lunged Democrat seized a floor microphone to lead community shouting for the draft Roosevelt drive.

Torn newspapers and campaign pamphlets spilled out from the third gallery to the floor 100 feet below as the galleries chanted "We Want Roosevelt."

It was a double-barreled demonstration. The first installment, clocked at 25 minutes, erupted at the first mention of the President's full name in Barkley's address. The second and longer blast came after the Kentucky Senator, his own and the President's messages delivered, had stepped back from the rostrum.

Scuffling swirled around the Massachusetts and Virginia standards during the first parade of Roosevelt men. The Bay State standard was swept into the procession, but a husky Iowa delegate who made a pass at the Virginia emblem was thrown for a loss.

Senator Byrd smiled judiciously as the third-termers stormed down the aisle, yelling, "What's the matter, Virginia?"

Ely Culbertson, the bridge expert and an alternate delegate from Connecticut, observed that the Virginia delegation was "playing bad bridge and bad politics." He said the situation called for "a grand slam bid for Roosevelt, not vulnerable."

From a nearby chair Senator Pepper, of Florida, led marching delegates in singing "God Bless America," which the 40 piece brass band was thought to be playing at the time. Pepper was backed up by Mayor Maury Maverick, of San Antonio, Tex.

Barkley banged his gavel in perfunctory fashion from time to time during the demonstration, finally throwing back his head and spreading his arms in a helpless gesture. Before bringing the convention back to order, he planted a statesmanlike kiss on the South Dakota standard, which had been waved under his nose for 30 seconds.

The convention ran through its routine business in a tense and expectant atmosphere after Speaker Bankhead opened the session at 9:04 p. m.

Delegates came to life when Harry Richman and his radio chorus sang "God Bless America." Bankhead, ignoring the melody's association with the Republican Convention, described it as "our theme song."

A slight contretemps developed when Ruby Bell, a contralto from Paducah, Ky., attempted to sing "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," while the organ was still playing "My Old Kentucky Home."

A battery of 27 searchlights bore down on Barkley when he stepped up to the rostrum, escorted by four Democratic governors. Below the stand was a gilded eagle with an 8-foot wing spread.

Overhead was a canopy of American flags, bunting and the four-starred banner of the City of Chicago. Floodlights played on a huge picture of President Roosevelt at one end of the hall. Gazing out over the proceedings from the other tip of the oval arena was a small and somewhat lonesome study of the President's running mate of 1932 and 1936, John Garner.

CIO Urges Agency To Regulate Rents

Declaring Washington's housing shortage is being exploited by landlords and real estate agents, the Industrial Union Council yesterday announced its determination to seek the establishment of a District rent commission which would regulate rent prices.

C. S. Duke, chairman of the C. I. O. central body's housing committee, said the council had unanimously adopted a resolution calling for a commission similar to the one set up in October, 1919, when excessive rents resulted from a post-war housing shortage.

sues;

2. Restoration to Germany of colonies taken from her by Britain after the World War;

3. A new economic order.

Diplomatic circles understood that the expected proposal for a European readjustment entailed splitting the continent into two zones, whose trade as well as policies would be controlled by Rome and Berlin, respectively, with Britain expelled from continental politics.

Russia an Enigma

Such zones of influence, as outlined in frontier circles, were expected to follow these general lines: Germany to control all Europe—including France and Scandinavia—from the North to the Black Sea, except the Mediterranean basin; Italy to control all countries, except France, on the shores of the Mediterranean including those in North Africa.

It was doubtful, observers said, which of the Axis partners would try to bring Turkey within its trade and political orbit and what Soviet Russia's reaction would be in southeast Europe to such a setup.

Credence was given this picture, however, by Virginio Gayda, well-posted Fascist editor who wrote in the newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia of "creation of vast European economic alliances organized around a great central nucleus."

Economic associations of nations, which would parallel their political groupings, Gayda said, would be determined by the "solidarity of political and economic interest of continuous geographical positions, convergence of traditions and ability to integrate reciprocal economy."

In other words, nations would be grouped by zones according to their ability to fill one another's needs.

Presumably, Gayda said, trade barriers would be removed for "more intense commerce" and a "more organic and simplified but efficient European economic order."

President Gives Press a Surprise

his hair slightly rumpled and damp in the humidity, Mr. Roosevelt sat as if in thought as the reporters gathered in his office. His long cigarette holder was tilted upward in the corner of his mouth in characteristic fashion. His white shirt and a white tie with light green, orange-fringed stripes, rather gleamed. Behind him, as usual, were two Secret Service men.

It was not a small gathering, despite the absence of many of the reportorial "regulars" at the Democratic convention in Chicago. Most of those who had assembled admittedly were there because it was the President's press conference and not because they expected any important political news.

The subdued cry of "all in" and the closing of the door, opened the conference. Before any questions could be asked, the President picked up the joint report of his seven-member Defense Advisory Commission, and he commented pointedly that its contents were at least as important as any news that would come out of Chicago.

Reading the reports, showing vast strides made in the 40 days that the commission has been engaged in marshaling the Nation's defense resources, the President frequently paused to point out significant facts related to statements in the report.

Later, when questioning by the reporters centered on the report he had read to them, Mr. Roosevelt was asked why he classified it as fully as important as any news from the convention.

Soberly and emphatically he replied by asking whether the safety of the country should not be placed ahead of any party's convention.

Desk editors of the newspapers would not agree with him on the relative importance, he had commented previously, but it was his duty to point it out, nonetheless, he said.

Later he took another fling at newspapers, commenting that probably 85 per cent of them would not print that Republican House members, as asserted by the commission, had blocked pre-recess consideration of a request for more TVA power needed in the defense program. When a reporter interjected that it had already been printed, Mr. Roosevelt closed the exchange by saying it should be printed again, as coming from the President.

The defense report disposed of, the thrill of the day came.

"Mr. President," a reporter said, "I would like to ask in all sincerity why you have refrained for so long in making your position known on the third-term issue."

The President's face lighted. Quickly he advised all present to listen in on the radio a few hours later. Senator Barkley, permanent chairman of the Democratic convention, he told them, would make an announcement on behalf of the President immediately upon conclusion of the Senator's own speech in taking over the convention chairmanship.

The word was out. Questions were fired at Mr. Roosevelt, but he insisted it would do no good to press him. His advice to all was to tune in on the convention proceedings.

The reporter who had asked the original question complained that his question still had not been answered—that he had asked "why" the President had concealed his attitude so long.

Mr. Roosevelt explained. The occasion chosen for the announcement, he said, would be the first time the convention had been in session with its permanent organization completed.

A few more questions on the defense report while eager wire-service men were chafing to be away. Then the conference's thanks to its host, a dash for the doors by those who must get the news spread around the world, and the President's loud hearty laugh at having again "wowed" the news corps.

In the seclusion of his study, President Roosevelt last night heard over the radio the tumultuous demonstration for him at the convention in Chicago, but the world probably will never have a picture of his immediate reaction.

Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early announced in advance that the President would listen to the proceedings, and when finally Mr. Roosevelt's statement to the delegates was read all of the residential portion of the mansion was dark except the oval study adjoining Mr. Roosevelt's bedroom. The executive office wing was deserted except for a few reporters in the press room.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

FOUR MAESTROS IN RAINBOW. Sam Jack Kaufman of the Capitol Theater, visiting star Bob Crosby and Art Brown, the ol' maestro, will all be guests of honor at that sky-high fifth birthday celebration in the Rainbow Room this evening. With Rainbow's own Milton Davis, that makes a grand total of four maestros. The place will be infested with maestros, in fact. Also there'll be a half-dozen vaudeville acts, balloons, favors, funny hats and birthday cake. Come one, come all!

LES COLVIN, who can make the accordion do acrobatics, is now out at O'Donnell's Farms. Ask him to sing you some of his double-specials at your table—but pianissimo. A Sidney dance music until plays at the O'D. Farms on Saturdays.

RIVIERA NEWS. Singer Harriet Derek returned to Riviera yesterday, thanks be, after a brief session with the medicos. She's chipper as a robin again . . . Visiting band leader Bob Crosby has piped up with the assertion that Art Humes is one of the country's finest trumpeters. Shucks, we've been saying that for the last two years . . . The ropes were up in Riviera three nights last week. Looks like that big fall business is starting in mid-summer.

CHEZ FIRE HOUSE, the New York spot, was formerly a church and Chief Justice Hughes was baptized there. We're indebted for this info to Milt Herth, of the Neptune Room, who's an ex-Chez Fire Houser . . . P. S. There's a buzz that Evelyn Tyner will shortly play a week at the Capitol Theater.

FACES AROUND PLACES. Carlton. Lots of industrialists and plane manufacturers. Edward J. Noble, Undersecretary of Commerce. The White House's Steve Early. "Tommy" Tompkins, the young builder . . . Mayfair. Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins. Just out of habit he was casting an eye around corners to see if he could spot any ambushed Redskins. Scores of lasses looking over Gene Bari and his handsome trio. The names, girls, are Raymond Lowell, accordionist, and Allen Greenwood, guitarist . . . New Bavarian. Flocks of executives from the Eastern, United and American air lines and their guests. Offices of these air transport lines are all in the neighborhood and you'll always find tables full of the air-minded at the New Bavarian.

WEDDING BELLS. Bob Holben, trumpeter with Paul Kain's Glen Echo Band, will be married on July 27 to a Baltimore pretty, the sister of Singer Penny Ford, who also married a trumpeter, Bill Dunmore. P. S. We hear that Bill and Penny are now in Schenectady, N. Y.

HARMONY HIGH 'N HOT. Starlight Roof. Arthur Herbert's new song, "She Tried It For the First Time,"—all about ice skating, but a sizzler . . . Casino Royal. "Hot Dog" as dished up by Jack Schaeffer and his boys with the chorus, "We want 'em with the mustard and the relish and the pickles, too!" . . . River Bend. That special arrangement of "Blue Skies" made by George Stein. Makes you think you're floating along on a cloud . . . Anchor Room, Orrin Tucker's "Little Girl" as done by Matt Windsor and Eileen George. They were helped on it by members of the Tucker band who practically haunted Anchor while they were in town . . . Nightingale. Rod Raffell's arrangement of "Playmates." No fooling, it's different. Gay Nineties. The electric touch that Al Oddone gives to Hawaiian numbers. It's partly rhythm, partly his electric guitar.

CIGGIE LASSES. Lola Manning, the Shoreham Terrace cigarette-use, has the prettiest dimples in town when she smiles. 'Member Fleda Foster who used to give you eggies in the Shoreham? She's changed her platinum curls to a glowing red since she took over the hotel's news stand . . . Marie Ogle, cigarette girl at Del Rio, has a new way of wearing a corsage. Last time we saw her, she had a cluster of sweetheart roses placed smack at the waistline in the back of her white satin gown. Looked beautiful.

CONNIE RANDALL, visiting singer at the Rainbow Room's fifth anniversary party this evening

WHAT THEYRE DOIN'. Johnny Shaw of Dick Koons' Mayflower Lounge orchestra has just bought himself a house. Ditto for Al Yardin, who plays in the Mayflower dining room. "Real estate conscious," huh? . . . Linda Carroll of the King Cole Room keeps fairly busy. She studies dramatics, singing and dancing in her spare time. It's all reflected in the beautiful work she's doing at K. C. R. . . . The Hi Hat Cavaliers say they've never played so many request numbers as they have since coming to Washington. And they've been together six years.

PRETTIEST COSTUMES around town are those worn by Dancer Loyce Graham at the Lotus. One is a pleated white chiffon with a single big scarlet flower. Classic in line, too, is a two-toned violet chiffon with which she carries a parasol daintily bedizened with violets.

DINING OUT. At the Madrillon it's a good idea to have early cocktails and give your order for Spanish dishes when you arrive. It takes a good half hour for the chef to do himself proud on such dishes as arroz con pollo. By ordering a bit early you have no longer to wait than if you'd ordered the regular dinner . . . The Harrington Tavern is properly proud of its popular priced dinners served in a quiet and soothing atmosphere, devoid of bustle or rush . . . Dick's Grill is your spot if you want shrimps and other seafood cooked in the New Orleans manner.

Army Forces Out Japan's Cabinet

Konoye Expected To Succeed Yonai, Press Asiatic Policy

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, July 16.—Japan moved swiftly toward more energetic action in the Far East tonight.

The cabinet of Premier Admiral Yonai, recently criticized for failing to seize the "golden opportunity" created by the fall of France and Holland, resigned en bloc, apparently to make way for a new regime ready to fulfill army demands for a "firm hand" policy in the Orient.

Emperor Hirohito, canceling his scheduled review of the Japanese fleet, prepared to return to Tokyo from his seaside villa tomorrow. It was widely expected he would ask former Premier Prince Konoye, exponent of a plan for a one-party government more like the German and Italian systems, to form a new cabinet.

Collapse of the Yonai regime was ascribed to three major reasons:

1. Its failure to satisfy expansionists, who have been demanding that Japan take full advantage of the situation in Europe.

2. Desire for "clear track" for closer alignment with Germany and Italy. This was considered impossible so long as Premier Yonai and Foreign Minister Arita remained in office.

3. Dissatisfaction with the Yonai regime since its inception, on the ground of its "excessive" liberalism.

The cabinet's resignation was precipitated by the resignation of Minister General Shunroku Hata, who also was mentioned tonight as a possible successor for Yonai.

"Army circles," commented Domei, the Japanese news agency, "have come to the conclusion that it is the urgent task of Japan to establish the so-called new national political structure which forms the only way for Japan, in view of the stress of the home and foreign situation, to carry out rearmament effectively, tighten state control of economy and renovate foreign policy with the construction of a new order in east Asia as the ultimate object."

Domei said the Yonai cabinet had "struck sand" in its efforts to form a new national political structure (that is, the one-party plan of Prince Konoye).

ADMIRAL YONAI

The cabinet had been in power for six months, and had been credited with various administrative and diplomatic successes.

Particular attention centered on the future status of Yonai and Arita. If either of these should be retained in the new cabinet, observers believe, it can be taken as a sign that Japan has no intention of entering a formal alliance with Italy and Germany, since these two men were largely responsible for squelching moves in that direction last year.

Spain Breaks With Chile On Nazi Issue

By the Associated Press

Madrid, July 16.—Spain severed diplomatic relations with Chile tonight in a startling move against an American republic now busy combating pro-Nazi elements.

The Spanish foreign ministry said it broke off relations because of the Chilean government's tolerance of an anti-Nationalist campaign which has "reached intolerable limits."

The Chilean charge d'affaires in Madrid was handed his passports and the Spanish diplomatic representatives in Chile were ordered home immediately.

Only yesterday, the Chilean government took stern action against alleged subversive elements, raiding headquarters of the Nationalist and Popular Socialist (Nazi) parties and ordering dissolution of "all apparently political organizations" formed by "rightists."

Chilean Interor Minister Alvarez announced Monday that documents seized in the raids disclosed "activities against the public order."

He said street disorders had been provoked by "Rightists" and members of the Popular Socialist vanguard movements, known formerly as the Nacista (Nazi) Party, 65 members of which were killed in an unsuccessful putsch September 5, 1938.

Nine persons were arrested in Santiago Sunday accused of setting off noise-bombs in the streets and distributing pamphlets attacking President Pedro Aguirre Cerda for having pardoned the carabineros who killed the Nacistas in 1938.

On the surface, at least, all this would appear to be purely an internal matter for Chile, hardly warranting the breaking off of diplomatic relations by Spain. That more significance attached, however, was not doubted by observers.

Spain has no possessions in this hemisphere. Observers did not fail to note, however, that Spain's Rightist government is extremely friendly with Germany.

lican Party and glorified the New Deal.

The only candidate in the field who interpreted President Roosevelt's message as a withdrawal was Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland.

"It was a very sincere and statesmanlike utterance," said Tydings. "I would have expected him to do it."

"Do you think that changes the situation?" the Free State candidate was asked.

"I surely do," he replied. "I wouldn't expect him to say he wouldn't take it."

Tydings appeared to be the only man in the Chicago Stadium who believed that Roosevelt was renouncing the nomination.

Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, summed it up for almost everybody when he said:

"It's quite plain that he doesn't want it, and hasn't sought it, but that he will serve."

Senator Tom Stewart, of Tennessee, said:

"I understand that Willkie is going to quit. If he doesn't Roosevelt will lick hell out of him."

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins said he felt sure that "the situation that has developed in the past year and particularly our domestic problems that are related to that" would be "compelling reasons" why Mr. Roosevelt would accept renomination.

"Roosevelt is wanted not only by these delegates but what is far more important by the great masses of American people," Hopkins said.

Senator Worth Clark, of Idaho, a supporter of Senator Burton K. Wheeler's Presidential aspirations, declared however, that "the statement is not definite. It leaves the convention, the delegates and the candidates in the same uncertain condition they were before. As far as I am concerned, unless Senator Wheeler decides otherwise, his name will be placed in nomination before the convention by me."

James A. Farley, chairman of the National committee—and a candidate—said:

"I have no comment to make. The statement speaks for itself.

E. B. Germany, campaign manager for Vice President Garner, told reporters:

"The situation hasn't been changed. We have felt this was the President's sentiment all the time.

"The whole Garner campaign has been predicated upon the assumption that Roosevelt would not be a candidate. The Garner campaign has never been an anti-Roosevelt movement."

Germany said he was unable to guess how the President's declaration would affect the chances of Garner's nomination.

Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, said Roosevelt "is the people's candidate and they will have no other."

"If necessary, we will stay here until November nominating Roosevelt until the call of duty in a time of his country's travail cannot be denied—for he is an American," Pepper said.

Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri, a third-term opponent, remarked that "the President cannot draft himself," and added:

"I don't know whether this means his elimination but what develops here tonight may well tell."

The Senator did not explain.

Representative Elmer J. Ryan, a Minnesota delegate, said in a statement that the convention was "being run by a group of White House manipulators."

The "Corcoran-Cohen-Hopkins group has induced a tired President to accede to a third-term draft," he said.

Cabby Must Pay For Collision He Avoided

The cab didn't hit anything, but its owner and driver must pay damages, Judge Nathan Cayton ruled yesterday in the Small Claims Branch of the Municipal Court.

Assistant Secretary of State Henry F. Grady tetsified that he had to jam on his brakes to avert a collision when a cab driven by C. Pennington, 1944 Bennett place northeast, ran past a red light at Twenty-first street and Pennsylvania avenue the morning of April 13.

Mrs. Augustus Owsley Stanley, 1681 Thirty-first street northwest, tetsified that Grady's car stopped so suddenly that she ran into it, damaging both cars. Mrs. Stanley is the wife of the former Senator from Kentucky, now chairman of the International Joint Commission.

Judge Cayton gave Grady judgment for $35.30 and Mrs. Stanley judgment for $36.25 against Pennington and Charles T. Scandone, 1144 Oates street northeast, owner of the cab.

Attorney Guilford S. Jameson appeared for Grady and Mrs. Stanley.

America's First Line of Security

AMERICA'S security in a troubled world rests solidly on three great supports—American farms, American factories, and American transportation.

Because of America's farms we alone among the great nations of the world can feed all our people regularly, adequately, and unfailingly from the produce of our own land. In this nation we need fear no famine, no blockade.

Because of our unequaled factories we can, after preparation, produce almost anything we require, and in almost any quantities. Of products that advance the human welfare, we are the greatest makers the world has ever seen.

Because of our transportation system—rail, water, air, and highway—we can move people and goods wherever they are needed more speedily and more efficiently than any other nation. In particular our hard-surfaced highways and our motor trucking system have no equals elsewhere.

All these sources of national strength owe much to farm machinery.

Machines make possible our vast farm production. They increase the farmer's speed and efficiency. They bring higher crop yields. They combat the effects of drouth, pests, and bad weather.

But farm machines have done much more than this. A century ago it required nine people living on farms to support themselves and one person in town. Today one man on the land supports himself and more than three people in town. America's industrial and transportation greatness has been made possible only by this release of men from toil on the land, brought about by farm machinery.

So America's First Line of Security is on the farm, manned by the sun-bronzed army of American farmers—the foundation of our strength as a nation in time of peace or in a world at war.

This is the mechanized army of the peaceful fields, relying on machines. For more than 100 years the farm equipment industry and the men and women in it have supplied this army with constantly better machines. It is our pride that today the American farmers are, beyond all comparison, the most efficient and the best equipped in the world to meet the vital demand for food production.

There is no weakness in America's First Line of Security, nor will there be.

Appeal To Decency

The new District Cleanliness Association deserves more than mere good wishes in its campaign to persuade citizens to stop littering the streets, alleyways and public parks with rubbish. It deserves the utmost cooperation. The sad thing is that such a campaign should be as obviously necessary, as is the case.

For years visitors from other countries have been astonished and shocked by the well-nigh universal habit of the American city dweller to drop on the sidewalks and gutters newspapers, empty cigarette wrappers, chewing gum wads, empty gin bottles or anything else no longer worth the bother of carrying. They were even more amazed by the vistas of desolation presented by our public parks and squares after any Sunday or holiday in good weather. Such habits scarcely argue that respect for the rights of others on which a democratic society is supposed to rest.

As one of the officers of the association has said, Washington's slums are whereever Washingtonians chose to leave their litter. And certainly there seems little sense in spending millions of dollars on slum clearance if our natural habit is to create new slums faster than old ones can be reclaimed.

Alien Property Problem

Estimates released on Monday by the Department of Commerce indicate that United States investments in Europe at the end of 1939 amounted to $2,278,000,000. Of this total $455,000,000 was invested in Germany and $155,000,000 in Italy. Of course it is impossible to appraise the effect of the war and the German conquests upon the value of these holdings. But it is significant that some corporations are reported to have written off their foreign holdings as total losses, especially in the disturbed areas.

What American-owned factories and other property will be worth in Germany, Italy and the occupied countries depends upon the policies which will be followed in dealing with foreign-owned property as well as upon the economic effects of the war upon earnings.

Publication of the estimates of overseas investments does, however, focus attention upon some of the perplexing problems raised by the foreign-owned assets "frozen" in this country. In former years these holdings would not have created any special problem, because a sharp distinction was maintained between private and public property, even in time of war. While the United States took over private enemy-owned property during the World War and liquidated it, the Alien Property Custodian acted as trustee for confiscated properties and the proceeds of sale were eventually turned over to the dispossessed owners.

Judging from past experience, we should, therefore, expect the private property of foreigners of all nationalities held in this country in time of peace to be protected from seizure by our own or any other government. Unfortunately, the precedents and practices of the past are no longer applicable to the radically altered conditions of the present. Totalitarian governments have largely discarded the distinction between public and private ownership, whenever it suited their purpose to ignore it. That is particularly true in dealing with possessions that can be used to build up foreign balances and pay for essential imports.

With the outbreak of war, Great Britain and France also asserted the right to take over the foreign holdings of their nationals for compensation, thus emphasizing the strategic importance of dollar balances as a means of financing war purchases. And if Germany can lay hands on the dollar balances and other investments in the United States belonging to the nationals of conquered countries, she will certainly not hesitate to turn them to her own use. Indeed, authorized individual transfers of funds from this country to occupied areas are helping even now to build up German dollar balances since such transfers must be effected through the Reichsbank.

A major problem will arise if our Government should be confronted by a demand for the transfer en masse to a Nazi-dominated government of the frozen assets belonging to its nationals. If such a request were to be made and refused, pressure might be put upon us to yield. For American investments in Germany, Italy and the occupied areas are estimated at approximately $1,000,000,000.

We might, of course, in turn take possession of frozen assets held here, amounting to about $2,300,000,000 for the countries in question. But such retaliatory action would entail dispossession of foreign investors who have shown confidence in our good faith and the stability of our institutions by buying our securities and putting funds in our banks. To combat high-handed acts of expropriation by committing similar acts might become unavoidable as a defense measure. But it is to be hoped that some more tolerable solution of a very knotty problem can eventually be arrived at by negotiation.

That Call For Speed

There was something delightfully simple, indeed almost naive as viewed in retrospect, about the foreign policy plank in the Democratic platform of 1936, which said:

> In our relationship with other nations, this Government will continue to extend the policy of the Good Neighbor. We reaffirm our opposition to war as an instrument of national policy, and declare that disputes between nations should be settled by peaceful means. We shall continue to observe a true neutrality in the disputes of others; to be prepared resolutely to resist aggression against ourselves; to work for peace and to take the profits out of war; to guard against being drawn, by political commitments, international banking or private trading, into any war which may develop anywhere.

It was on this rather diaphanous basis, one recalls, that President Roosevelt, in a succession of what seemed very important speeches, built up a strong case for collective action. From the famous "quarantine" speech at Chicago, on October 5, 1937, to that at Charlottesville on June 10 of this year, there was a general consistency in Mr. Roosevelt's public statements on the foreign scene. Throughout they urged a neutrality which should not penalize the victim of aggression in behalf of the aggressor. Throughout they urged practical assistance to democracies menaced by the totalitarian advance.

Any observations of this character were noticeable only for their absence from Speaker Bankhead's keynote address to the present Democratic National Convention. The President, said Mr. Bankhead on Monday night, has "done everything possible . . . to keep us out of involvement in a foreign war."

The statement can be substantiated. But it would have seemed a little less equivocal if Mr. Bankhead had recalled that only last month the President was promising to "extend to the opponents of force the material resources of this Nation" and to do so "full speed ahead."

The strongly noninterventionist character of Mr. Bankhead's keynote address is supplemented by the isolationist strength on the subcommittee now drafting the foreign affairs plank for the 1940 Democratic platform. Indications are that the Democrats intend to match the Republicans, or perhaps go them one better, in offering assurances that this country will remain at peace, no matter what happens in Europe.

The reason for all this is not far to seek. It reflects the conviction that any position conveying the idea of a possible involvement in the European war could be very bad politics, perhaps even fatal to the party sponsoring that impression. Therefore the obvious back-pedaling now taking place at Chicago.

From the analogy of the 1936 platform it can, of course, be said that all this palpable vote-catching procedure is meaningless. President Roosevelt, if reelected, could, of course, immediately develop an active foreign policy with as little reference to the 1940 platform as his speeches after the election of 1936 had to the Democratic platform of that year.

This line of reasoning, however, is not very satisfying to those who take events in Europe seriously. It does not eliminate the prospect that until November, at least, Republicans and Democrats will be determined to outvie each other in confining foreign policy to a series of highly pacific and uncontroversial gestures.

Yet it is at least as true now as when Mr. Roosevelt spoke at Charlottesville, on June 10, that "signs and signals call for speed—full speed ahead."

The signs may call. But evidently their call will go unanswered at least until November. And that is a long time off, considering the way events move nowadays.

Bad Company

While Mr. Westbrook Pegler may not invariably be distinguished by scrupulous politeness to the victims of his acid pen, he unquestionably renders a most valuable public service by his delight in stirring up sleeping dogs of public scandal.

He is now, for example, belaboring a point that even anti-New Deal political writers and speakers would have been satisfied to let alone—namely that the Democratic National Committee chose to make this year's convention the guest of the politicians who control the most notoriously corrupt municipal and county government in America.

Moreover, as Mr. Pegler points out, this choice was made from the ignoblest of motives. The National Administration which, as Chairman Farley declared, has passed through eight years "untarnished by breach of trust or sordid scandal" is very much in need of energetic succor and support by the very far from untarnished Chicago and Cook County bosses. Its representatives, therefore, are quite content, while in Chicago, to plug their nostrils with the cotton wool of expediency.

Here, certainly, is an association which the Administration might find it difficult to explain or to defend to the generality of decent American citizens. But it is altogether unlikely that the Republicans will make much of an issue of it. To do so would be merely to invite the retort of tu quoque. The Republican machines, which until rather recently have controlled local government in Chicago, have been, if anything, more malodorous than the present Democratic one. Philadelphia, too, under several generations of Republican bosses, was scarcely a synonym for purity in local politics.

The truth is, of course, that the national committees of both parties have always been altogether too careless and complacent about the character of their convention hosts. And Mr. Pegler does well to cite the tragedy of France as one illustration of what may happen where corruption is tolerated as one of the necessary evils that inhere in a democracy.

Another Shift In Japan

For the fifth time since the undeclared war on China began, the Japanese government has fallen. And this time, as on all the other occasions, external circumstances combined with internal pressures to bring about the change.

The Konoye government, which held office between June, 1937, and January, 1938, could lay claim to a striking succession of victories. During its tenure Japan secured control of all of China's Pacific seaboard, most of her principal cities and a large part of her communications. But these victories did not produce that final triumph which the Japanese had so eagerly awaited and which even today is not in sight.

Prince Konoye paid the penalty for that failure by having to relinquish office. His successors have proved no more fortunate. Continued Chinese resistance has cost Japan heavily in blood and treasure. Whichever government has been in power has been blamed for having misused or inadequately employed its opportunities to improve Japan's position.

The Hiranuma cabinet, which lasted from January to September, 1939, came a cropper as a result of the German-Soviet pact. This destroyed the anti-Comintern agreement, up to then a bulwark of Japan's foreign policy. The Abe government was overthrown because its relative moderation toward the United States failed to win a new commercial treaty with this country.

Now the Yonai government has been pushed out and it is no secret that one of the chief factors which determined its fate is the recent revolutionary alteration in the international situation.

These recent developments have created a demand for a more energetic policy than the Yonai government has been willing to pursue. Americans would hardly accuse Admiral Yonai and his colleagues, including Foreign Minister Arita, of being moderates and liberals. But this is precisely the charge that has been leveled against them.

Thus, in a recent issue of a Japanese magazine, Col. Kingoro Hashimoto, president of the Dai Nippon Young Men's Party, denounced the Yonai regime for not having extirpated British and American influences in China, for having "vainly stuck" to a "nonexpansion policy" and for having limited its stand on the Dutch East Indies issue to an insistence on the status quo.

It is a reasonable conjecture, therefore, that whatever government now comes into power in Japan will seek more vigorously to capitalize the international situation by consolidating and extending its position in the Far East. There are elements in Japan which counsel caution first, because the outcome of the struggle in Europe is no certainty and, second, because of fear of the United States.

But whether they will be sufficiently strong to act as a restraining influence on the hotspurs of Nippon is anything but certain.

Shall Men Wear Shorts?

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

The banner of equal rights has been raised high in Oklahoma City, and a momentous decision in the eternal Battle of the Sexes is on the immediate agenda. "Equal rights for men" was the bold crusader's slogan, as he strolled down Main street clad in gaily colored shorts. The women go shopping in shorts, under the torrid Southwest's enlightened code, so why shouldn't males be allowed equal freedom and cool comfort? Despite this indisputable logic, he was arrested.

It is, of course, purely as a matter of principle, not of esthetics, that the point is raised. The respective decorative values of the two genders of shorts-wearers is not at issue. Are men to be denied the right, if they want to be so daring, not to say rash, to trot around in shorts if they choose?

The great but often unappreciated male sex demands justice. If that brave fellow in Oklahoma City is found guilty of violating an ordinance, a movement should be launched that will rock the strongholds of entrenched feminine privilege and win masculine emancipation, once and for all.

Need For Unity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So serious are the potentialities for survival of our beloved republic, that no patriot should permit to pass without challenge continued writings leading to further dissension among our citizens, especially youth who are our mainstay, instead of well thought-out writings leading to unity, even at the risk of seeming to become a bore. Your editorial "Quibble and Quiddity" is a case in point.

I am a "stuffy and old-fashioned soul" and find full justification in what a section of our youth did, by refraining from "denouncing" other people's governments and in the same breath condemn philosophies of government foreign to our Americanism, foreign to American youth's traditions, training education, experience, etc.

Since when did we gain anything by "denouncing?" particularly governments of foreigners of their own choosing. Youth may not have reasoned it out that way: By their first action they voiced their protest, and called attention to their plight the "stuffy and old-fashioned souls" put them in, and by their second action they reaffirmed their hope that they may yet find a chance, a way out through the American way. If by denouncing and condemning a certain section of our youth we give courage to another section of youth to oppose and fight the first section, we thus contribute to the merry-go-round of fighting among ourselves. Old time tactics the French can no longer indulge in.

Long-Odds Bet

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If you can get me a "long-odds" bet on Willkie for the Democratic nominee, I've got a five-spot to put on the line. Roosevelt would prefer not to run again. This brings back his perspective and statesmanship. He casts his eye around, sees no Democrat who measures up to the great crisis, realizes Willkie is a powerhouse who reflects Roosevelt's stand on foreign policy and in principle backs his domestic policy.

Roosevelt will at the last minute refuse to run. In the scramble somebody will nominate Willkie. It will take like wildfire and Willkie will be nominated on the third ballot.

Willkie and Roosevelt will spend the six months to January coordinating to push the United States social, industrial and defense economy over the top.

Willkie becomes President and Roosevelt retires as the great statesman of his day.

Russia's Danger From Germany

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By concluding in 1939 the Russo-German commercial treaty followed by a nonaggression pact the Soviets obtained White Russia, a half of Poland and concessions from Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, where they could build specified fortifications, maintain troops and warships. To protect Leningrad and Russia's northwest the Kremlin leaders made demands on Finland for the cession of certain regions with the right to build forts and airports and maintain a fleet. These demands met with refusal leading to the Russo-Finnish War, whose result is history. Further alarmed by the successful Nazi blitzkrieg in the west the Russian government decided strongly to fortify Russia's frontiers facing Germany while she was fighting the Allies. Charging, then, that the Baltic countries have concluded an alliance against Russia, the Soviets are moving formidable armies into Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia, where they are increasing also their fortifications and fleets.

On several occasions Hitler said publicly that with acquisition of Ukraine and Urals, Germany's food and mineral problems will be solved. Considering that the Fuehrer thus far has achieved his long-range objectives it may be taken for granted that the turn of Ukraine and Ural will come. Further proof that the Nazis mean to slice up Russia for annexing to the Reich is contained in "Revolution of Nihilism," by Hermann Rauschning, former associate of Hitler. I quote Rauschning: "The great process that began with the German victories in the World War, and with the truly historic secession of the western territories from Russia, a secession of world importance, must be carried to the conclusion that was prevented by the loss of the war and by the Bolshevisk dictatorship. Not only the Russian border territories but the whole of Russia must be broken up into its components. These components are the natural imperial territory of Germany."

When Hitler decides that the time to attack the Soviets has come, then woe to Russia without allies. The Nazi armies aided by potential spies and saboteurs, the German engineers and mechanics now in Russia, will swoop up the Ukraine and the Urals just as in the case of France. Can U. S. S. R. prevent the disaster staring her in the face? There appears to be but one way out for the Soviets, namely, to declare war on Germany while she is engaged in the gigantic struggle in the west. The Russo-German nonaggression pact? It can be thrown overboard just as Hitler discarded his pledges whenever it suited him. But can Russia risk a war against Germany's war machine? In this connection it should not be overlooked that the French aided only by a small English force were greatly outnumbered in men, tanks and planes of the Nazis, who by invading neutral countries were able to outflank armies and fortifications of the Allies. Conceivably the Soviets wish to avoid fighting the Reich by remaining neutral, but witness the invasion and conquest of neutral Norway, Belgium and Holland. Moreover, Russia's move into Rumania will sooner or later make her clash with the Axis powers unavoidable.

With the British army and powerful fleet intact and with food, planes, pilots and munitions arriving from the dominions in increasing quantities; with American planes and munitions available for the Allies to buy, while the Nazis have already paid a high toll in men, tanks and munitions, it would seem that the Soviet's huge armies have a fair chance to defeat Germany while her titantic struggle in the west lasts. But will Russia avail herself of this opportunity? She cannot afford to wait. Time is against her. It is now or never. If she has later on to fight the Nazis alone, loss of Ukraine and Urals will be at stake with the odds against her.

Divine Power

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reading the Dorothy Thompson article in The Post of July 8, makes one more conscious than ever of the world's entanglement. Deeper and deeper, individually and collectively, we are being involved in the spinning of a dangerous web. This is a very difficult one for us to work ourselves out of by our own wills alone. Our own wills must be strengthened by the grace of God.

Would it not be advisable for world leaders to review history and notice the Divine power by which Abraham freed the ancient Hebrews from the domination of idol worshipers; Moses liberated the Israelites from the dark forces of Pharaoh, lifting them into a constructive civilization; Zoroaster raised the poverty-stricken beggars in ancient Persia out of their stagnating laziness, and, by the stimulating power of a spiritual energy, produced a balanced civilization; Buddha stood as a spiritual light in India, pointing the way to advance beyond the unjust exploitation to which a caste system had degenerated; Jesus, although rejected by the Hebrew theologians, and thus being prevented from bringing their people again to the real knowledge of the Divine law could have liberated them from the Chaldean and Persian as well as the Roman yoke. Nevertheless, by being this same intermediary of God's grace, not only by His Divine might, saved His followers from destruction along with the disintegrating Roman civilization, but enabled them to be a "mustard seed" that grew into the Christian civilization; Mohammed changed the anarchy of the barbarous Arabian tribes into an organization which produced such a culture that when it was brought to Europe's "Dark Ages" by the Crusaders, it was the means of developing that "mustard seed" into its full flower in the Renaissance—for its fruit which is so apparent in the latest phase and fullest development of modern civilization: namely, our American civilization.

Might not this same Divine plan—so unifying in its workings—be the remedy for the entire world now? Indeed, we have reached an epoch in which we can not afford to be divided. We must go shoulder to shoulder in order to survive.

The U. S. And Britain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With an adroitness in perverting truth that comes from congenital mendacity, the Nazis and their fellow travelers are again falsifying facts to suit their contemptible purpose. They are now trying to build up a case of "stabbing in the back" by Great Britain.

The facts are, of course, that the Nazis have crushed France and are now ravishing and plundering that country. French farms and factories are working for the Nazis while the French people go on short rations. French military and naval establishments and materials are now Nazi property. The "French" government is just a front transmitting Hitler's commands.

Those who raise the false cry of "stabbing in the back" know very well that that part of the former French fleet which has been rendered useless could only be used against Great Britain for the greater enslavement of France.

What is more to the point is the fact that if and when England is crushed, there will be no one to paralyze the navy which Hitler will then have for use against the United States.

Common sense and patriotism should make us grateful that there will be that many less war vessels to prey upon American commerce and American coasts.

Laughter On Sunday

It wasn't long before even the beauty and tradition of the many famous paintings in the Corcoran Galleries lost their quality as anodyne to loneliness. In a strange town, alone, the empty rooms seemed vast to Henry, and his footsteps on the hard floor made a hollow and an aching sound. He walked down the marble staircase and out of the door.

Henry drifted across the street into Potomac Park and found an empty bench near the badminton courts. He tried to keep his mind away from himself by studying the pattern of the double columns on the Interior Building. But he could not. There was something about Sunday—its peace, its tone, its sunlight—which made it a day of yearning for conversation, for laughter, for companionship.

The badminton players were speaking animatedly and laughing at their strokes. Diagonally opposite him a girl in a green dress sat on the grass, feeding three little squirrels who darted spasmodically up to her to snatch a peanut from her fingers and then ran away to a spot under a tree where they nibbled on it as their heads bobbed up and down. Two men and a girl strolled by. Suddenly the laughter subsided and things became quiet. A breeze arose and rippled over the grass. Henry closed his eyes as it played across his face.

"HERE, BUNNY, BUNNY," chanted a loud female voice. Henry looked up. Two plump, middle-aged women, both dressed in blue and white outfits, stood near the bench next to Henry's. One held a 2-pound bag of peanuts in her arm, while the other addressed herself to the squirrels.

"Here, Bunny, Bunny," she cried. Here, Bunny, Bunny, peanuts!" and she made a sucking sound by drawing the breath through her puckered lips.

Henry shifted his position uncomfortably. You old windbag, he thought, how would you like it if they called you, "Here, Hippo, Hippo, peanuts!"

Once more she called, "Here, Bunny, Bunny," and she sucked her lips again. But the squirrels would not be enticed away from the girl in green; so the two women, obviously disappointed, sat down upon the bench and began to crack open and eat their peanuts, occasionally tossing one or two to a pigeon which strutted by.

A shabbily dressed man cut across the grass to the bench where the women sat. His cheap cloth cap was pulled down tightly over his head. He wore a buttonless black coat, worn and dirty, and trousers of nondescript gray which were too short for him, and revealed his woolen underwear falling over the tops of heavy shoes.

"Say, lady," he said hoarsely, "can you help a man out with 10 cents for some soup and bread? I ain't had nothin' to eat."

The ladies stared frigidly at him. "No," said the one who had called the squirrels, "go away!"

The man looked at them.

"You feed the birds," he said, "but you won't feed a hungry man." He turned away in disgust.

He walked past Henry's bench. Then, as if in afterthought, he turned around again.

"Say, mister," he said, "have you got a dime for some soup and bread for an ol' hobo on his way to Frisco?"

"Sit down," said the lonely Henry.

The man did so. He must have been more than 50. His eyes were rheumy and he reeked of liquor.

"Whew," said Henry. "You smell as if you fell into a tub of gin."

The man looked contrite. "That's right, mister. I really want a drink." He looked up with his watery eyes and scratched the gray stubble on his chin. "I guess I'm wicked," he said. "I guess I'm evil. I've cursed Christ in the middle of the ocean. I guess I'll suffer for it. I'll put my back against a tree some night and in the morning the spirit'll be outa my body."

Henry drew him out and learned the story of an old sailor who had been dismissed from a British freighter at Mobile and was trying to find his way to the coast. Henry fished out a dime and the old sailor went unsteadily on his way.

HE TURNED to see one of the ladies in blue coming to his bench.

"I beg your pardon, young man," she said, "but did you give that man any money?"

"Yes," he said belligerently.

"Well, you shouldn't have," she said emphatically. "That only encourges begging. There are institutions for people really in need. There's the Men's Hospice and the Central Union Mission. He'll only drink your money up."

"Let him!" Henry wanted to say, but instead he said, "Oh, it was worth a dime to have someone to talk to."

The look of righteousness fell from her face. She sat down immediately.

"Why, you poor boy, you're a stranger here, aren't you?" She turned to the woman at the next bench. "Ethel, come here," she said, "and meet this nice boy. He's a stranger in Washington."

The other woman picked up her bag of peanuts and sat down on Henry's left.

"Don't you know any people?" she asked. "Why didn't you try your State society?"

"I never knew there was such a thing," said Henry. "I just got into town a week ago and I don't know a soul."

"Well," said the more energetic of the sisters, "you certainly came to the right person. I'll introduce you to my niece. She knows plenty of young people."

Then the three began talking animatedly of many things—of New York, where Henry came from; of Georgia, where they came from; of the old sailor—of everything.

Some pigeons waddled near, and deep-throatedly croaked for some peanuts. The girl in green had left and soon two of the three squirrels she had fed ventured over to the bench to nibble on the nuts.

Henry leaned back. The sun was on his shoulders. Pigeons and squirrels were eating at his feet. The ladies were talking and laughing. There was the promise of friendship. He became warm and elated. Then he began to laugh richly.

A Listless Opening

By Ernest K. Lindley

Convention Feels Frustrated

Chicago, July 16.

FRUSTRATION, uneasiness and listlessness have marked the opening days of the Democratic national convention.

The delegates feel frustrated because they have nothing important to do. Most of them are just scenery. They were scenery, of course, at the 1936 convention, when the Roosevelt-Garner ticket was renominated. But they knew then that the Philadelphia convention was to be only a ratification. The whole affair, including Roosevelt's appearance at Franklin Field to accept the renomination, was arranged as a pep meeting to start the campaign.

This time nothing is in sight to give the convention a lift. The delegates, most of them, are not free. But neither are they directly controlled, much less mobilized in spirit for a campaign.

They assume they are here to renominate Roosevelt. All the Roosevelt lieutenants on the ground say he will accept. But they also deny that they have any direct promise that he will do so. And none of them has the power, either from the President or through his own influence, to organize the convention. Thus the overwhelming majority of the delegates are leaderless for the time being. From this, in part, arises the sense of uneasiness. Maybe Roosevelt won't accept. Maybe the anti-Roosevelt minority will stir up some unpleasant disturbances. Who can manage the campaign if Farley goes out? Questions like these, expressed on all sides, add to the uneasiness of the delegates.

YET MOST of them would be astounded if the President declined renomination. And they would also be in a panic. Whether Roosevelt is being "drafted" or not is unimportant. Even his irreconcilable opponents concede that he is the strongest candidate the party has, and that without him the Democratic outlook would be dismal.

Having been discounted, however, the renomination of Roosevelt is not likely to inject real enthusiasm into the convention.

The one thing that would lift the spirits of the delegates more than anything else would be Jim Farley's consent to carry on as national chairman—at least until the end of the campaign. Big Jim is the most popular man at the convention. His popularity is more personal and intense, probably, than the President's. He has no enemies except a handful of New Deal higher-ups, and even they now realize how badly Farley is needed to conduct the campaign.

Farley's popularity will vanish if he assails Roosevelt, or plays the dog in the manger, just as Al Smith's did. It will suffer if he does not consent to carry on as campaign manager—even though he pleads that he cannot afford to turn down a $100,000 a year job which has been offered to him. For to many loyal Democrats it will seem that Jim, having managed two easy campaigns, is deserting the ship when the weather begins to look stormy.

BUT FARLEY'S decision will not be known until the national committee meets on Saturday, after most of the delegates probably will have gone home.

What the Roosevelt lieutenants are more immediately concerned with than giving the delegates an exciting time is putting the convention on a high level of sobriety. They know that in running again Roosevelt is taking great risks: the risk of defeat, of victory by a narrow margin, of an anticlimactic third term, of the impairment of his position in the judgment of history, of the injury of his health by 12 consecutive years of heavy responsibility. They believe that he would not assume these risks if he did not feel that the United States is now in one of the three most critical periods in its history. Most of them agree as to the critical importance of the next few months and perhaps the next several years. Feeling so, they are not much interested in convention whoop-la—provided they can send the party away with a feeling that it has done a good job and must buckle down to a hard and deadly serious campaign.

MR. FARLEY
He could, if he wished, raise the spirits of the delegates

IN ADDITION to the renomination of Roosevelt they want a first-rate platform. This is not of prime importance, but the Republican platform is so vapid a mixture of cliches and ambiguities that they think a well written platform would help to impress many voters with a difference in quality between the two parties. As to substance, their general aim has been to roll the preservation and strengthening of the social gains of the New Deal with military defense into an overall program for the defense of American democracy.

Secondly, of course, they want a first-rate Vice Presidential nominee; not a wornout party hack or a second-string Presidential politian, but a man of high ability, qualified to succeed to the Presidency and also loyal to the Roosevelt policies. Such a candidate might not be easily nominated and perhaps could not be nominated at all except at the President's request.

Solid quality is the aim of the Roosevelt group. This formula may not inject enthusiasm into the convention but it will, in their view, lay a firmer base for the campaign than could any amount of fancy showmanship.

Fair Enough

Citizen Carrozzo

Chicago, July 16.

OF THE MANY distinguished Chicagoans who served today as hosts to the party of humanity in a scene of unimaginable political and civic squalor, it seems conservative to state that none contributed a more robust individual smell to the general stench than Mr. Mike Carrozzo, a noted leader of the American Federation of Labor and a man of great power in the Chicago City Hall.

Mr. Carrozzo is an old-time habitue of that historic acre of vice which existed for many years in the South Side district around Twenty-second street and which in its day was known as the levee or the line. His personal history, entered in the documentary files of the United States Government, records that in the period between 1910 and 1917 he lived in the 2100 block on Michigan avenue and later at an address on Twenty-second street, both in the very midst of a patch given over exclusively to the business of prostitution.

He was there a bodyguard of the late Jim Colisimo, the immigrant who introduced chain-store methods to the brothel industry in the United States, and in later years he became an intimate of Al Capone and the latter-day gorillas whose influence on the morals and government of the second city is still predominant in all phases of its political and administrative affairs.

MR. CARROZZO is now a prominent local statesman, a prominent leader in the American Federation of Labor, with the hearty approval of William Green, and a country gentleman with his own herds of blooded dairy stock and swine and a stable of steeds which race under his colors in Saratoga and Miami when the criminal scum are there. He is a gunman, and was once indicted for murder of a comrade in the labor racket, but beat the rap as, indeed, he beat the gun-rap, wherein it was shown that he was an honorary or nominal member of the fish and game department, on his way to inspect a theoretical mess of fish at hypothetical risk of his life.

Mayor Edward Kelly has this in common with his fellow humanitarian—that he once was subjected to the harassment of an indictment by forces which doubtless were opposed to his humane works. State indictments are trivial botherations in the politics of Chicago and Illinois, however, so, like Mr. Carrozzo, the mayor easily beat the rap. The State's attorney withdrew the case.

Later this selfless servant of the people had income-tax trouble, and, in his own vast appreciation of the opportunities enjoyed by a poor boy in the land of the free, made a substantial cash settlement—which was, indeed, noble of him. In that case it emerged that Mr. Kelly, although employed in the public service at a moderate salary, had amassed great wealth by "fortunate investments."

MR. CARROZZO at present is under indictment again, this time in connection with Thurman Arnold's attempt to break up collusion between crooked contractors, crooked politicians in the city hall and labor racketeers in the paving industry in Chicago. Moreover, his affluence, as indicated by his relatively recent acquisition of his country estate and his farm and stables, has tweaked the interest of the Internal Revenue Department, the more so because his economic rise coincided roughly with a great and sudden increase in the cost of paving at the expense of the American people through the WPA.

It is not surprising that Mr. Carrozzo's love of humanity, as represented by the party of humanity, flamed into a hot passion during this period and now emits the fire and lava of devotion. The people of the United States certainly have been humane to him.

Rather oddly, Mr. Carrozzo did not become a citizen until July 6, 1937, after 31 years in the country, most of them in rackets. Before that, although he was undisputed ruler of thousands of American toilers who were and still are compelled to pay him $2 a month, plus $10 a year, for the right to work, whether or not there is work available for them, his citizenship proceedings lagged. Twice before he bethought himself of citizenship, but withdrew his applications on the strength of official warnings that if he pursued them he would be blackballed as improper material.

BUT FINALLY, with the indorsement of one contractor and one city paving superintendent who had the breadth of mind and depth of soul to appreciate his innate fineness, Citizen Carrozzo joined his subjects in the enjoyment of a full partnership in the glorious republic of the western world.

Citizen Carrozzo's devotion to the Democratic Party, which his colleague in good government, Mayor Kelly, so touchingly has called the party of humanity, is not to be measured by his formal contributions to the organization as such. He is a man of many good but quiet works in the organization under the mayor's leadership, but his devotion to the party of humanity overcame his modesty in the year of the big wind, 1938, when he was reported to the United States Congress as one of those humanitarians who contributed $250 for a Democratic campaign book. Not much given to reading, Mr. Carrozzo, nevertheless, thought he positively ought to have a book.

A Disturbing Notion

Chicago, July 16.

CONSIDERING, as you must, the relation of what happens at this Democratic Convention and what is going on in the world as a whole; considering the departure about to be made by this convention, in its relation to change in government everywhere—considering all that, it would be possible to feel concern.

As it is put by those who do feel concern: Here in the United States, one of the two great political parties has submitted completely to the will of one man. One man can, and presumably will, make himself the party's Presidential candidate—and in order to do that will violate a cherished tradition of the party and the country. The same man will, in effect, name the Vice Presidential candidate. The same man will dictate or censor the party platform.

All that is true. And all that partly justifies the way it is put by some who do not like it, which is thus: The relation between Mr. Franklin Roosevelt and the Democratic Party today is the same as the relation between Josef Stalin and the Communist Party, between Benito Mussolini and the Fascist Party, between Adolf Hitler and the Nazi Party.

ADMIT IT, so far as it goes. It is disturbing. It is a sign of the time, the sign of a drift which is world-wide. But there remain many conditions reassuring to America.

If one of our American parties goes that way, there remains the other party—this is still a two-party country. And that is a real distinction between America and the totalitarian countries. Not until an attempt is made, or a tendency develops, to make America a one-party country—not until then need we be seriously alarmed. That reason for alarm does not so far exist.

Moreover, even if Mr. Roosevelt has dictator-like control over one of the country's great political parties, he does not have any such control over the country's legislative body, over Congress. Even if the Democrats here assembled in convention submit to his wishes, the same Democrats, in their capacity as Congressmen, do not submit to him at all. Again and again, in the present Congress, within a few months past, more than half the Democrats in the House have voted for legislation disliked by the President.

Again moreover, even if the Democrats here are ready to give Mr. Roosevelt a third nomination, they do it in no such spirit of ecstatic submissiveness as marks the relation between the European dictators and their respective parties. The Democrats here are going to renominate Mr. Roosevelt just because, and only because, it is the expedient thing to do. In the situation that has arisen, or been created by Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal intimates, it is not practicable to nominate someone else. That the party has been maneuvered into this position is resented or deplored by most of the Democrats here. Renominating Mr. Roosevelt is going to be no orgy of exalting such as marks the elevation of the totalitarian rulers by their respective parties and peoples.

NOW, WHILE ABANDONMENT of the tradition against a third term, by one of the country's great parties, is a definite departure from the American way, and in the direction of the totalitarian way; and while this departure is disturbing, there is something consoling in the spirit in which it is done. Distinctly, the psychology of authoritarian government does not exist among these delegates here at Chicago. Does that psychology exist among the people? It would be more dangerous there. About that, we shall know in November.

Evidently, and quite naturally, Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal aides who represent him here, want the nomination to come to him in the largest possible spirit of deference, of spontaneous acclaim. They want it to appear that Mr. Roosevelt was nominated by a grand outburst of spontaneous combustion.

Apparently they want the nomination made "by acclamation." Does the average reader know the difference between nomination by acclamation, and unanimous nomination? Does the difference really matter. Apparently the New Dealers think so.

To make a nomination unanimous is simple and frequent. After several candidates have been voted for, and after one has won, somebody moves, in a sporting spirit, to make the nomination unanimous. Everybody so votes, and the thing is done.

ACCLAMATION, I gather, means nomination without opposition. To accomplish that in this convention, it would be necessary for the other candidates to withdraw in advance of the first ballot. Then, with no other candidates existing, the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt would have a special quality of exaltation.

Key to this situation is Mr. Farley. On him the New Dealers bring pressure and persuasion. Mr. Farley still says he won't withdraw his name—there must be a ballot, with opportunity for his delegates to vote for him. Even if Mr. Farley should withdraw, there is Mr. Garner, with a number of delegates commended to him; and Senator Tydings with his Maryland delegation for him. The sum of all these delegates, other than Mr. Roosevelt's, is perhaps 150 out of a total of 1,094. That is not many, but it stands in the way of acclamation.

That the other candidates should refuse to withdraw their names; that there should be balloting, with opposition votes registered; in short, that the convention should follow regular routine—all that is preferred by delegates and leaders who are themselves for Mr. Roosevelt. They, in the present state of the world, do not like acclamation. Acclamation sounds too much like "Heil Roosevelt."

30,000 Died In Rotterdam

'Fiendish Assault'

THE NETHERLANDS Legation charged last night that the German air force killed 30,000 civilians, wounded 70,000 and destroyed one-third of Rotterdam in a deliberate, "fiendish assault" five minutes after the Dutch army capitulated.

In a formal statement, appended to a map smuggled out of Holland last week, the legation declared:

"It would seem inconceivable that the minds of supposedly civilized men could plan and order such an atrocious offense against humanity."

Dutch attaches explained that their army was handed a three-hour ultimatum that expired at 3 p. m. May 14. The ultimatum declared that Rotterdam and Amsterdam would be bombed from the air unless the army capitulated.

SHORTLY BEFORE 3 p. m., they said, the Dutch surrender was made known to the German high command.

It was claimed that the bombardment of Rotterdam began at 3:05 p. m. and lasted seven and one-half minutes. Amsterdam was not molested.

"The Germans," the statement continued, "say the planes were in the air and could not be called back.

"It is customary for all military planes to be equipped with radio and to be directed in their operations by radio. It cannot be believed that the German air force, so efficient in other respects, was deficient in this."

Rotterdam, the statement said, was a "helpless, open and defenseless city," and so immune under international law from attack at any time.

DR. H. R. VAN HOUTON, secretary of the Netherlands Legation, admitted that Dutch troops had been moved through the city, but he insisted that all troop movement had stopped before May 14.

He said that only a few regular troops and armed police were on guard against attacks by the 2,000 armed German inhabitants of the city and the 3,000 German troops who had landed by parachute to seize vital points and the Rotterdam airport.

All fighting, he said, had been confined to the outskirts of the city. The airport itself, he added, was beyond the city limits.

A blacked-out section of the map, signifying complete destruction, covered the entire downtown area, including the business, shopping and financial districts which contained the American consulate, the town hall, the stock exchange, banks, stores and about 5,000 residences.

"THE COOLSINGEL, the main street," the statement said, was a pile of rubble; the chief residential sections were wiped out; the greater part of the docks of the Holland-American Line and the luxury liner Statendam were destroyed.

"The crime against Rotterdam was a deliberate, fiendish assault on unarmed, undefended civilians. The world knows that Rotterdam is built on marshy soil and that therefore adequate underground bomb shelters could not be constructed. Of course the Germans knew this, too.

"Two groups of 27 planes each were responsible for this display of barbarism. They dropped 1,000-pound bombs. Nor can the bombardiers plead innocence on the ground of faulty aim. Rotterdam was not defended. No antiaircraft gun fired to hasten the bombers' work and spoil their aim."

The statement said that the planes were at an altitude of 4,500 feet, and added that "the final ghoulish touch" was the taking of aerial motion pictures "for terrorization purposes throughout the world."

"Indeed," it concluded, "an inspiring piece of propaganda and a cultural achievement to inaugurate what Hitler calls the dawn of the Nazi millennium."

The Burma Road

By Barnet Nover

Japan's Hopes Rise Anew

THE FAMOUS Burma Road is no great shakes as a highway. Compared with the Autobahnen of Nazi Germany or the magnificent highways of our own country it is nothing but a glorified cowpath. In the rainy season sections of it are completely washed out. Even in dry weather travel over it is fraught with great difficulties and hardships.

Considering the difficulties that stood in the way of its completion, however, the Burma Road is a fairly impressive piece of engineering. It extends for 700 miles from Rangoon, in Burma, to Kunming, in Yunnan province, where it joins with the road going to Chungking, China's temporary capital.

As points the road reaches an

COMRADE STALIN
Will Free China be pushed into his arms?

elevation of several thousand feet; in other places it drops steeply into mountainous valleys. But every bit of it was built by Chinese almost literally with their bare hands. It is, indeed, more than a road; it is a symbol of Chinese determination to preserve the independence of their nation at all costs.

ONE BY ONE the arteries connecting free China with the outside world have been severed by the Japanese or those who, like the French authorities in Indo-China, have submitted to Japanese dictation.

The major Pacific ports—Tientsin, Shanghai, Amoy, Canton—were lost long ago; even the minor ports through which war materials could be smuggled have largely been bottled up. There remained, until recently, three means of ingress and egress—the railroad from French Indo-China, the Burma Road and the extremely long and arduous route from Soviet Russia to the northwestern provinces of China.

Now there are only two and if, despite Chinese and American protests, the British carry out their announced intentions of closing the entrance to the Burma Road, free China will be effectively cut off from the outside world. She will have to depend on her own meager resources to carry on the war against Japan or throw herself on the tender mercies of Stalin or give up the struggle.

FOR JAPAN recent developments in Europe have opened up all manner of glamorous possibilities. French Indo-China, the Dutch East Indies, British Hongkong, the International Settlement and the French concession at Shanghai, the French and British islands in the South Seas, the Philippines—these look to Tokyo like rich plums ripe for Japan's picking.

Internationally, the situation is as favorable to Japan as it ever was or is ever likely to be again. France is prostrate, Great Britain fighting for her very existence, the United States in the midst of a Presidential election, the attention of Germany, Italy and Russia, fixed on European developments. No wonder, then, that a clamor has arisen in Japan that the Tokyo government take vigorous action to make Japan once and for all the undisputed master of Eastern Asia and the South Seas. And it is, no doubt, because of the suspicion prevalent among the more ardent spirits in the Japanese army that Premier Yonai was not acting vigorously enough that his fall and the fall of this government was brought about this week.

THE JAPANESE realize that if they are to act they must act quickly. Delay may be fatal. Should Great Britain survive the onslaught which threatens and emerge victorious, Japan would face a sad day of reckoning. But if the Nazis win, Hitler may exercise the right of conquest and take over the Far Eastern possessions of the nations he has conquered.

The trouble is that Japan does not enjoy a free hand. A very considerable part of her army is tied up in China, subjected to the constant attrition of guerrilla warfare. At least part of her navy has to be employed in blockade operations so that supplies from the outside will not reach the Chinese armies.

The prime necessity for Japan, therefore, is to make further Chinese resistance impossible. She has been unable to do so by military means. Chinese military power has not been destroyed and there is little likelihood that it can be destroyed by frontal attacks. She is now seeking to do so by strangling Chiang Kai-shek's armies by cutting off all means of entry into Free China. Should the Japanese succeed and succeed quickly in this endeavor they will have liberated their energies for new conquests—conquests at the expense, in part, of the very powers who hope by placating the Japanese to postpone or avert their elimination from the Far East.

The British government, it has been announced in London, is planning to close the Burma Road for three months; China's last route to the overseas world will thus be closed. The British position is fearfully difficult. It is hard to blame them for drawing in their horns in the Far East at this time. But this action by London, it must be recognized, instead of safeguarding British interests in the Far East, may only pave the way for the destruction of those interests.

The Japanese are making no bones of their plans. They are not bothering to take over Indo-China; not yet. They have only insisted that the French bar traffic in war materials on the Indo-China Railroad and that they be permitted to supervise the execution of this pledge by the French authorities. They know that if they quickly succeed in overcoming Chinese resistance by cutting off the flow of supplies to Chiang Kai-shek's armies they will be able to take Indo-China in their own good time. And they also know that it is far more important for them at this time to close the Burma Road than to take Honkkong.

Index of Commodities Rises in July 6 Week

A sharp rise in market prices for farm products and food, particularly livestock and poultry and meats, caused the Bureau of Labor Statistics' index of wholesale commodity prices to increase 0.5 per cent during the week ended July 6, the bureau reported.

The advance raised the all-commodity index to 77.5 per cent of the 1926 average from 77.1, the lowest level reached since early in September of last year.

U. S. No Longer Depends on Japan For Fly Spray

Prophets have long warned against an invasion of billions of house flies should strained relations develop between this country and Japan, since that country has a virtual monopoly on our supply of fly spray.

They may now relax.

Agriculture Department scientists at the Beltsville Research Center, who have been experimenting with pyrephrum among other things, revealed yesterday that this fly spray material may be produced domestically.

As Barkley Began Momentous Speech

The Nation Learns— Senator Alben Barkley, permanent chairman of the Democratic National Convention at Chicago, is shown on the speakers' platform in this general view as he began his eagerly awaited speech at the end of which he announced President Roosevelt's attitude on the third term. The President notified the convention through Senator Barkley that he has "no desire or purpose" to be a candidate for renomination and released delegates "to vote for any candidate"

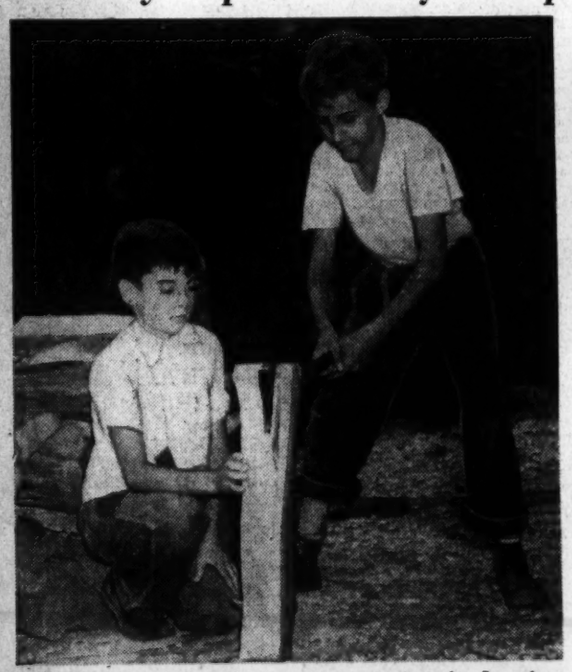
One-Day Explorers Play in Depths of Fort Dupont



1. To eat at the one-day camps one must work. Leander Ott holds the log and Duncan MacDonald chops. That works up . . .

FOR a day at a time, the whole outdoors—or at least as large a fraction as they can use at the moment—belongs to groups of boys and girls who're keeping their city addresses here, all summer.

"Day camps" are the answer to the question, "How can I be a city-dweller and an explorer at the same time?"

The busload of girls from Friendship House, who disembarked at its day camp at Fort Dupont yesterday, could not measure the journey in mere miles. In the short span to this National Parks area near Minnesota and Alabama avenues southeast, they had found a different world from the one they left at home.

In an expanse of woods, they cooked their own lunch and performed camp chores, trying to look hardy and dauntless as pioneers—or at least as their descendants might be expected to look.

Girls of 12 to 14 years of age go from Friendship House every Tuesday, while on Mondays a younger group, seven to 11 years old, get their taste of pioneering at the same spot. They return home in time for dinner—with adventures to overshadow even the dessert. A few boys join in the excursions.

Girl Scouts also go to Fort Dupont for their day camp from 9:30 a. m. to 4 p. m. Tuesday through Friday. Non-Scouts may join the group, which packs the day with hiking, archery, outdoor cooking, nature study and other activities. A small fee, amounting to only a few cents a day, is charged all the campers, and it includes a half-pint of milk each day.

From Georgetown Children's House, boys go to a day camp at Glover Park on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and girls on Wednesdays and Fridays.

The Boy Scouts' Camp Wilson at Burnt Mills, Md., will take in campers for a day as well as all summer, but only members of the organization are eligible.

Colored Girl Scouts go day-camping at Fort Mahan on Wednesdays and Thursdays each week till August 1. Non-members may register, and a small fee is charged for the entire group.

Mother-to-Be Should Avoid Reducing Diet

Calories Can Be Held To Actual Needs, but Let Doctor Decide

This is the second of Miss Kain's articles on diet for expectant mothers

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN THE expectant mother gains weight all out of proportion to the gain in new tissue formation, the excess is right on the hips after the baby arrives! So naturally the mother-to-be wishes to control her weight gains. Although a reducing diet should never be followed during this time, it is perfectly safe to restrict the calories to the actual requirements.

Since there is an increased demand for minerals, vitamins and protein, the protective foods in the daily menus must be greatly increased. The fats and the refined carbohydrates which supply calories only can be cut to the minimum to restrict the weight gain. But the calorie cut cannot be made in the foods which supply the essential building materials.

Vitamin A Essential

One question that frequently arises is whether skim milk can be used in place of whole milk. Both skim milk and buttermilk are lacking in Vitamin A and the need for this vitamin increases during pregnancy. From 5,000 to 10,000 units daily are recommended. The baby's teeth, both temporary and permanent, are largely formed before birth and their normal development demands not only a liberal supply of calcium and phosphorus, but also vitamins A, C and D. Whole milk is your best source of calcium and phosphorus as well as Vitamin A. The expectant mother needs daily: one quart of milk, one egg, one ounce of cheese and green and yellow vegetables. If skim milk is used, the diet must be supplemented with a vitamin A concentrate such as halliver oil.

Vitamin C is supplied in the three raw fruits, three raw vegetables and three cooked vegetables which must be used daily. Soda should not be added to the vegetables in cooking, and the water from the cooked vegetables should be utilized in soups, not thrown away.

To furnish adequate vitamin B, the bread and cereals must be of the whole grain, or dark variety. A dish of oatmeal in the morning, with whole milk, is an excellent source of vitamin B. If excessive weight gains make it necessary to restrict the bread and cereal, extra vitamin B-1 can be taken in the form of brewer's yeast tablets or thiamin. Ask your doctor about this.

Include Liver for Iron

Since the baby must store iron, the mother's diet should contain liver once or twice a week, and hard-cooked egg yolk, green, lean meats and whole grains daily.

The demand for calcium and phosphorus is excessive during the last 12 weeks, and the mother should have five glasses of milk daily. In addition, vitamin D must be supplied so that the minerals can be efficiently used. At least one tablespoon of codliver oil should be used daily. If the calories need to be curtailed the vitamin D can be taken in capsule form.

The complete protein needed for the building of new body tissues is furnished in milk, eggs, cheese and lean meats and these foods should also be used daily.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Couple Plans Loafing, Vagabond Motor Trip West; Then Three Friends Ask to Join Forces as Far As Their Respective Homes, En Route; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For some time, my husband and I have been planning an automobile trip to the West Coast: a leisurely jaunt, in which we would stop by the wayside wherever we chose and stay as long as we liked. We have looked forward to the trip as restful, interesting and entirely different from the rush of our every day life.

Now, three friends want to go with us, as far as their respective homes, at three different points—two in the Middle West and one farther west. If we were to accommodate them, we would not have to go out of our way more than 100 miles or so. But we feel that their presence would spoil the adventure, as we haven't definitely planned our route, and intended to let each day take care of itself.

Although these friends say they will take "pot luck" with us, we certainly couldn't spend several days in some spot that interested us, while knowing that they were eager to reach their destinations and begin their vacations. They can well afford to pay their own transportation and had planned to do so before they heard we were going. So far, we have made no agreement with them. We have said, only, that we haven't decided on our route. But we know they feel that we should take them.

After an exhaustive discussion this morning my husband said, "Why don't you write your pal, Miss Haworth?" Since I am, indeed, a follower of your column, I am asking your advice. What are the ethics governing such a question? Are we obliged to accommodate these friends? Or can we go off together on a lazy, loafing journey without branding ourselves as selfish? We don't care so much what they would think; but we don't want to be selfish with what we have. Sincerely,

AILEEN B. D.

Friends' Intrusiveness Should Be Check-Mated

DEAR A. B. D.: In my opinion, the ethics governing this situation are told in a nutshell in that proverb which says, "Charity begins at home." I think you and your husband are morally entitled to abide by your original plan and basic preference, even at the expense of disappointing your friends' blandly selfish expectations.

If it were a case (which it isn't) of one or all of them having a poignant desire or pressing need to get home—without being able to afford public utilities transportation—you might be said to have an altruist's obligation to consider their feelings before your own. But since they are urging a proposition which is designed to serve their whim merely, you will be entirely justified in ignoring or plain-spokenly dismissing it.

After Three Years Lover Turns Fickle

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For three years I have lived with the only man I'll ever love. He is 27, has been married, and has a child 7 years old. When we met, fell in love and started going together, he couldn't get a divorce. When he first suggested that we live together I was hurt and offended. It seemed a dreadful thing to do.

But as weeks passed and we were together constantly, I finally decided it was the only thing to do. We were so deeply in love, we thought it would be all right until he could get a divorce and marry me. That was three years ago. We have been happy together, always getting along fine except for a couple of disagreements, which were made up in a few minutes.

He always seemed to be crazy about me. He would do anything in the world for me, and showed his love and respect in every way: But in the last month he has been away from me, going regularly with another woman. He says he believes he is in love with her, but he isn't certain. He comes by to see me often.

Can he be in love with both of us? Or did he ever really love me? My people think we are legally married and I can't hurt them. He says he will tell them, but asks more time to make up his mind. Is there a chance of his coming back? If so, should I take him back? I am still in love with him in spite of all he has done to me. UNHAPPY.

Loyalty Is Impossible In One of His Kind

DEAR UNHAPPY: I daresay the man feels a strong sentimental attachment to you, that is the product of habitual, congenial association. He cares for you, I expect, as a man does who "loves" his wife without being "in love" with her. He knows your sweetness, trustfulness, dependency, etc.—but the time has come when his romantic passion is waning, and since there is no legal tie to bind him, it is altogether likely that he will drift away, first to one woman then another, until he is entirely lost to you.

Some may say that if you had insisted upon marriage before living with him, he might have remained faithful, after a fashion, even when the first fine careless rapture of feeling had faded. But in view of the fact that he was disloyal first to his estranged wife and, secondly, to you—it is logical to think that he is primarily sensual and fickle; that he observes no code of conduct save that which serves his selfish desires. Loyalty is not to be expected from one of his kind, either as husband or lover.

So my advice to you is to send him on his way, without protest or hysteria. Because of the kind of man he is, your relationship with him was doomed to a short life from the very start, but particularly so when you let him claim you without benefit of clergy. Also (if it is any consolation to you), in letting him go freely, in refusing to enact the role of rival to his current flame, you will be taking the one course of action designed to win him back, if there is any possibility of his coming back.

Learn to Write Advertising Copy By Home Course

HOW TO TURN a gift for writing into money is a problem for many talented young people. Is it your problem, too?

You may find the solution in advertisements which you see daily in newspapers and magazines, which you hear constantly over the radio. Men and women who have learned to write these ads receive good pay. They are in the enviable career class.

The best way to get into this interesting field is to learn how copywriters actually work.

If you are a copywriter in a store, for instance, you may be asked to write an advertisement for a chair—a special value.

A certain space is allotted, to include your copy and an illustration. What space each gets will be determined by a layout—a rough "picture" of the completed advertisement.

You may have only four or five lines of copy space, but before writing you line up the essential facts about the chair. Perhaps it's an "occasional" type; suitable for dining room or living room. The style is Sheraton lyre-back, the frame is hardwood in walnut or mahogany finish; the upholstery is cotton Brocatelle in a choice of colors.

Now take for your headline the fact which, combined with the low price, will attract your customer's attention: "Sheraton Occasional Chair, Today Only $12.50."

How to choose words that turn this attention into a desire to buy is told in our new 40-page booklet, "How to Write Advertising." Shows ways to get ideas for ads and how to write your copy. Explains advertising media, such as newspapers, magazines, radio; gives mechanical details of advertising; has 35 illustrations, including successful advertisements.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Write Advertising," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

For Career Girls

Too early for dead black, too late for sleazy little cottons, this tailored duPont spun rayon frock has a nice way of holding its shape during the heat of office hours. The dress features inverted box pleats, side button closings and a cool-notch collar. It is budget priced, too

Shirtwaists Help to Beat Trick Weather

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

GIRLS who work hard all day and haven't lavish budgets to dress on have found the shirtwaist dress almost an indispensable to their wardrobes. Particularly is the simple, neatly tailored shirtmaker type of dress a necessity during these hot days when flowery cottons feel cool but look hot and fussy.

MARSHALL ADAMS

The demand on the part of the American business woman for cool, crisp, inexpensive midsummer clothes has not been properly considered in the past. Just this year there has been an attempt on the part of some stylists to buy the in-between season clothing which should be as much a part of the Washington wardrobe as the erratic weather has been.

At the moment one of the best ways of beating the unseasonable weather is the crisply tailored spun rayon dress which is simple and functional enough not to be too conspicuous. Some stores have cagily reordered on this type of dress in both pastel and high shades for late July shoppers. Others have wisely given these frocks sale markings which help induce the buyer to pick up two of these "backbone" dresses for practically the price of one.

Which brings us to the matter of current sales. Every Friday, many of the stores have special selling days, called remnant day, green ticket day, one-fourth off day or the like. There is a definite psychology in buying during these days, for although, prices are often honestly slashed to move merchandise quickly so as to make room for new fashions, the temptation of any "bargain" is often more than most women can stand. They are too often influenced by an amusing gadget, "cute" neck trimming, odd belt, or bit of froufrou which may appeal at the moment but actually dates the dress as of the immediate season.

The one possible exception of sale merchandise items is the shirtwaist frock we mention since it will play just as important a part in the working or school girls' wardrobe next spring as it will during the remainder of the summer and the early fall.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Forgotten Woman

CHICAGO, July 16.—An appeal to the Democratic Party to come to the aid of downtrodden women of the United States was made here yesterday by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president of the Do Something About It League.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The famous reformer appeared before the platform committee of the convention to protest what she declared were "diabolical discriminations against the weaker sex." She was accompanied by Prof. Byron Bysshe Aspic, only man member of the league and internationally known champion of womanhood.

Mrs. DeGoofey demanded a platform plank to permit women to enter the Senators' cloakroom at the Capitol. She also asked that they be allowed to play golf at the Burning Tree Club and to enter the Army and Navy Club, the Cosmas and other men's clubs by the front door instead of being required to "sidle in, like servants, tradesmen and Delilahs."

Too Many Places 'For Men Only'

"There is virtually no place in Washington that man cannot go," declared Mrs. DeGoofey, yet women find doors closed against them everywhere."

Gov. Squash

Gov. Marmaduke Squash, a member of the committee, declared women did not belong in the rough world of the Senators' cloakroom.

"Woman's place," declaimed Gov. Squash is at the bridge table, the cocktail party, or under the hair drier in the beauty shop. Let her stay where she belongs."

"If all the people stayed where they belonged," retorted Mrs DeGoofey," you wouldn't be here. You would be back home calling hogs."

The reformer further demanded that the party adopt a plank requiring all men judges of beauty shows to qualify as Apollos. "It is a crying disgrace," she declared, "that women in bathing beauty contests should be appraised and judged by men who so often are flabby, pot-bellied, bald-headed, and in need of bridgework. Why should men who would look like either lobsters or scarecrows in bathing suits have the temerity to sit in judgment on defenseless women parading in beauty marathons?"

Would Gag Beach Critics

"It is also unfair that men of this type should be permitted to lie around on beaches and comment on women bathers who do not happen to be Ann Corios. I also [illegible] that the Democratic Party go on record to prohibit men with socks hanging down and shirt tails coming out from standing on street corners and criticising women for not having their stocking seams straight."

Other planks requested by Mrs. DeGoofey to help remove discriminations against women were:

Permission for women to elbow to the front in gangs watching street excavations or accidents and demonstrations in drug store windows.

Encouragement to the husbands of career women to appear at their wives' offices at exactly the hour the weekly pay checks are available.

Political Plum For Women

The upholding of wives in the right to leave the house at any hour day or night under pretext of going "down to the corner."

Mrs. DeGoofey also demanded that the office of second Vice President of the Nation be created and a woman named to fill it.

"What would a second Vice President do?" asked the Hon. Horatius Bingle, a member of the committee.

"She would take over the job of ornamenting the White House and thus permit the President's wife to be herself," was the reply. "If ornament the White House we must, let's have someone paid to do it."

"I am opposed to any such newfangled idea," protested the Hon. Bingle. "George Washington in his farewell address said nothing about such a plan."

"Women are not ready yet to be second Vice Presidents," broke in Gov. Squash. "They are not politically matured enough."

"I challenge that statement!" shouted Prof. Aspic," taking off his coat. "That is an insult to womanhood!"

In the uproar that followed, the meeting was adjourned. Mrs. DeGoofey, who posed for photographers later, declared she would take her fight to the convention floor.

Take Care of Ears While Bathing

One of the hazards of bathing, whether in lake water or the ocean, is the likelihood of water entering the ears and causing infection or inflammation. Polluted water may enter the ear and set up a very painful condition on the lining of the ear and the surface of the eardrum.

If dirty water gets into the ear, steps should be taken at once to remove it. Usually this may be done by having the person lie down, allowing the water to run out. Drawing the external ear upward and backward will straighten the canal and help the process. The canal may be dried by means of a bit of absorbent cotton wound on a probe or wooden applicator. A few drops of alcohol dropped into the external ear canal will help to dry it.

In bathing, effort should be made to keep water out of one's ears. It it does get in and is not removed, the resulting complications referred to should have prompt attention.

Crab Ravigote a Dish to Inspire Poets

BIRTHDAY atmosphere was a part of last Saturday night's activities on the popular Starlight Roof of the Roger Smith Hotel. At intervals during the evening the orchestra played "Happy Birthday" to five persons who were celebrating birthdays. Among the guests at birthday dinner parties I noted Capt. and Mrs. H. W. Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Van Buehl Emerick, Ralph Denham, Miss Peggy Brand and Col. Bynam Cash. And a bride and groom, too, came in for a tribute of special music.

A bright moon and stars, a lovely view of the Potomac, the twinkle of lights from Washington's skyline and interesting food contributed to the success of the evening.

Crab ravigote was a food of my choice at dinner. This is a dish that has such distinction as to merit being a part of one of the poems of the French writer Ducerceau. The crab capital of the world is literally under the shadows of the Capitol dome. This means that crab meat in Washington is fresh at all times. I don't know how the dish was made that it so inspired the French poet, but the savory way Chef Louis makes it is as follows:

Crab Ravigote

Blend 2 cupfuls crabmeat, the whites of 2 hardcooked eggs, finely chopped, 1 tablespoon tomato catchup, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 2 tablespoons French dressing, 2 tablespoons minced pickles, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon paprika. Pack the mixture into the cleaned crab shells and garnish with the yolks of 2 eggs that have been pressed through a sieve, a few capers, lemon wedges, strips of pimiento and parsley.

A WOMAN'S

Woman Guide Has Never Made Same Talk Twice; Speaks Her Patrons' Lingo

PORTIA VAILEY is that rare phenomenon—a guide without a spiel. She has been conducting tourist parties around Washington and Alexandria since last fall and boasts that she has never given the same talk twice. She is, she believes, the only woman licensed and insured to drive her customers' cars. Her fee is $10 a day.

Portia Vailey

Her guiding service is a by-product of intensive research into Washington history. She confounded her examiners at the hack inspector's office, where she applied for her license, by telling them about such details as the Indian tribes that once inhabited this area. At the close of the interview the examiners told her, "Lady, if all you've said isn't true, at least it's the best line we've ever heard."

Experience as a speech teacher makes it possible for her to imitate her clients' accents, no matter where they're from, or how sketchy their education, and she thus helps them feel at home. One young man, impressed by his visit to the Lincoln Memorial, told her enthusiastically he thought more people should know the "Jettysburg" Address in times like these. "I feel the same way about the Jettysburg Address," she answered, and the two got along fine.

SHOPPING AROUND—A dowager straight from one of Peter Arno's cartoons had completed a purchase and asked the salesgirl to have the package mailed out of town. "What address, please?" asked the girl.

Address? Let me see—I have so many," the customer replied perplexedly. "Oyster Bay? No. White Sulphur? No . . ." She finally decided she would be at her Los Angeles hotel by the time the package arrived.

Mrs. Bulkley Griffin tells of overhearing one end of a telephone conversation between her maid and a friend. The two apparently were comparing notes on their mistresses. She heard the girl chuckle and then say, "Yas' Mrs. Griffin is more peculiar that way than most people."

She hasn't had the courage to ask the girl which of her peculiarities was under discussion.

The foundations of the Folger Library trembled recently when a man with a wild look in his eye came in and announced he planned to do some research. The librarian asked what branch of Shakespeariana he wished to pursue. "I intend to prove that Shakespeare was really Bacon," said the heretic.

Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, art editor of the Democratic Digest, is the wife of a former Republican Governor of New York and the mother of three Republican children. Moreover, she summers in Newport. As Thelma Cudlipp Grosvenor, she is well known in the illustrating world. She directs the art work of the Digest from New York, telephones Washington almost daily.

From Strip-Teaser To Homemaker

She was the highest-paid artist in burlesque, then she starred in the Ziegfeld Follies. After that, Hollywood, to be starred in five pictures at $2,000 a week.

But all that's "out" now. Gypsy Rose Lee, christened Louise Hovick, address, Highland Mills, N. Y., swears that, although she is determined to make her mark as a serious actress, she is going to distinguish herself simultaneously as a housewife.

"I love to do the laundering, too," she said. "As a matter of fact, the best dialogue for a book I'm going to write has been thought out while I sat at my ironer."

Gypsy Rose Lee's transformation to a genuine homemaker didn't stop with her showing her ability at washing and ironing, either. She boasts that she makes draperies, puts up jelly, tacked down a carpet when a decorator failed her and even painted the henhouse!

Helen Gahagan Steals The Show in Chicago

Hollywoodite Entertains at Large Tea For Mrs. Grady Whose Post as National Committeewoman She Will Take Over

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Chicago, July 16.—Helen Gahagan, imported from Hollywood to add dash and glamour to the Democratic convention, took over the social spotlight this afternoon when she feted Mrs. Henry F. Grady at a large tea at the Palmer House. The Brooklyn-born girl, who is known in private life as Mrs. Melvyn Douglas, never had a screen or stage role that got her more attention than the current political drama in which she has a leading part.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

Not only is she an alternate delegate from California, but she is also the newly-named Democratic National committeewoman who soon will take over duties from the retiring committeewoman, Mrs. Grady.

At Convention Hall, cameras flashed continuously in the direction of both Miss Gahagan and Mrs. Grady, who have seats near each other on the platform. The two make a perfect study in contrasts, the only similarity between them being their Irish names and a graciousness that seems to characterize most women in the Western delegations.

Miss Gahagan, towering above the tiny woman who was her honor guest this afternoon, wore a simple frock of buttercup yellow wool crepe with a narrow white collar. A broad-brimmed hat, trimmed in white, a natural linen purse, and low-heeled brown suede shoes completed her costume. Only Hollywood touch in her appearance was noted in her brown hair, worn in a typical Greta Garbo bob.

Melvyn Douglas Disappoints Ladies

To the disappointment of several hundred feminine guests, most of whom hailed from California, Melvyn Douglas did not turn out for the party. Reports had it that he was buzzing about with members of his delegation. There was also a rumor that he may have to fly back to the West Coast tomorrow or next day to resume work in a motion picture. In case he does, his attractive wife will move off the convention platform and take her place with the California delegation.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who boosts the third term every chance she gets, was among the luminaries at the tea. Others there included Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, who pointedly declines to discuss politics in any shape or form; Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, stopping over for the convention for a day before going on to Denver to visit relatives, and many others. The tea table was appropriately centered with a donkey molded in pale yellow wax, to match a cluster of candles on either side, as well as Miss Gahagan's frock. These Democrats don't do things by halves.

Rumor has it that before Miss Gahagan accepted the appointment as national committeewoman she conferred with Mrs. Grady on whether the job would be an expensive one.

"Cost me about $6,000," said Mrs. Grady. The price of a secretary, postage and trips across the country come out of the committeewoman's pocket. Nobody else pays the bill. Well, Miss Gahagan took the job anyway. And when she walks before the microphone tomorrow morning to read a poem before the convention she will be introduced by her new title. You can count on it, however, that her Hollywood connections won't be overlooked. Incidentally, her failure to fill her part on this morning's program, when she was to sing the National Anthem, was due to the fact she discovered the organ is too far away from the stage. She'll speak her piece tomorrow.

Mrs. Grady Takes to 'Mike'

Mrs. Grady had her round at the microphone this evening when she stepped before a crowded convention hall to voice a resolution of recognition for Democratic Chairman James A. Farley. She brought down the house and got as much applause as has any speaker thus far. More than most.

Another center of attention at this evening's session was Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, whose husband gave the principal address. Trimly turned out in a dark blue frock, with a touch of white at the throat, she escaped the notice of photographers earlier in the evening when she unobtrusively slipped into her ringside seat.

Attending conventions is getting to be an old story with Mrs. Barkley. At breakfast this morning she told me, eyes twinkling, that every time she went to one, she swore it would be her last.

"There I was down home in Kentucky, having the time of my life, when the family began urging me to come to Chicago. And I did. But it's all too strenuous for me," she added with a broad smile that told you she loves the whole show, regardless.

Yesterday afternoon, however, she took time off to go to a ball game, and she hopes to see at least one more before the convention ends. There's absolutely no use trying to keep up with a husband who has a conference every time he turns around, and Mrs. Barkley never was one to try to wedge her way into smoke-filled rooms.

The problem of how a wife of a convention official entertains herself is much the same, whether there's a convention on or not. But it's no problem at all for Mrs. Barkley. "If that bothers any wife," she said, "the thing for her to do is to have a lot of grandchildren. I have five, and keeping up with them keeps me well entertained."

Gossip Gathered Here and There

Convention chatter: Mrs. Paul V. McNutt is registered at the Edgewater Beach Hotel under the name of "Mrs. Neely." A couple of reporters posted in the lobby there thought they had something the first time Mr. McNutt appeared at the desk and asked for the key to Mrs. Neely's suite.

An earnest but inquisitive woman bustled up to a convention delegate in the lobby of the Blackstone Hotel and engaged him in a bit of light-hearted conversation.

"I've often wondered," she said coyly, "just how I could get to be a convention delegate."

"Simple enough," came the answer. "Just marry a postmaster."

Mrs. Millard Tydings will entertain at a tea tomorrow afternoon at the Palmer Huse, most of her guests being members of the Maryland State delegation.

Mrs. James Slattery will be a luncheon hostess tomorrow at the Athletic Club. And, of course, there's the Le Ray Berdeau party at the Blackstone Hotel tomorrow evening.

They Like It Here in Summer

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

MR. AND MRS. Algernon Davy and their young daughter, Mary, have arrived in Virginia by motor from their former home in Carpenteria, Calif. They have leased the home of Mrs. Plunket Stewart, near The Plains, for the summer.

In the fall they will move into their new home on the Snickersville Pike, which has been under construction since early last spring. George L. Howe, of Washington, is the architect for this lovely old house, which is built of red brick.

Virginians are delighted that Mr. and Mrs. Davy have selected this neighborhood as their home, as they have made many friends on visits here. Mrs. Davy is the sister of Mrs. Holland Potter, of Middleburg. The Potters were headline news this spring, when their race horse, Misty Meadow, won the first race at Pimlico in May. Misty Meadow has won other races for his owners and will be raced this fall on the Maryland tracks.

AT CAMP CARYSBROOK, near Christiansburg, Va., for the summer are the Misses Elizabeth Beverley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Beverley; Jean Randolph, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Randolph, Brooke Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. B Harris, all of Berryville; Susan Richards Glasscock and Mary Howe Glasscock, whose parents are the Thomas Glasscocks; Anne Lee Ely, daughter of Mrs. Hanson Ely, all of Upperville, and Anne Turner Glasscock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richards Glasscock, of Warrenton. The camp is run by Miss Caperton Preston.

MRS. JAMES A. JOYCE TAFT, of California, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Roger Lambdon, at their home between Middleburg and The Plains. Mrs. Taft is a native of Loudoun County, Va. Some years ago she married the late Howard Leith, brother of Louie Leith, of Middleburg, and they went to live in California. This is the first time she has been back to Virginia, and is busy renewing old friendships. The Lambdons entertained at luncheon for her the other day.

Royalty II, from the stables of Ernest Redmon, of Midleburg, will be entered in several classes at the Rappahannock County Horse show on Friday and Saturday. The horse won the show championship last year. Other Redmon entries will include Rascality and Glamour Man, two lovely chestnut horses which have been big winners for two seasons. Also exhibiting will be Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Llangollen Stables, Mrs. Dorothy N. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, North Fletcher, Alex Calvert.

MRS. FAIRFAX HARRISON has issued invitations to an afternoon party on Friday at her home, Belvoir, near The Plains. Honor guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Jason Paige, who recently came here from Chicago to live, and have brought an old home, Carrington, in Farquier County. While this residence is being modernized, the Paiges have been living at Edenburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard B. Jones, of Washington, are spending the summer at their lovely home, Audley, near Berryville.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones gave a children's party on Sunday in honor of their son, Charles, jr., whose birthday it was. Mr. and Mrs. Milton McCoy celebrated the birthday of their daughter, Carolyn, yesterday afternoon at Burrland Farm.

MR. AND MRS. J. M. R. Packard, of Philadelphia, left yesterday after a visit with Col. and Mrs. John C. Butler, at Kelvedon Farm, near Rectortown. Col. and Mrs. Butler gave a dinner on Monday in honor of Mrs. T. Walter Fred, of Lexington, Ky., who is visiting Middleburg, her former home.

Mrs. Richard Thompson, of Richmond, is the guest of Mrs. George Slater, at Rose Hill, near Upperville. Mrs. Thompson is having extensive work done at Waverly, an old house she owns near Marshall, which was formerly owned by Lawrence Washington and his family.

Nancy Strong's Debut October 26

Mr. and Mrs. Alden Strong, who announced recently that they would present their daughter, Miss Nancy Strong, to society on Friday, October 25, have changed the date to Saturday, October 26. She will bow at a tea dance at the Army and Navy Country Club.

Miss Strong has remained in Washington with her family so far this summer, but expects to leave later for a visit to New Hampshire.

Mrs. Cecil Here to See Husband Who Is Ill

Mrs. Joseph Cecil has come from her home in Falmouth, Mass., to be with Col. Cecil, who is ill at Walter Reed Hospital. It is reported that the colonel is improving.

Mrs. Cecil expects to spend about a week here and will then return to Falmouth.

Miss Mathews Will Be Bride

Mr. and Mrs. George Newman Mathews, of Bradley boulevard, Chevy Chase, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Patricia Mathews, to Kenneth E. Berry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Xen Berry, of Chicago.

Miss Mathews was educated in

MISS MATHEWS

Dallas, Tex., and in London, where she was when the war broke out. Mr. Berry is a graduate of Northwestern University and is now attending the National Law School.

The couple plan to be married in the fall.

Zeva Fish Loses 4-Inch Sapphire. Diamond Bar Pin

Has anyone stumbled across a 4-inch bar pin of sapphires and diamonds lately? Mrs. Hamilton Fish, wife of the New York Representative, would like to know. Her attractive debutante daughter, Miss Zeva Fish, lost the jewelry several weeks ago, and has just now informed her mother of the fact. Miss Fish is now vacationing at a ranch in the West.

Mr. Fish is looking in on the Democratic convention in Chicago, but his wife, who was present at the Republican, decided to skip this one. She is very pleased that her son, Chapin Rogers, has enrolled for his third successive year at Plattsburg, N. Y., where several hundred businessmen have volunteered for training.

Representative Fish himself will spend some time at a Reserve Officers' camp in August, and his wife hopes to wedge a vacation in sometime before the summer ends.

Announce Troth

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coleman Paxton announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Patricia Paxton, to Richard Worthington Hummer, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Hummer. The wedding will take place on August 3 in St. Mary's Chapel of the Washington Cathedral.

Mr. and Mrs. Joyce Are on Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vincent Joyce, jr., are on their honeymoon and following it will make their home in Indianapolis, Ind. The marriage of the former Miss Anna Elizabeth Blandford, daughter of James Benson Blandford, took place on July 6 in St. James' Church in Hyattsville, Md.

Palms, white gladioli and candles decorated the altar and sanctuary. Miss Honor Keene, organist, played throughout the ceremony and Reeves Blandford and Mrs. William Hanna, cousins of the bride, rendered several selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white organdy gown with a fitted bodice, with inserts of lace, square neckline and short puffed sleeves. The bouffant skirt ended in a train. Her four-tiered finger-tip veil was held by a cluster of twisted seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white carnations.

Miss Mary Blandford, sister of the bride, wore a pink bouffant organdy dress similar to that of the bride. She wore a shoulder length veil in a matching shade and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. James Douglas and Mrs. John Burch. They wore orchid and blue organdy dresses, respectively. The frocks were made with bouffant skirts and fitted basques. They wore matching veils and carried bouquets of pink carnations.

Miss Jane Joyce, sister of the bridegroom, served as flower girl. She wore a buttercup yellow frock with a matching bonnet. She carried an old-fashioned nosegay.

Joseph Joyce, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man, the ushers were Kip Edwards, of Silver Spring; James Michael Lanigan, Henry Kimball and John Burch, of Berwyn, Md.

Immediately following the wedding there was a reception at the Alpha Omicron Pi House, College Park, Md. A breakfast for the wedding party followed. When the couple left for their honeymoon the bride wore a rose and gray frock with white accessories and a corsage of orchids.

The Barbours To Give Haven To Refugees

Irish Cousins Send Their Children Here 'For the Duration'

Among the many Washington residents who will have a little refugee in their home next winter are Senator and Mrs. Warren Barbour, of New Jersey. The Senator has some Irish cousins, who are sending over their children "for the duration." They will land in a week or so, and one will go to Mrs. Barbour and another to her sister, who is also her sister-in-law, Mrs. Thomas Barbour, of Boston.

Another sister of Mrs. Barbour, Mrs. Sidney Lee, is planning a vacation trip for August. She has been in Washington the entire summer, but expects to leave August 2 to visit her brother, who during the warm months occupies an apartment over the garage of the Barbour home in New Jersey. She will stay with friends in Long Island and Vermont before returning to Washington shortly after Labor Day.

Mrs. Lee is among the many Washington women who are actively working for the American Friends of France.

Miss Johns Wed To Mr. Armiger

The First Methodist Church at Hyattsville, Md., was the scene of the wedding last evening of Miss Gladys Virginia Johns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Davison Johns, of Beltsville, Md., to Walter Hamilton Armiger, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Armiger.

The Rev. Glenn Cooper, of Beltsville, officiated in a setting of palms and tall baskets of white gladioli. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of Chantilly lace over heavy ivory satin, fashioned with a tight bodice, and a full skirt which fell into a fan shaped train. Her two-tiered tulle veil was held by a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried white orchids and roses. Her only ornament was a strand of pearls and a diamond pin which the bridegroom's great grandfather had given to his bride.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Johns served as maid of honor for her sister, wearing white dotted marquisette with a gathered bodice and full circular skirt. A coronet of flowers in her hair matched her bouquet of salmon pink gladioli and blue delphiniums.

Miss Virginia Alice Omo and Mrs. Leslie Landrum were bridesmaids, dressed like the maid of honor and carrying similar bouquets. The bride's young sister, Miss Marjorie Ruth Johns, served as junior bridesmaid, attired in floorlength white embroidered organdie and carrying yellow roses to match the flowers in her hair. Flower girls were Barbara Jean Hughes and Nancy Woodfield, also in white and carrying fan-shaped baskets trimmed with garden flowers.

Raymond Leisinger, of Washington, was best man, and the ushers were Ademar Weingartner, Morris Newman, Theodore Sellman and John Rodier.

A large reception at the Johns home followed the ceremony. Assisting were Mrs. Lee Sellman, Miss Mary Ann Westcott, Mrs. Theodore Sellman, Miss Virginia Windisch, Mrs. Lyle Bock, Miss Georgis Nordeen, Miss Betty Jeffers and Mrs. Harvey Lanier.

Mrs. Johns wore French blue lace with a corsage of white orchids and the bridegroom's mother chose dusty rose chiffon with orchids.

Both Mr. Armiger and his bride are graduates of the University of Maryland in the class of 1937. After a motor trip in the South, they will be at home in their new residence on Montgomery road, Beltsville.

Virginia Wesner Will Be Married To M. L. Whitehead

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Galhuly, of Chevy Chase, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Virginia Wilhelmina Wesner, to M. Leyden Whitehead, son of Mr. and Mrs. Waldo M. Whitehead, of Bradford, Pa., and this city.

The marriage will take place Saturday, August 3, at 8 o'clock at All Saints Episcopal Church in Chevy Chase with the Rev. John W. Tuton, of Emanuel Church, Baltimore, and cousin of the bridegroom, officiating.

After the ceremony there will be a reception at Wardman Park Hotel for close friends and relatives of the two families. The matron of honor will be Mrs. Louis F. Bohraus, of Alexandria, Va. Bridesmaids will be Miss Winifred Pickens, Miss Janet Eldridge, Miss Olga Furbershaw, and Mrs. Ward Kennedy.

Wilson Whitehead will serve as best man. Ushers will be Louis F. Bohraus, Ward Kennedy, Casper McClelland, and Horace Neilson.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

IN WASHINGTON these days all conversations turn sooner or later to the subject of refugees and almost everyone one meets has some friend or relative who is being chased about Europe by the Juggernaut of war.

One of the most recent American refugees to arrive in Washington is Mrs. Seton Porter, who escaped from France via Lisbon and the Clipper. Mrs. Porter is the former Mrs. Herman Harjes, whose first husband was a partner in the Morgan Harjes Bank—now Morgan & Co.—in Paris and who was killed in a polo accident in the south of France.

Lunching with the French Ambassador the other day, Mrs. Porter had many nice things to say about the kindness of the Portugese whose country is filled to overflowing with refugees. New arrivals from the war zones are greeted with the greatest sympathy, though each one means that much less food and space for the already crowded Portugese. Porters and taxi drivers rush to assist the weary travelers, making no difference between those who arrive solvent and and those who are penniless.

AMONG THOSE waiting in Lisbon for a place on the Clipper is the mother of Countess Lasocka who will join her daughter in Washington as soon as she can get the much-coveted transportation.

And, speaking of refugees, probably the most glamorous of all are the Duke and Duchess of Windsor who will find a warm welcome waiting for them in the Bahamas. Judging by their past popularity, even the children will take an interest in them. I remember that soon after the wedding of the former King and Wallis Simpson I was visiting in a house where there were two little girls aged 12 and 14.

One day these children came to me with round eyes and said, "Mother tells us that you used to know the Duchess." When I said that was correct, the girls said shyly that they had several young friends who would like to meet me. Whereupon they ushered in four more feminine Wallis fans armed with autograph albums, and I solemnly entered my name in their lists of the famous, simply in virtue of the fact that I knew the Duchess "when."

PICNICKING IS, next to garden-sitting, Washington's favorite summer sport and a popular scene for picnics is Annapolis, where one can hire a boat to spend a few refreshing hours on Chesapeake Bay. In a group from Washington the other day were Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Miss Anne Perin, Miss Rebecca Wellington, Harry Covington, Stephanus Morrus and Llewellyn Thompson.

OTHERS WHO WERE picnic and Annapolis minded on the same day were Count and Countess Lasocki, Countess Baillet-Latour, Baron James Baeyens, M. and Mme. Dal Pia, Sherry McAdam and Commander and Mrs. Bennett Wright. The Wrights have recently come to Washington to live and have already made many friends.

Mrs. Wright, who comes from San Francisco, is a most attractive person with a slim, chic figure, liquid brown eyes and an expressive and sympathetic way of talking. Her graphic description of the sufferings of the migrants who fled from the "dust bowl" in search of food and work made us realize that America too has its refugees who desperately need help.

MR. AND MRS. Jouett Shouse drove down to Gibson Island yesterday to be the guests of the Corrin Strongs at the fete which was given for the benefit of the local church and for the British war relief. On the day's program was a swimming and cocktail party at the Strongs' and water sports for the youngsters in the afternoon, and a dinner-dance at the Gibson Island Club at night. The Shouses, while loth to leave the beauties of their Virginia farm, will probably take a trip to California in August.

Margaret Hatke Widely Feted

Miss Margaret Elizabeth Hatke, who will be married July 20 at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel to Lieut. Richard Henry Free, U. S. A., is being widely feted by her many friends.

This evening Miss Betty Campbell will give a dinner party at her home on Reno road for the couple. Yesterday the Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority of George Washington University, of which Miss Hatke is a member, gave a linen shower for her.

Miss Justine Sampson, who will be maid of honor, gave a party for the pair on Saturday at the home of her mother, Mrs. Odiorne Sampson. She was assisted by her sister, Mrs. James McSherry Wimsatt, Miss Betty Campbell and Miss Winifred Dudley, of Annapolis, who has been visiting the Sampsons. After the party the group adjourned to the Army-Navy Country Club for dancing.

Arnold Welles Visiting Friends In New Hampshire

Arnold Welles, son of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, is at the Balsams, Dixieville Notch, N. H., in the heart of the White Mountains. He is visiting two golfing friends, Jack Ross, former pro at the Creek Club, Locust Valley, Long Island, and his assistant, Teddy Averson, from whom young Mr. Welles takes lessons.

A recent graduate of Yale, Mr. Welles headed almost directly after commencement for the resort. Teacher Ross has numbered among his other pupils the Duke of Windsor, J. Pierpont Morgan, John W. Davis and Harvey Gibson.

Mrs. Merrill To Give Luncheon For Bridal Group

Prides Crossing, Mass., July 16. Mrs. Keith Merrill and her daughter, Miss Rosemary Merrill, of Washington and Prides Crossing, will give a luncheon today at Avalon, their home here, in honor of the attendants for the wedding, Saturday, of Ruth Weyburn and Henry Seabury Parker, jr.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyon Weyburn, of Boston and Prides Crossing. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Seabury Parker, of Hewlett, Long Island, and New York. Miss Merrill will be bridesmaid at the wedding, which will be one of the most important of the season in this vicinity.

Ray Athertons Go to Seashore

Ray Atherton, who holds the combined titles of Minister to Denmark and Chief of the Western European Section of the State Department, has gone to the Oceanside Hotel, Magnolia, Mass., for a rest. Mrs. Atherton accompanied him.

The Athertons returned last month from Copenhagen, where they were during the German invasion. Mr. Atherton will be back at his desk here in about two weeks.

Caroline Wickliffe Will Be Wed Today To Haitian Aide

The Secretary of the Legation of Haiti, Jacques Carmeleau-Antoine, will marry Miss Caroline Mitchell Wickliffe, of Los Angeles, today.

Mr. Antoine is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Antoine, of Port au Prince. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Woodson Wickliff, of San Francisco, Calif.

The couple will be married at the legation at 4 o'clock in a civil service with the Minister, Elie Lescot, officiating. A ceremony by a Catholic priest will follow.

Dr. and Mrs. Ellicott To Visit Bay Head, N. J.

Dr. and Mrs. V. L. Ellicott will leave Friday for Bay Head, N. J., where they will be the week-end guests of Judge and Mrs. J. Edgar Murdock.

On Saturday afternoon they will be guests at the wedding of Mrs. Ellicott's cousin, Lyttleton Purnell, of Baltmiore, and Miss Josephine Warfield. The marriage will take place in Spring Lake, N. J.

Several parties are being planned for the wedding party and out-of-town guests. On Friday night Dr. and Mrs. Ellicott will attend a dinner party and on Saturday they will be luncheon guests. Dr. Ellicott is the Montgomery County health officer.

Harley Lucketts On Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Harley Luckett are on their wedding trip following their marriage here July 7 in Ninth Street Christian Church.

The bride is the former Miss Laura Anne Harbin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harbin. Mr. Luckett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Luckett. The Rev. Clifford H. Jope officiated at the ceremony. Palms and baskets of white flowers, intermingled with orange gladioli adorned the church.

The bride wore a white mousseline de soie gown. Her fingertip length veil was held by a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses, lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Mrs. Jennie E. Finnotti, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a chartreuse net gown with matching hat and gloves. Her nosegay was of mixed flowers.

Miss Gladys Hendricks, gowned in blue net with matching hat, peach gloves and a nosegay of mixed flowers, served as bridesmaid as did Miss Thelma Wynn. She wore a peach net frock with matching hat and carried a mixed bouquet. Donald B. Finnotti served as best man.

Mrs. Harbin, mother of the bride, wore a salmon-colored gown with a corsage of talisman roses. Mrs. Luckett had selected a blue gown with yellow roses. They received with the young couple at the reception which followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Noyeses to Camp In Canadian Woods

Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes have left for Canada to spend several weeks at their camp in the woods, a good few miles away from civilization.

Mr. and Mrs. Noyes have been staying with her mother, Mrs. George Barnett, occupying a cottage on her estate, Wakefield Manor, in Virginia. Mrs. Barnett, who entertains a succession of guests there, had with her over the last week-end Mrs. English Gordon. Mrs. Buchanan Merryman is planning to spend next week-end there.

Helen L. Kaylor Wed To Dr. Harry Bowie

Miss Helen Louise Kaylor and Dr. Harry Clay Bowie were married in Hagerstown at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Kaylor, on Saturday. The Rev. J. Edward Harms officiated. The bride is dietitian at the Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, and the bridegroom, son of Mrs. Blanche G. Bowie, La Plata, Md., is a resident surgeon at the University of Maryland Hospital, Baltimore.

Sorority Members Come and Go as Conventions Meet

Sororities and conventions are almost synonymous words at this season. Members of local chapters of Phi Delta Delta, international legal sorority, are preparing to leave on Friday for Portland, Ore., to attend their annual conclave, while members of Chi Sigma, a national group, are gathering here for their convention, opening formally tomorrow at the Mayflower Hotel. Among those going to the Phi Delta Delta sessions in Portland are (at the right), Miss Katherine Louise Vaux, international vice president (right), and Miss Irene Vivian Wright, business manager of the organization's quarterly publication. (Below, left to right) Miss Ardis Blackburn Kaufman, retiring president of Zeta Chapter, Phi Delta Delta; Miss Burmah Miller, retiring secretary of Alpha Lambda Chapter, and Miss Georgina Bingert, convention delegate from Beta Chapter. (At the left, left to right) Officers of Chi Sigma, ready for the convention here, are Mrs. Irene Cribbs, of this city, editor; Mrs. Dorothy Walker, of Collingswood, N. J., president; Mrs. Helen VanArsdale, vice president, and Mrs. Loretta McCleery, secretary, both of Washington.

Biennial Convention Opens on July 26 In West Coast City

FOUR LOCAL CHAPTERS of Phi Delta Delta International Legal Fraternity will send delegations to the eleventh biennial convention of the fraternity at the Multnomah Hotel in Portland, Oreg., July 26, 27 and 28. The Washington group will include many of the fraternity's national officers.

Miss Catherine L. Vaux, national vice president ("Kitty" to local Phi Deltas, is planning to fly as far as Chicago, where she will meet Mrs. Mildred Bergeron, of Cleveland, national president, and Mrs. Nedra Bywater, of New Orleans, second vice president. The group will continue west on the Portland Streamliner, attending a meeting of the executive committee before formal opening of the convention.

Mrs. Alice Barry Freer, national recorder, also plans to make the trip by plane. Both she and Miss Vaux are members of the Washington alumnae chapter. Others from the alumnae chapter include Mrs. Ruth Hildebrand, who left Washington last week for a leisurely trip across the country, and Miss Anne Moe, who has been named alternate for the alumnae.

Miss Irene Vivian Wright, business manager of the Phi Delta Delta Magazine, and former president of Alpha Lambda Chapter, will leave Washington Friday, stopping for a brief visit at her former home in Detroit, Mich. Other Alpha Lambdas going to the convention include Miss Burmah Miller, delegate, and Miss Mabel Ross, alternate.

Zeta Chapter, of George Washington University, will be represented by Miss Eileen O'Connor, who is now in California and will go from there to the convention. Miss Mary Martin is alternate for Miss O'Connor.

Mrs. Marie Allen, newly elected president of Beta Chapter, at Washington College of Law, is delegate for that chapter. Miss Margaret Heimiller, alternate, and Miss Nora Rentz may also attend.

PHI DELTA DELTA was founded at the University of Southern California, November 11, 1911. Besides the four Washington chapters, 50 other have been chartered in leading law schools throughout the United States and Canada. Over 1,600 women, many of the Nation's most prominent women attorneys in private practice, with the Government, or holding State and county offices, are members of the organization.

Prominent local members include Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, honorary national president; Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court; Judge Marion Harron, of the U. S. Board of Tax Appeals; Miss Annabel Matthews, former president of the Women's Bar Association; Miss Pearl McCall, former assistant district attorney, and Judge Mary O'Toole. The membership also includes outstanding women in commercial fields and research activities.

Phi Delta Delta publishes a quarterly legal magazine, and the program of the fraternity for study and research includes taxation, restatement of the law, juvenile delinquency, probation and parole

MORE WORKERS NEEDED—More workers are needed in the D. A. R. production unit of the American Red Cross, which works at the Chapter House Thursday mornings, beginning at 9:30. The surgical dressings unit is meeting on Thursday mornings also at the Walsh Mansion, on Massachusetts avenue.

Mrs. George W. McIver is chairman of Red Cross activities for the District D. A. R., and chapter chairmen will report to her in September and December as to the work of their memberships.

Many of the D. A. R. members became affiliated with other units before a special D. A. R. group had been formed. Despite this, there are more than 50 from the local chapters working each week in the two branches of service.

Many of the members of the Army and Navy Chapter have been working for many weeks with units at Fort Myer, Walter Reed Hospital, Bolling Field or the Army War College. There are also units at the Red Cross Chapter House — the Army women meeting Friday mornings and the Navy and Marine Corps on Tuesdays.

Mary Washington Chapter has a unit of its own with Mrs. Edward Keys, chairman. Mrs. W. H. O. McGhee is chapter regent.

Defense Work No Panacea, Club Told

The defense program will not serve the unemployment problem for the older woman worker, in the opinion of Dr. Marjorie Shearon, who addressed the Pilot Club at its dinner meeting last night at the Ivy Terrace Tea Room.

Dr. Shearon, who is with the Bureau of Research and Statistics of the Social Security Board, is chairman of the Woman's Occupational Council, recently formed by a group of business and professional women's organizations, and also chairman of the steering committee for the body. So far, there has been but one meeting of the full council and one of the steering committee, she said, so there are only tentative plans under consideration for its project of finding a solution for the unemployment problem of the older women.

The defense program has temporarily delayed the proposed work of the council. Its original intention had been to operate through the D. C. Employment Center which it had hoped could set up a service especially designed to handle the older women applicants for jobs. With the inauguration of the national defense program, the Employment Center has its hands full and cannot undertake other than routine attention to the needs of any particular group, she said.

Dr. Shearon also pointed out that the chief demand in the national defense project is for men who are skilled technicians for munitions plants, shipyards and airplane factories. After they are secured, there is a big slack still to be taken up with the employment of other workers now on WPA, those on relief and on the lists of the employment exchanges. Even if there prove to be openings for the older women in some departments, these will provide work only for the period of emergency production and at the end of this the problem will be increased rather than diminished.

The only sound solution is to be found through approach to the situation as a community problem by cooperating groups of organized business and professional women, Dr. Shearon believes. Through their place in business and the professions they are in a position to investigate job possibilities and offer practical guidance to older women seeking employment.

So far, in the District, there is no measure of the extent of the problem, although indications are that it is serious, she said. The council's first effort will be to make a study of it and then to seek a remedy. There are two types of unemployed women to be aided, those with recent experience whose jobs have folded up and those who have been out of the labor market for some years and are suddenly faced with the necessity for earning a living.

Although there are plenty of openings in the field of domestic service, these are not the type of jobs to which a college-trained woman with professional experience should be referred, she pointed out.

D. A. R. Clubs Help Blue Ridge Children

Three Years Ago 65% of Mountain Waifs Were Undernourished; Today Not One Is, Thanks to Leaders

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Post's Club Editor.

Three years ago, 65 per cent of the children enrolled in the then newly-formed Junior American Citizens Clubs of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in the Blue Ridge section of Virginia, were undernourished. Today not one of them is.

This is only one of the achievements of these 1,500 children in "pulling themselves up by their bootstraps" accomplishing with the support and encouragement of the D. A. R. Miss Elizabeth Malott Barnes, of this city, national vice chairman of the committee for this work, and Mrs. Lucy T. Day, of Arlington, State chairman for Virginia, are largely responsible for the phenomenal progress made by the children in the mountain districts of that State.

It is only a few hours' ride from Washington where these children live. Three years ago, when word came to the D. A. R. that because of the poverty in the mountains, the schools had been closed for months, the committee investigated. Aid was given in reopening the school and the pupils from Mutton Hollow, Bacon Hollow and other mountain parts were organized into clubs of Junior American Citizens. The girls were taught to sew and cook. Both girls and boys were taught to make gardens. Many of them and their parents learned for the first time that you could plant seeds in the ground, tend them and have them grow. They knew nothing of fresh vegetables and had only the fruits and berries they could gather in the mountains.

Virginians Said It Wouldn't Work

Mrs. Ruby Reubush, who was teacher at the Mutton Hollow School, organized the first club there, which now has 72 members. Her sister, Miss Nellie Walton, has gone through the mountains organizing others.

At the beginning, some of the Virginians who heard of the plan said it wouldn't work; you couldn't organize the mountain people or get them to attend community meetings. A few weeks ago the minister of a church at Booneville told Miss Barnes he had tried without success to encourage the people to use his parish house as a community center but, with the progress of the Junior American Citizens Clubs, they had developed community spirit and were now using it freely. More than 200 from all over the mountains had recently gathered there.

"How old are the children in the clubs?" I asked Miss Barnes.

"From 6 years to 90," she replied.

Grandmothers, seeing a new life opening up for the children, insisted on coming to the meetings, too, so a grandmothers' club was formed. They sew and make rugs while the boys and girls conduct their meetings and learn handicraft, gardening and housekeeping.

Produce raised in the children's gardens is taken home, providing fresh vegetables in the summer and a surplus to be canned for winter use. Mrs. Reubush, taking her pressure cooker, goes to the mountain homes during the summer season, showing the women how to put up the vegetables and helping them do it. Berries and apples gathered in the mountains also are canned or preserved and provide food for winter use such as the families have never known before.

The clubs have also developed a sense of responsibility for the welfare of others. There is a spirit of mutual helpfulness and in many instances the boys in the membership have gone to the desolate homes of old hermits in the mountains, taking them food and caring for them when they were ill.

Two guitars have been provided for boys in one of the clubs and a hill billy chorus has been organized that is beginning to attract attention.

On several occasions, small groups of the children have been brought to Washington by members of the D. A. R. and given their first glimpse of the world beyond their mountains. Two of the children in a family being cared for by the 83-year-old grandfather, were to come last season with such a party. A younger girl, who was not to be included, appeared at 5 a. m. at Mrs. Reubush's home. She wore overalls and had walked four miles through the woods.

"Grandpappy said I could go to Washington and see all the animals and tell him about it so he would have something to think about," she told her—and she was brought to the Capital with the others.

Mrs. Reubush is not a D. A. R. but carries on the society's program under the committee's general supervision. A few months ago, a larger house was secured for her to which Miss Barnes sent furniture of her own that had been in storage. The place now serves as a community center.

Underprivileged Children Aided

Mrs. Russell H. Stine is State chairman of the Junior American Citizens Clubs committee of the District D. A. R. The membership of these clubs here comprises underprivileged children in the schools of the Capital. They are taught American principles and provided opportunities they would not otherwise have. Ten are now at a cabin at the Boys Club Camp on Wicomico River, given by the District D. A. R. and dedicated ten days ago in honor of Miss Lillian Chenoweth, past State regent of the District. About 50 others will be sent during the summer. The first boy to go there was one Miss Chenoweth sent for two weeks as a gift in memory of her mother who also was an active D. A. R. member.

Next month, 25 Washington girls will be sent to Holiday House of the Girls Friendly Society for a two weeks vacation and with them will go a club member from Mutton Hollow. She is a mountain girl whom Miss Barnes and Mrs. David J. Rumbough are educating. They are giving her this vacation so she can take back to the other members of her club in the mountains the things she learns at Holiday House and pass the instruction on to them.

Miss Barnes has been appointed national vice chairman of the Junior American Citizens committee for the tenth year because of her interest in the project.

Peril of Nazi Trade Tactics To U. S. Is Cited by Author

"We do not realize a war has been going on since 1933," Clark Foreman, author of "New Internationalism," asserted yesterday in addressing a luncheon meeting of the Washington Branch of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies."

"Germany has not only been trying to undermine our Government, but is doing everything possible to hinder our trade."

Mr. Foreman, who is secretary of the Economic Committee on Public Affairs, pointed out that if this country were to be engaged in war, it would be obliged to import at least 14 vital materials. With the Asiatic sources cut off, these products would be obtainable only in South America. If Germany should succeed in her efforts to control this source, the United States could not carry on successfully without them, he said.

"Germany has broken all rules on the battlefield and in the field of commerce," Mr. Forman declared. "As our military experts were startled by her Panzer military tactics, so should our economists be alarmed by her trade methods.

"Our economy is so geared that we must have an export trade. If this should be cut off, there would be terrific political repercussions. No politician in the United States could stand up under the strain. One danger of such a situation would be that our leaders might be as shortsighted as those of England and France have been in believing they could appease Germany.

"The only way to avert such a situation is to take advantage of this period and work up a collective bargaining system that will endure. Partial defense is no defense. The best airplanes and the best warships would not save us if we were collapsing from within."

The committee had its luncheon yesterday at Wesley Hall, where the weekly meetings are held on Tuesdays, addressed by speakers conversant with the problems facing this country as a result of the war in Europe. Mrs. Bertha Jones, chairman of the group, presided. She announced "Child Refugees" would be the subject for discussion next week.

600,000 Nazis Poised to Sail For England

Attack Called Off Once, Rumors Say, For Fear of Losses

By the Associated Press

Grenoble, France, July 16.—The newspaper Le Petit Dauphinois, quoting foreign diplomatic quarters in Switzerland, said today Germany has 600,000 troops ready for a cross-channel invasion of the British Isles—and that the "zero hour" may come this Friday night, if weather permits.

The Nazi expeditionary force, it said, is poised along a 1,200-mile front from Brest, France, to Bergen, Norway.

Originally, the long-threatened assault was scheduled for the night of July 9-10, the newspaper said, but dissension in the German high command led to delay.

(Unconfirmed elsewhere, this French newspaper report was viewed in some quarters as a possible German-inspired propaganda effort to spur Britain into accepting Nazi-Fascist peace overtures, which were hinted in a "trial balloon" floated in Rome today.)

Cost Looked Enormous

The newspaper, in a dispatch from Bern, Switerland, said a group of Nazi generals headed by Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German army, protested that the original plan of attacks was "too dangerous."

The initial plan, it said, called for a makeshift fleet—consisting of hundreds of German ships and captured French, Belgian and Dutch passenger liners, freighters, fishing smacks and tug-towed barges—to swarm across the Channel in the wake of minesweepers and waves of bombers.

Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the German general staff, purportedly supported this plan, but the Nazi Fuehrer heeded Gen. von Brauchitsch's objections and delayed the attack.

The von Brauchitsch group, the dispatch said, insisted that minesweepers could not clear the way in such a swift attack and that two-thirds of the expeditionary force might be lost, leaving only 200,000 men.

(Britain now has 2,500,000 men under arms to combat just such a German onslaught—1,500,000 regulars and 1,000,000 home defense guards.)

Prepare for Triumph

Berlin, July 16 (AP).—Sure of victory, Nazis today began erecting grandstands and loudspeakers on Berlin's famed Unter den Linden and in other German cities to welcome returning troops.

They are convinced that England's fate will be sealed with the same swift success Germany had in knocking out Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France.

The high command today claimed 41,600 tons of British shipping had been sent to the bottom in the last three days.

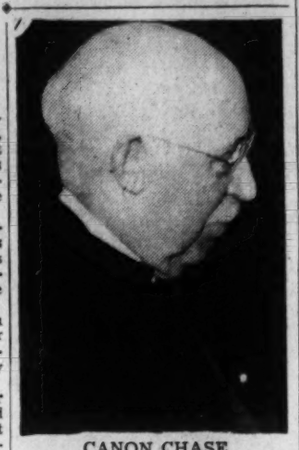
Canon Chase, Crusader, Dies; Fought for Peace, Morals

Episcopal Cleric Was Prominent in Prohibition Battle



CANON CHASE

Kings Park, N. Y., July 16.—Episcopal Canon William Sheafe Chase, 82, nationally known prohibitionist and president of the Religious Union for World Peace, died suddenly of heart disease at his home today.

Although Canon Chase concentrated most of his reform campaigns in Brooklyn, N. Y., his crusades against vice and his active leadership as a prohibition advocate spread throughout the country.

As leader of Christ Church in Brooklyn, he fought vigorously for nearly half a century against gambling, Sunday movies and Sunday baseball.

He was retired as active rector of the church in 1932, but had held the title rector honorarius since that time. Canon Chase formerly headed the International Reform Federation, was director of the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States and the Society for the Prevention of Crime.

A native of Lee County, Ill., Canon received his higher education at Brown University. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Delta Upsilon fraternities.

Among his writings were "Catechism on Motion Pictures in Interstate Commerce," "Amicus Curiae to the United States Supreme Court Against Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment," and "The Spirit of the New Era."

U. S. Court Weighs Final Details of B. & O. Revision

Baltimore, July 16 (AP).—A special three-judge Federal Court which approved the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad financial adjustment plan last winter, convened today to decide several questions arising from the plan.

Judges John J. Parker, Armistead M. Dobie and W. Calvin Chestnut sat in the hearing, which arose on petitions filed by the Manhattan Co., trustee under the financial reorganization.

The award of counsel fees, ratification of expenses and decisions concerning the application of approximately $1,600,000 in annual dividends from the Reading Co.'s stock were among the questions before the court.

Red Cross Ship In Marseille With Supplies

Goods to Be Given Out in Unoccupied Parts of France

The Red Cross mercy ship, the McKeesport, bearing "relief supplies desperately needed" by French refugees, has reached Marseille, "the first cargo vessel to arrive in several weeks," it was announced here yesterday by Red Cross national headquarters.

The British blockade authorities gave the ship safe conduct to Marselle, which is in the unoccupied part of France.

A cable from Richard Allen, European delegate of the American Red Cross, said the vessel reached the pilot's light Monday evening and would enter the harbor yesterday. The cargo will be distributed only in that part of France not occupied by German forces, it was announced by Norman H. Davis, chairman of the Red Cross.

Fund Passes $19,200,689

The national war relief fund yesterday reached $19,209,689 on its way to the $20,000,000 goal. The District chapter's fund yesterday totaled $349,073.36, with results of several large benefit events still to be heard from.

Approximately 800 Americans left Lisbon July 13 for the United States on the Manhattan, according to a cable from John Maloney, another Red Cross representative. He said approximately 200 of them had been given Red Cross assistance "at practically every junction between Lisbon and Paris."

Call to Protestants

Meanwhile, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America has issued an emergency call to Protestant churches urging that immediate steps be taken to meet the "unparalleled needs of world suffering."

The appeal was issued by the committee on foreign relief appeals set up by the council and the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

Pastors have been urged to seek a special offering "in the name of the spirit of Christ" to alleviate the "unprecedented suffering of civilian populations in France and Europe and China, and Christian refugees stranded in various lands and being cared for in America, missionaries left without resources in foreign countries, exiled pastors of evangelical churches in Europe, and to provide friendly service and chaplaincy care for prisoners of war."

Arlington Legion To Install Heads

Installation of the newly elected officers of Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, by Deputy Commander Harold L. Scheuer, of Berryville, Va., will feature a special meeting tonight in Legion Hall, North Washington boulevard.

Those to be installed are William D. Kline, commander; Howard C. Duckson, first vice commander; Stuart F. Thomson, second vice commander; L. D. Batson, adjutant; T. R. Wallace, recording adjutant; F. L. Angelo, finance officer; C. C. Moss, judge advocate; M. M. Jackson, child welfare officer; T. W. Fraser, athletic officer, and E. T. Mateer.

P. U. C. Approves W. Va. to N. Y. Gas Pipeline

Harrisburg, Pa., July 16 (AP).—Given the "go" signal by the Public Utility Commission, three Pennsylvania companies in the Columbia Gas & Electric System soon may start laying 117 miles of pipeline to carry natural gas from West Virginia fields to New York State customers.

Over a lone dissenter's declaration that Pennsylvania patrons of the Manufacturers' Light & Heat Co., the Manufacturers' Gas Co., and the Pennsylvania Fuel Supply Co., were being subjected to financial risk, the commission gave its assent yesterday and asserted:

"The rights and interests of the three Pennsylvania companies and their patrons are amply protected."

The 15-year agreement is for the Pennsylvania companies to accept natural gas from the United Fuel Gas Co., of West Virginia, for remetering and transportation across Pennsylvana until it reaches the Home Natural Gas Co., of New York. All are Columbia Gas & Electric affiliates.

Rich Children Called Favored as Refugees

London, July 16.—The British government was accused in the House of Commons today of attempting to "camouflage" a scheme whereby the children of wealthy families were evacuated to the United States, while poor children were left behind in bomb-threatened areas.

The allegations were made by Laborite members of Commons when Maj. Clement R. Attlee, lord privy seal, announced that the government's plan to evacuate 200,000 or more children overseas had been "postponed" because of a lack of armed naval escorts.

The government reported that although applications for the emigration of 200,000 children had been made, only 20,000 offers of homes had been received from the dominions, including Canada.

Wait for Safety

Attlee disputed Laborite allegations, saying that the postponement was ordered only "until conditions of safety improved."

He asserted that the threatened German invasion of the British Isles, coupled with the loss of the French fleet, forced Britain to conserve her naval convoys "for more essential purposes."

Those British families able to afford passage on fast, unescorted liners can send their children to the United States and the dominions, he said, but the government is unable to assume the responsibility of sending children on liners without convoys.

Points to Arandora Star

He referred to the recent U-boat torpedoing of the liner Arandora Star off the Irish west coast, with the loss of about 1,000 German and Italian aliens being sent to internment camps in Canada as evidence that "even a fast passenger liner cannot always rely on her speed for safety."

Geoffrey Shakespeare, undersecretary for dominions, told questioners in Commons that of the 200,000 applications for evacuation of children, about 20,000 indicated a preference for the United States rather than the dominions.

The United States Government, he said, offered to permit the entry of children under 16, limiting the number only in accordance with shipping facilities and private assurances of support of the children. Thus far, he said, there has been no final statement as to the extent of these private American assurances.

The children would be admitted to the United States under two-year visitor visas which could subsequently be extended. He said that 298 unescorted British children already had taken advantage of the United States offer.

Camouflage Charged

Shakespeare ignored a Laborite question as to whether he was aware of "great indignation at the number of cabinet ministers' children who have left the country."

Laborite Charles Ammon then alleged that the government had tried to "camouflage" a system to get "well-to-do children out of the country."

He asked whether any children of the government-subsidized school already had started for the United States.

"No, because the scheme has not started."

Capital News In Brief

Fugitive's Alibi Good, Grand Jury Decides

The District grand jury yesterday officially recorded its understanding of a North Carolina colored boy's fear of the water.

Sentenced to 90 days for attempted larceny in 1934, Alex Neely was put to work on the Ninth Street Wharf. Another prisoner told him he would be put to work on the boat, "and it sank about once a week." Alex couldn't swim, so he slipped through the gate and headed south.

The fugitive was returned a few weeks ago and charged with escape from custody. After hearing the facts, the grand jurors refused to indict.

Match Fires Trousers Of Gas Station Employe

Harry Freeman, 19, of 747 Princeton street northwest, an attendant in a filling station at Georgia avenue and Kenyon street was treated for second degree burns on the abdomen and legs, when a match ignited his gas stained trousers.

2 Suspected Thieves Caught in Auto Chase

A detective yesterday captured two suspected auto thieves after a 70-mile-an-hour chase that ended with the stolen car crashing against a parked auto.

The chase began when Detective Sergt. John O. Curtis saw three colored youths in a car reported stolen Friday from Edward Smith, Arlington. At V street and Vermont avenue northwest, the fugitives' auto hit a car owned by Charles F. Dehart, of 5822 Sherrier street northwest.

The third youth escaped.

Visiting Couple Robbed Of $2,351 Cash, Jewels

Jewels valued at $2,281 and $70 in cash were reported stolen from a room at the Bellevue Hotel early yesterday while its two occupants slept.

The jewels and money belonged to Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Yoos, of Terre Haute, Ind.

Man, 70, Scares Off 2 Would-Be Robbers

Seventy-year-old Edward B. Semmes, of 5601 Sixteenth street northwest, scared off two young men who attempted to rob him yesterday afternoon.

They entered the back seat of Semmes' car at 4550 Connecticut avenue northwest and announced, "this is a stickup."

"No, it isn't," replied Semmes, lunging toward the other side of his seat as if reaching for a gun.

The would be robbers bolted.

Optimist Club to Give Cabin to Boys' Club

A log cabin given to Camp Reeder by the Downtown Optimist Club of Washington will be formally presented to the camp today by Dr. William W. Chase, chairman of the board of managers of the Optimist Club.

Camp Reeder is the summer camp of the Boys' Club of Washington. Albert F. E. Horn, president of the boys' organization, will accept the cabin for the club.

W. Va. Society Holds Excursion Tonight

Members of the West Virginia Society will hold their annual excursion aboard the S. S. Mount Vernon tonight, leaving the Wilson Line dock at 8:30 p. m. Tickets may be purchased from officers of the society or at 437 Eleventh street northwest.

Keep Middle of Road, Rotary Heads Urged

A few tips on how to be a successful Rotary Club president were given more than 60 executives of Rotary clubs of the 180th District last night by Roy Danzer, Hagerstown, Md., past district governor.

Addressing a dinner at the Willard Hotel opening a two-day assembly of Rotary heads from Maryland, Western Pennsylvania, parts of West Virginia and the District, Danzer declared:

"A president of Rotary must be careful not to take sides in controversial questions. He must learn to keep the middle of the road."

Dr. Thomas Bess, Keyser, W. Va., district governor, and William Anthony, secretary of the Baltimore club, were among the other speakers.

Neighborly Act

One who takes a package for a neighbor does not assume responsibility for it, Judge Nathan Cayton ruled in the Small Claims Court yesterday in dismissing the claim of the Dime Transfer & Messenger Service against Norman P. Smith, 1633 Montague street northwest. Mrs. Smith accepted a package containing a bathing suit valued at $5 for a neighbor. The package was stolen from Mrs. Smith's back porch.

Escaped Convict Held

A confessed escaped convict was held last night pending an investigation by police and Department of Justice agents.

The man was arrested by Motorcycle Policemen A. J. Kaskeski and H. J. Steinmeyer early yesterday after a window was smashed at the Ernest Burk Jewelry Co., 614 Thirteenth street northwest, and $200 worth of jewelry taken.

Identified as Frank E. Wallace, 23, the suspect told police he escaped two months ago from a Georgia chain gang where he was serving a term for burglary.

Lodge to Reply To Criticism Of ABC Today

Expected to Call Attention to Plans Of Commissioners

Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, today will issue a formal statement in reply to Capitol Hill criticism of the ABC board and the District Commissioners for their failure to adopt recommendations of the Eberharter subcommittee.

Lodge is expected to state the position of the board on some controversial issues and to call attention to recommendations which have been made to the District Commissioners for the control of liquor prices and advertising.

Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday renewed his attack on the ABC board and the Commissioners and suggested that "the next Congressional investigation will be an inquiry into the tardiness and indifference of District officials of something isn't done promptly."

The Commissioners and the board, Shafer said, "have a direct responsibility to put into effect immediately the recommendations of the House District Committee in regard to improvement of the operation of the alcoholic beverage industry in the National Capital."

Shafer called attention to a set of proposals adopted by the "beverage industry committee" at a recent meeting of licensees and published this week in "Beverage Bulletin," a trade publication of Milton S. Kronheim & Son.

"So far as I have been able to determine," Shafer said, "the only people who have tried to do anything about the report and about conditions are the beverage people themselves."

A bill on the House calendar, sponsored by Shafer, authorizes the A. B. C. Board to control liquor prices and advertising by passing upon sales contracts. No action is expected this session, however.

Both Lodge and Shafer contend that the board has authority under the present act to regulate prices, but the Commissioners so far have held otherwise.

2,200 D. C. Physicians Get A. M. A. Defense Questionnaire

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Washington physicians are now participating in the biggest "quiz program" ever introduced to them.

Within the last few days the more than 2,200 physicians who work or live in the District—white and colored, male and female, private practitioners and Government employes—have received their copies of the American Medical Association preparedness questions, one of the most ambitious projects in the A. M. A.'s history.

Purpose of the quiz, in which every licensed physician in the United States, Territories and possessions has been asked to cooperate, is to obtain an accurate inventory of the Nation's medical resources for use in event of war.

Following are a few of the questions:

What foreign languages do you speak?

Are you a general practitioner or a specialist? If the latter, what specialty?

Any military experience between 1917-1919 (the World War period) and, if so with what rank and in what branch?

What service do you consider yourself best qualified to perform?

In the event of war will you volunteer for military service?

The doctors are asked to tell whether they are single, married or widowed, the number of their dependents over and under 18 years of age, whether they are native-born or naturalized citizens, or aliens, the name of the medical school from which they were graduated and the year in which they were licensed to practice.

Under "race" they are asked to check one of the following: White, Negro, Asiatic or Indian; no other classification is made.

Theodore Wiprud, secretary of the District Medical Society and its liaison officer with the A. M. A.'s committee on medical preparedness, which issued the questionnaire, expressed confidence that Washington doctors will answer all questions and return the questionnaires promptly to Chicago headquarters.

There's Devil to Pay as 'Faust' Competes With Noise of Capital

A horseback rider trotted past with a loud clop-clop, clop-clop on the Watergate pavement. Overhead a transport plane zoomed by. Three rowers drew their boat alongside the National Symphony barge, listened, rowed away.

On the barge, a silent tenor—short, bulky Sydney Rayner—abruptly expressed himself.

"Ugh!" he roared, "horses, airplanes, skiffs—my God, who's going to look at the opera?".

Gorilla Liked His Music

As the orchestra sweated under Conductor Joseph Bamboschek, on a half-sunken barge beneath the regular stage, Tenor Rayner, Maestro Giacomo Spadoni and blonde, beautiful Helen Gleason staged a show of their own.

Off-handedly, the three followed the score. On occasional difficult portions the two singers took up their roles for a few lines—Miss Gleason singing from her throat, Rayner blaring gustily from his stomach.

"This open-air opera is swell stuff," Rayner commented. "Last year I performed at the Cincinnati Zoo. Every time Susie the Gorilla got hungry we had to stop singing. She liked the music when her belly was full. But when she was hungry—she screamed and screamed."

"Then," he said, "then there were the ducks. They lived nearby in a little pond. We sang Faust one night and when the devil sang his fiendish laugh—ha, ha, ha, haw, haw—the ducks quacked in harmony."

Suddenly Rayner stopped. The orchestra played a jumpy, jarring tune.

Victim Has Advantage

"Here," he roared, "here is where I fight a duel with the baritone. I stab him. But he gets up and goes out and gets seven or eight beers—he's a big guy and he likes beer—but I got to keep singing."

Rayner loves Washington, he explained, because it was here he experienced "one of the great moments of my career."

"I sang at the White House last February. Someone said—no matter who, I know her name—someone said, 'No one but Caruso could sing so.' She knew nothing about music. But it was said. And that was good. Mrs. Roosevelt was very gracious. It was a great moment."

Pepco Seeks To EndHolding Firm's Control

Testimony Before SEC Seeks to Show Ability To Run Independently

Testimony designed to prove its ability to operate soundly without control by the North American Co., powerful utilities holding firm, was presented yesterday by the Potomac Electric Power Co., at hearings before the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Through W. J. Lank, assistant development engineer, PEPCO described in detail its properties and method of operations.

Lank said the power company's two generating stations—the Benning and Buzzard Point plants—together produced electrical current of 255,000 kilowatts as a maximum power generation for the city's needs.

The hearings were called by the SEC to require the North American Co. to "show cause why its operations should not be confined to a single integrated utility system." Under the "death clause" of the Holding Company Act, parent utility organizations are compelled to integrate their systems within reasonable geographical limits.

The North American Co. controls 89.78 per cent of stock in the Washington Railway & Electric Co., which in turn, holds all the common stock of Pepco and the Capital Transit Co.

Whether North American relinquishes control over local utilities under its integration plan remains for decision by the SEC. Several months of hearings and rehearings are in prospect before such a decision is rendered, it was explained yesterday.

Body Recovered From Potomac Near Morgantown

The body of a man, believed to be Charles E. McGuckin, about 40, a native of Sharon, S. C., was recovered yesterday from the Potomac River, near Morgantown, Md., after it was discovered by two crabbers, V. M. Potter and Wilmer Pounds, of Dahlgren, Va. Tentative identification was through a Masonic lodge card and a National Recovery Administration office pass found in the man's clothing.

The man's clothing also contained a notebook in which was written the name of G. Eugene Clendenin, 705 Sixth street northwest. Clendenin said he had met a man named McGuckin recently. He will view the body at the Hunt & Ryon funeral home, Waldorf.

Dr. James C. McKavanagh, Charles County deputy medical examiner, said the body bore no marks of violence.

Census List of 135 Car Deaths Draws VanDuzer's Fire

A report from the division of vital statistics, Bureau of the Census, listing 155 motor vehicle fatalities in Washington last year was roundly denounced yesterday by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

He branded the report as "grossly misleading."

Only 84 persons were killed by autos within the District limits during 1939, according to Traffic Department records. The Census Bureau figures included the number of accident victims who were brought here from crashes in nearby Maryland and Virginia, it was explained.

Many Requests To Charities In Boyd Will

Son, Daughter Share $1,000,000 Residue of Estate

Mrs. Katherine Willard Boyd left about $250,000 of her $1,265,450 estate to friends, relatives and charity and the remainder equally to her son, Walter Willard Boyd, Bethesda, Md., and her daughter, Mrs. Alice Willard Boyd Stanley, 2370 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Mrs. Boyd died last Thursday at her summer home, Blue Ridge Summit, Pa. She was 75 years old. Her will was filed for probate in the District Court yesterday.

Specific bequests included:

Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation, Mrs. Boyd's library of religious books; the Rev. ZeBarney R. Phillips, $2,000; Garfield Memorial Hospital, $25,000; Home for Incurables, $10,000; Episcopal Ear, Eye and Throat Hospital, $10,000.

Also, for construction of some part of the National Cathedral as a "Willard Memorial," $10,000; House of Mercy, $2,000; St. John's Parish Church Orphanage Association, $500; the Right Rev. Edwin F. Robins, assistant bishop of Norwich, England, $2,000; Dr. William Cabell Moore, her physician, $5,000.

Also, St. Alban's School Foundation, for Walter William Boyd endowment fund, $5,000; Epiphany Parish endowment fund, $8,000; Emergency Hospital, $2,000; All Souls' Parish, $2,000; University of Virginia, for a memorial to her husband, John C. Boyd, $5,000.

Mrs. Boyd left her home at 1621 Twenty-second street northwest to her son.

43 Strayer Pupils Are Initiated In Honor Society

Forty-three honor students of Strayer College were initiated into Sigma Eta Sigma Society at a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel last night, with Edmond S. Donoho, president of the college, as host.

Frank A. Patterson, Washington director of the Dale Carnegie Institute, spoke.

Eastern Shore Monster Just Plain Dog

The monster of Eastern Shore's melon fields is just plain dog, all reports and theories to the contrary notwithstanding, State police at Easton, Md., maintained last night.

Consequently, three troopers and three deputy game wardens were dispatched last night for the fourth successive hunt of the beast whose eerie cries have kept Eastern Shore farmers on edge for more than a week.

One farmer's theory that the "varmint" was the creation of the imagination of mellon growers hereabouts as a hoax to keep thieves out of their ripening fields was discounted by police.

"The people are greatly disturbed down here," said a spokesman at the Easton substation. "The reports of 'the thing's' noise and its fight with other dogs have come from reliable citizens.

"We are convinced he is a dog, probably a lost dog that is hungry. Its footprints are pretty good proof of that."

Capt. Sutton Made Head of Naval Medical School

Capt. Dallas G. Sutton, Assistant Surgeon General of the Navy and a native of the District, yesterday was appointed commandant of the Naval Medical School here.

Capt. Sutton

A veteran of 33 years in the Navy, Capt. Sutton became an assistant naval surgeon after his graduation from George Washington University Medical School in 1906. Assistant surgeon general since 1936, he had been under orders to command the Naval Hospital, San Diego, Calif. The latter post will be taken by Capt. William Chambers, now commandant of the medical school.

Capt. Sutton commanded an emergency hospital at Bluefields, Nicaragua, during a revolution in that country in 1910 and the next year headed an emergency surgical unit put ashore by naval vessels during a revolt in Liberia. He served at Vera Cruz, Mexico, during the American occupation in 1913. He attended Western High School before entering George Washington.

Fleischauer Funeral Set For Friday

Policeman Killed By Hit-Runner to Be Buried in Arlington

Funeral services for Private Julius E. Fleischhauer, of the Metropolitan Police, will be held at 1 p. m. Friday at the Perry & Walsh funeral home, 29 H street northwest.

The policeman, fatally injured early Sunday by a hit-and-run driver near Triangle, Va., will be buried in Arlington Cemetery in recognition of service on the Mexican border in 1916. The Fire and Police Post, No. 29, American Legion, will provide a guard of honor.

Pallbearers will be his colleagues of the Fifth Precinct, Sergt. B. F. McAllister and Privates J. J. O'Donovan, J. F. Bowers, W. L. Brown, C. E. James and D. F. Spittle. The Rev. Duncan Fraser, assistant rector of Epiphany Episcopal Church, will officiate.

Fleischhauer's widow will receive a $30-a-month pension and a payment of $1,500 from the Policemen's Relief Association.

Columbia Road Traffic Control Needs Studied

Plans to provide additional traffic safeguards on Columbia road between California and Nineteenth streets northwest are under consideration by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, it was learned last night.

His action followed complaints from several residents of the community, among them Representative Sol Bloom, of New York. A petition signed by some 150 citizens requesting traffic lights, crosswalk markings and adequate pedestrian safeguards has been submitted to the Commissioners.

Van Duzer said he has ordered staff engineers to conduct a survey and report on the neighborhood's needs.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Come On, You Cavalier, Get Over That Fence!

Great Steeplechase in 'Maryland' Is Thrill; National Subscription Season Biggest Yet; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THEY EVEN WENT SO FAR as to have Ed Thorgersen, the noted sports commentator of radio and the newsreels, provide the running description of the big race that climaxes the picture. The race in question is the Maryland Hunt Club Steeplechase, the greatest event of its kind known to the American turf. If it doesn't pull you right out of your chair, when you see it, it would be best to consult the family croaker to find out what has caused your nervous system to atrophy.

BELL

It would, of course, be the Twentieth-Century-Fox Technicolor production of "Maryland" of which we are speaking. It was unspooled for a quorum of the drama desks yesterday afternoon and left them limp—partially because they had no potatoes down on the winner at the opulent odds of 20 to 1.

There is no need to belong to the "horsey set" to get a terrific bang out of this picture. It packs enough excitement, comedy and that lusty old quality known to the trade as "human interest" to whip up the blood of any audience. The story wanders a bit from the course now and again, but always finds its way back in time to keep its high tribute to thoroughbred horseflesh intact and paint a realistic picture of Maryland manor life. "Maryland" runs better than a dead heat with "Kentucky" and it's no photograph finish, either.

The piece has been cast from the pick of the TCF roster of stars and with some nicely selected "loans" from other studios. Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, Brenda Joyce, John Payne, Charlie Ruggles, Hattie McDaniel—the Academy Award winning "Mammy" in "GWTW"—Marjorie Weaver, Sidney Blackmer, Paul Harvey, William Davidson, Spencer Charters and Clarence Muse are only a few of the many who costar with the horses.

Never mind the back money on this one. Play it on the nose.

One of the principal deviations from the main course of "Maryland" is the Negro camp-meeting sequence, in which Shadrach, one of the retainers on the Broadlawn estate, gets religion—and how he gets it! It comes about during a psalm-singing scene that is as frenzied as that hoss race. Clarence Muse, one of the most gifted actors of his race, leads the revival as the Reverend Bitters. Mr. Bitters is a honey!

The Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington expect the subscription season of 1940-41, at the National Theater, to break all previous records. The present sum total of subscription renewals and new bookings is double that of any previous year at this midsummer point. The enrollment has been so great, in fact, that final seat assignments probably will not be possible before August 1. After August 1, subscribers awaiting location changes will be given access to the seating charts to facilitate their choices. The gist of Sales Manager Bess Davis Schreiner's announcement seems to be, "Be patient."

To date only three subscription plays have been made known for the National's new season, but they are three that should arouse the impatience of the judicious showshopper—Helen Hayes in "Twelfth Night," Franchot Tone in Ernest Hemingway's "The Fifth Column" and the Theater Guild-Eddie Dowling production of Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," first play to win both the Critics Circle and Pulitzer prizes in any season. If the other three are as good as that, the subscribers who get on the books indeed will be lucky bargain-grabbers.

Watch the Film Time Tables at Loew's Capitol tomorrow, else you may get fooled. For the first time in the history of the theater, two broadcasts will be made from the stage tomorrow night—the first at 6:30, the second at 9. This will necessitate cutting into the stage shows and juggling the daily schedules. It also will result in a double stage attraction for those who get there in time to hear Bob Crosby and His Dixieland Orchestra take to the air. Haven't seen the complete time table as yet, but doors will open tomorrow at 10:15 a. m., with the first feature at 10:30.

Owing to pressing demands from Hollywood, that visit of Brian Donlevy to the Capital to show the critics "The Great McGinty"—originally dated for next Monday and Tuesday—has been moved up to today and tomorrow. Mr. Donlevy will be feted at the Carlton at 1 and squirt his picture onto the projection-room screen at 3 today.

Eternal-Unities Note

Down go the critics to the bottom of the see!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, July 16.

"Young People," starring Shirley Temple, was stolen by Jack Oakie and Charlotte Greenwood, who are terrific. They stopped the show. If some company doesn't grab those two for a comedy team, they're cookoo. Shirley is one of the finest little troupers I've ever seen, and it's a great reflection on an organization like Twentieth Century-Fox that they weren't able to find a better story for her. She has some speeches in this one that Duse couldn't have gotten away with.

HOPPER

And when the trio of vaudeville headliners settled in a New England town, the mother (Charlotte Greenwood), even if she'd have subnormal intelligence, would have known better than to get up before a ladies' sewing circle and do the splits, and tell the story of how she met her husband when her tights ripped up the back.

I thought the townsfolk were quite justified in turning thumbs down when the newcomers trained the school children to do a dance that looked like a bum imitation of "Little Egypt" doing the hootchy-kootchy.

I hear Joan Crawford still can't go anywhere in New York without being mobbed by fans, but life's all business to Joan this summer. She wants to get in a Broadway show by fall, and meantime she's dividing her time between her newly adopted baby, Christina, work for the Allied Relief, and reading scripts. She says "No social life, no beaux." Imagine!

Rita Hayworth, whom Ben Hecht chose to play opposite Doug Fairbanks, jr., in "Before I Die," is coming up so fast she's almost here. She's another who came up via the dance floor, a la Crawford, Loy and Blondell, only she goes them all one better. When she was 16 she was doing exhibition dancing as her father's partner. Papa is now teaching dancing here. Her name was Rita Cansino, and she once played at Fox, a Spanish dancer, with a heavy dialect.

When someone tried to sell her to Columbia, the executives said: "Don't be silly—she can't even speak English!" Proving what a good actress she was. But despite themselves, the Columbia boys now have her, and glad of it, under contract as one of the few long-term players on the lot.

Rita thinks working with Hecht is the greatest experience of her career—plays a complete phoney in the picture, and says laughingly, "I love it because it's a character part."

When Mrs. Albert Basserman ordered her husband's favorite hazelnut ice cream flown out here for his birthday from New York, a gallon of it arrived with a sign reading, "If not delivered in five days—never mind."

Orson Welles confers with himself in a three-way mirror—as actor, director, and producer. The actor wants something, producer says budget won't stand it, director sees it another way—so it goes, with Little Orson Annie fighting himself.

Latest dance craze is the "Elephant Glide," invented by Arthur Murray in honor of Wendell Willkie. I can only see one woman (recently come to Hollywood) that would fit perfectly—you know who!

The Three Who Won That Grueling Race

JOHN PAYNE, "CAVALIER" AND BRENDA JOYCE among the pivotal players in the Twentieth Century-Fox Technicolor production of "Maryland," a picture of the horse lovers of the Free State, which will follow the current "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, Charles Ruggles and Hattie McDaniel also are featured in the cast

Little

A picture that will rank on most winter books with the ten best of the year, "The Biscuit Eater," is film-making at its simplest and finest; a story of two boys, on white the other black, and their dog. This Paramount surprise opened last night at the Little Theater.

"The Biscuit Eater" is a fine film because everything in it rings true—the Georgia country where it was filmed, the two boys, who trained a "runt" into a winner, the gentle humor of the piece and the elegant bird dog, Tiverton Invader, who plays the title role.

"The Biscuit Eater" is a remarkably suspenseful for a story of two kids and their battle to keep a wretched little hound alive. A "biscuit eater" is a despised dog who himself eats the food he is supposed to be hunting for his master. So when "Promise," as he's called, is found eating eggs in the chicken coop, you wonder what his punishment will be, whether it will be effective enough to cure him. When the boys cross a creek to "Echo," who has been handed their loved pup, you wonder if their venture will succeed. You even grow trained enough to hold your breath while "Promise" holds his point. And when the choice comes between "Promise's" victory and Dad's bread and butter, if his own "Georgia Boy" doesn't win, your heart will break when you watch brave Billy Lee battle with his convictions to call "Promise," "you ole biscuit eater!" so he'll break his point.

If, in this too sentimentalized outline, you find "The Biscuit Eater" a trifle too gushy for your tastes, blame it on your reporter. This open-air story is happily restrained, keeping an essentially sentimental angle at a dignified length. One of the means is its acting.

Billy Lee is the chief hero of all this. He's the sort of Georgian lad Mark Twain might have created. His pal is Cordell Hickman whose rolling eyes and Biblical vocabulary (He's called "Text," a Bible name) will make you roar with glee whether reporting the birth of a litter ("It's twins . . . no it's twiplets . . . no it's two twins . . . no, it's twiplets and twins"), or summing up the troubles of a day. But best of all there's Tiverton Invader himself, as handsome a bird dog as ever rustled a quail. R. L. C.

The New Yorker

—By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 16.

JIM FARLEY: Although Roosevelt and Willkie favor the Allies against the Rome-Berlin axis, their campaign theme songs have been written by Rome and Berlin. The Republicans will campaign with Irving Berlin's "God Bless America." Harold Rome's "Franklyn D. Roosevelt Jones" was revised by the author last week, and new third term lyrics inserted.

PEARL BUCK: All is not serene, between Sinclair Lewis and Eugene O'Neill, the only American men who ever won the Nobel Prize in Literature. It started over "Ah, Wilderness!" in which Lewis gave a surprisingly good performance—so good that even Dorothy Thompson said: "You know what? He's not bad" . . . J. B. PRIESTLEY: Roark Bradford, author of "John Henry," has agreed, to provide a home for your children, for the duration of the war.

RICHARD ALDRICH: Your bride, Gertrude Lawrence, has signed a contract to be starred in Moss Hart's new play, "I Am Listening" . . . J. EDGAR HOOVER: Your men have been trailing an odd-looking stranger in Norfolk, Va., because he takes photos and makes sketches near the shipyards. He's not a spy, but Boris Aronson, the scenic designer. He needs those photos and sketches as models for "Little Joe," the Negro show for which he is designing the sets . . . N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE: If it's any consolation, Edward C. Eicher, of Iowa, one of the Securities and Exchange commissioners, is expected to resign in the fall and receive his judicial reward. Eicher will become a Circuit Court of Appeals judge.

COL. BATISTA: Your nephew, who spends all his time at La Conga here, didn't go to Havana to vote for you. He said he was confident his vote wouldn't be needed . . . KIRSTEN FLAGSTAD: Oscar Levant, who broke your attendance record at Lewisohn Stadium, when he played the Gershwin concert Saturday night, was under doctor's care for 48 hours—because the two-day postponement on account of rain had made him ill.

FELIX FERRY: Robert Gravis, page-boy at your Cafe Pierre, is bringing a $50,000 lawsuit, because the Park Lane Hotel doesn't believe in Horatio Alger. The page-boy will sue for these damages on a contract he allegedly had to be manager at the Park Lane's new cafe room . . . SAM RAYBURN: Maury Maverick, who attacked Wendell Willkie last week, tells his friends that he will not try to gain regain his seat in Congress, but is content to seek reelection as Mayor of San Antonio.

NATL. LAWYERS GUILD: The new organiation of liberal lawyers, headed by the group which recently resigned from your rank, will start functioning in the fall. To prevent any infiltrations, the membership roll will be limited probably to 1,000.

GYPSY ROSE LEE: Sally Rand held a long conference with the attorneys and directors of the Park Central, where she'll perform soon. After a long, dignified discussion about terms and routines, Sally arose and told them: "Let's not delude ourselves, gentlemen. As soon as I start sagging in back, my career is finished."

JEROME KERN: Ira Gershwin will write the lyrics to your music for Alan Scott's new show. The Groucho Marx-Norman Krasna musical, for which the producers want Kern & Gershwin songs, will have to wait . . . CORDELL HULL: Nazi "observers" for your Pan-American conference last week reserved two suites at the Hotel Nacional in Havana.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 16 (INS).—Here's a surprise! Universal has borrowed Joan Fontaine from David Selznick to star in a remake of "Back Street." We said just the day before that Joan, who made such a sensation in "Rebecca," was eager to return to the screen. She'll be directed by that fine British director, Robert Stevenson who did such an excellent job on "Tom Brown's School Days," "Nine Days a Queen" etcetera. Sort of family affair over at universal, it would seem. Stevenson's wife, Anna Lee, is in the Marlene Dietrich picture and Brian Aherne, Joan's husband, is in "Hired Wife," both U pictures.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Just before Hal Wallis left on a four weeks' vacation, he sent Irene Dunne a copy of the script of "Mr. Skeffington" to read. He plans to present it like "Goodbye Mr. Chips," starting with the end and fading back to the present. I had a lemonade with Irene at the races, and she said she hadn't made up her mind what to do next.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Oren Haglund and Ginger Rogers have been dating; Oren is ready to battle anyone who says he and Priscilla Lane only lived together 24 hours. He says they were married—and very happy, for a year; Frances Robinson and Robert Riskin are hotter than these summer days; Maj. Adams, an Englishman who came from England to buy planes, is beauing Ruth Foran here and there; Barry Norton, once a movie favorite, and Lupe Velez, dining at Ciro's; Deanna Durbin is home with a bad cold.

Alice Richardson, Harper's bazaar fashion expert, guest of honor at a cocktail party given by Francis Mygatt. She looked very chic as befits a stylist; Dorothy Lamour explaining she had worked in a rain scene all day, and her new haircut wasn't as pretty as usual. Looked all right to me. Dottie and Greg Bautzer dining tete-a-tete at Del Mar Hotel; John Carroll beauing June Duprez to the night spots; Lon Chaney, jr., suffering with a strep throat; the Kent Taylor baby is expected any minute. Mrs. Taylor has already gone to Good Samaritan Hospital.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

(News item: Jim Farley will leave Cabinet to assume control of the New York Yankees.)

And on the day that Mr. Farley summons Manager Joe McCarthy for his first policy-shaping conference, we presume that the conversations will proceed something like this:

POVICH

FARLEY: Glad to see you, Mr. McCarthy. It is always a pleasure to visit this gr-reat city in this gr-reat State of New York with all its magnificent postoffices and public buildings that the peepul have worked so hard to attain.

McCARTHY: That's right, boss.

FARLEY: We might as well get down to business. Who are the players on our ball club who joined the team prior to 1939?

McCARTHY: Ruffing, DiMaggio, Gomez, Dickey, Crosetti, Gordon, Selkirk . . .

FARLEY: That's enough. They must be replaced!

McCARTHY: What's that?

FARLEY: We must replace all of these men. I will not compromise a principle.

McCARTHY: Who?

FARLEY: They must go I say. I am constitutionally opposed to anybody serving more than two terms. It's un-American, it's opposed to tradition and all democratic principles. They must go or I will take a walk.

McCARTHY: You're the boss, but how are we going to explain it to the fans?

FARLEY: I've had to explain tougher things than this. What this club needs right now is a good keynoter. A good keynoter is half the battle.

McCARTHY: You mean keystoner, don't you, boss?

FARLEY: I don't care what you, baseball people, call him, just look the field over and get us a keynoter. That's the first thing that must be done.

McCARTHY: And where do you propose to get the money to buy all these new ball players?

FARLEY: Money can always be raised. The untapped resources of this gr-reat country hold billions. Soak the rich. Up our box seats to $5.50, increase the public debt, jam through a deficit appropriation. Getting the dough is elemental, my dear McCarthy.

McCARTHY: Uh huh.

FARLEY: This man Rolfe, I understand he is from New Hampshire. He must be the first to go.

McCARTHY: Rolfe? Why Rolfe, boss?

FARLEY: I won't tolerate a man from New Hampshire. That State is contiguous to Vermont. Heaven knows how much of the doctrine of the Republican State of Vermont has seeped across the border. We can take no chances on Rolfe. Party workers must come first.

McCARTHY: But where am I going to get a third baseman who can carry Rolfe's glove. You're making it hard for me, boss.

FARLEY: No one man is bigger than the ball team. Come, come now. You can get a third baseman as good as Rolfe, can't you?

McCARTHY: I can give you the answer to that in two words, boss.

FARLEY: Two words? What are they?

McCARTHY: Im—possible.

FARLEY: You are sounding like a rank reactionary. Nothing is impossible with concerted party action.

McCARTHY: There are a couple of parties in the International League I'd like to sign.

FARLEY: Don't mention that word international. We've got to keep this thing strictly American.

McCARTHY: This fellow is an outfielder and fast on his feet. He can carry the mail. He's still in the Army, but——

FARLEY: Ouch! That's enough. I don't want to hear anything more about the Army and carrying the mail. That's out around here, understand?

McCARTHY: 'Scuse me, boss.

FARLEY: And another thing. I'm cutting salaries on this club. A straight 20 per cent slash. We've got to make some show toward economy. That always goes great with the peepul.

McCARTHY: That's a bad thing, cutting salaries. You're going to have dissatisfied ball players, and——

FARLEY: I've run bigger shows than this and run 'em in my own way, and I'd say I've been a pretty successful man.

McCARTHY: Okay, boss, but how much are you going to cut my salary?

FARLEY—Your salary? Let me see. How long have you been with this ball club?

McCARTHY: Ten years, boss.

FARLEY: Ten years! And I quit F. D. at eight years! As for your salary, Mr. McCarthy, I am cutting it 100 per cent.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 16.—Sportin' around:

Is Max Schmeling in a concentration camp? A Yorkville woman who is a friend of the fighter's wife says she has received a letter from Mrs. Schmeling, telling her that Max was put behind barbed wire after he returned from his mysterious trip to Lisbon some months ago. It is said that Max's crime was agreeing with sentiments expressed by his Czecho-Slovakian father-in-law, and that both he and his trainer, Max Machon, were stopped in their efforts to get seats on a clipper.

CONSIDINE

That Schmeling and Machon tried to get back here—despite their lame protests that they were in Lisbon on a vacation—is apparent. About the time they were supposed to arrive here, several letters to Machon, from Germany, arrived at the Essex house, where the German fighter and his trainer invariably stayed. Schmeling told Mike Jacobs before leaving here the last time that he wouldn't go back, except that his Anni was in Germany—in fact they were never permitted to leave Germany together.

Note to local gamblers: 500 Texans from Dallas and its prominent suburbs, Fort Worth and Sweetwater, arrive here tomorrow for the Jenkins-Armstrong fight, their pockets full of money to bet on Lew . . . Jack Doyle still names the Yanks as favorites to win the American League pennant.

Challedon goes tomorrow, rain or shine, in the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs. Sound of wind and limb, as his recent victory over Many Stings showed, the W. L. Brann 4-year-old is now thirteenth among the all-time money winners of the turf, with $253,235. Victory in the Massachusetts 'Cap (he was beaten in it last year by Fighting Fox in an upset) would boost him to fifth place in the rankings, behind Seabiscuit, Sun Beau, Equipoise and Gallant Fox, with two or three fat years of racing left in him . . . Nelson Dunstan, the well-bred breeding authority, traces all gray race horses back to the Brownlow Turk or the Alcock Arabian, both of whom lived in the early 1700's.

The National League club which fat Frederick Fitzsimmons has beaten more often than any other club in the loop is—of all teams!—Brooklyn. During Freddie's years with the Giants he beat the Dodgers 33 times. When he let Fitz go, on June 11, 1937, Bill Terry told the fashionably stout hurler, "Freddie, I'm doing this because I think it will help my club." Terry traded him to the Dodgers for young Tom Baker, who long since has dropped out of the big leagues, via Washington, while Fitz looks good for another year or two. His knuckle ball takes comparatively little out of him and he helps himself with a grade of fielding that gives the Dodgers five infielders when he works. Fitz nearly ended his career back in 1926 when he rocked his rocking chair over his thumb, crushing it. No man gets as much kick out of baseball as old Fred—for every strike he throws, every man he retires, is a subtle reflection on the manager who thought Fitz was washed up three years ago.

Jersey Jones, the capable fight-camp publicity man, won't take any offer from his firm, the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, for matches for his fine young heavyweight, Charley Ketchuk—on the almost unheard of grounds that Ketchuk isn't quite ready to be flung in there as fodder for more experienced fighters . . . Francis T. Hunter, who knows them all, says that a match between the ten leading pro tennis players and the ten leading amateurs would come out about 7-3 in favor of the boys who accept money openly . . . We'll stick with our "Armstrong in the tenth round" prediction—and hope we don't get stuck with it.

Gil Gains 3d Round; Lynch Out

Hunt Beats National Public Parks Champ; Misses Lee, Bishop Also Eliminated

By Jack Munhall

Baltimore Country Club, July 16. Temperamental Gilbert Hunt, the Mathematical wizard from George Washington University, was the only surviving player from the District of Columbia area as dusk gathered here this evening on the second day of play in the annual Maryland State and Middle Atlantic section lawn tennis championships.

Playing one of the features of the day while 2,500 fans bustled around from one court to another in an effort to glimpse some of the national ranked stars seldom seen here—Alice Marble, Don McNeill et al.—Hunt squeezed by Seymour Greenberg, national public parks champion from Northwestern University.

Winning a hard-fought 6—1, 3—6, 8—6 victory, Hunt gained the third round together with most of the other seeded men. The exceptions were seventh-ranked Frank Guernsey who defaulted on account of an injury, and the foreign ranked stars, Ladislav Hecht, of Czecho-Slovakia, and Littleton Rogers, of Ireland.

Meanwhile, Hugh Lynch, only other District man not eliminated yesterday, defaulted his first round match to Ronald Lubin, of the University of Southern California. Earlier Margo Lee and Hazel Bishop, both of Washington, fell before strong second-round opposition.

Hunt Erratic

Miss Lee, City of Wshington champion, offered stubborn competition to Pat Cumming, a big-time circuit campaigner, in the second set after getting off to a bad start, probably induced by nervousness. She rallied to deadlock the game score at 5—5, only to yield her own service in the eleventh to a pair of scorching baseline placements and allow her New York foe to close out on her own service in the twelfth after a deuce count the final result was 6,375.

Miss Bishop was admittedly outclassed by the hard-hitting, well-rounded game of Nina Brown, England's No. 3 woman star in 1939. The scores were 6—3, 6—1. It was as the Washington public parks performer remarked afterwards, "I didn't see the ball half the time until it had gone by."

Hunt, who electrified opening-day fans at this tournament last year by walking off the courts during a match with Eddie Alloo after what he termed a bum decision, and then returned on persuasion, was erratic today. Impressive in his yesterday's rout of former Baltimore Champion Eddie Jacobs, Hunt started off against Greenberg in the same style.

Responds Under Pressure

Taking the opening game on service with the aid of two crackling aces, he shut out the promising

Washington A. A. Track Activities Get Under Way at Central

Coach Harry Helm Organizing Squad at Central High Stadium

If you are a former college track star, high school ace, or just a fellow with a hankering to run, you would do well to dash right out to Central High School stadium today and investigate the activities of the Washington Athletic Association.

Now in process of organizing a track and field squad, members of the W. A. A. held their first workout yesterday under the guidance of Harry Helm, Georgetown University alumnus and former Hoya middle-distance star, and received their orders for a strenuous session of training for "big time" meets coming up this fall and winter.

Helm, who succeeded Catholic University's Fod Cotton, outlined plans for large-scale track activities for the W. A. A. and announced the Central track will be available to all persons interested every afternoon from 5 to 7 p. m.

Nucleus of the squad just now is made up of Maryland University stars Frank Cronin, Tom Fields, Jim Kehoe, Mason Chronister and Gordon Kinge, and Harry March, of North Carolina University.

Helm, however, said the associa-

New York Boxer Dies in Ring After Being Kayoed

By the Associated Press

New York, July 16.—Pete Asero, a local welterweight boxer, died in the ring tonight after he had been technically knocked out by Pete Muscarner, of Brooklyn, in a bout at the Queensboro Arena. Asero collapsed after the fight was stopped in the fourth round and died before he could be carried from the ring.

Hockey Manager Dies

Ryder Cup Golfers Take Three of First Four Scotch Foursomes in Play For Red Cross Benefit

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 16.—Gene Sarazen's boast that he could pick a team capable of defeating America's Ryder Cup golfers appeared unlikely of attainment tonight after the Nation's crack professionals finished four matches of their two-day competition over the rolling, heavily-trapped Oakland Hills County Club course.

Walter Hagen's Ryder Cuppers won three of the four Scotch foursome matches and need only to break even in the eight singles battles tomorrow to retain their prestige. Receipts are going to the Red Cross War Relief Fund.

The results of today's 36-hole battles:

Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., and Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., defeated Craig Wood, of New York, and Billy Burke, of Cleveland, two up, for a Ryder victory.

Nelson, McSpaden Win

Byron Nelson, of Toledo, and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Winchester, Conn., routed two of the old guard—Tommy Armour, of Chicago, and Jimmy Thomson, of Chicopee, Mass.—by the colossal margin of 8 and 7 for Ryder victory No. 2.

Henry Picard, professional Golfers Association champion from Hershey, Pa., and Dick Metz, of Chicago, spurted in the stretch to turn back Ed Oliver, of Hornell, N. Y., and Harry Cooper, of Chicago, 3 and 4, for the Cuppers' third victory.

The lone point for the challengers was scored by Texans Jimmy Demaret and Ben Hogan who overcame Ralph Guldahl, United States Open champion of 1937 and 1938, and Sam Snead, the hillbilly slugger from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., one up. They had to shoot the best golf of the day to win.

Anybody's Battle

For the first 18 holes the match was anybody's battle with three of the engagements ending even. Nelson and McSpaden held a three-up lead over Thomson and Armour when they went to lunch.

In the afternoon the Ryder Cupmen left no doubt of their superiority at the business of getting around the course in alternate shots.

Nelson and McSpaden lost three of the first four holes to Armour and Thomson but thereafter they either halved or won every hole, an outgoing afternoon card of 34, 2 under par, setting the stage for an early end of the slaughter.

Smith and Runyan shot each 18 in 72 in besting Burke, 1931 National Open champion, and Wood, two golfers who are nearing 40.

Smith contributed the day's greatest shot on the first hole when he plunked a second within four inches of the cup. Runyan tapped the ball in for a birdie.

Buddy Knox Beats Brescia in Albany

Chisox Defeat Yanks, 5 to 1, To Take Series

By the Associated Press

New York, July 16.—The Chicago White Sox took the deciding game of their series with the New York Yankees today, 5 to 1, on Johnny Rigney's six-hit hurling and a 12-nit offensive topped by Joe Kuhel's fifteenth home run.

Rigney struck out five and gave no passes in a workmanlike performance for his eighth victory. He would have had a shutout except for a single by Joe DiMaggio in the fourth, driving Red Rolfe home from second. It was the eleventh consecutive game in which DiMag has hit safely.

The Sox treated Lefty Marius Russo roughly, bunching four hits for two runs in the second inning and scoring two more in the third on Kuhel's single, Julius Solters' triple and a fly. Then in the fifth Kuhel homered for the second time in two days.

Halt 'Ridiculous' Comeback Efforts, N. B. A. Is Asked

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., July 16.—The National Boxing Association and State regulatory bodies should do something to stop "ridiculous comebacks" by retired fighters, in the opinion of Frank Wiener, of Philadelphia, former chairman of the Pennsylvania boxing commission.

"Unless something is done," Wiener said in an interview with the press-unjon, "the boxing game will become a farce." He suggested boxers be retired after reaching an age limit of 35 years and be prohibited from returning to the ring after three years of inactivity.

7-Run Spree In 6th Wears Out Runners

Five Cleveland Hurlers Fail to Stem Nats' Attack; Carresquel Winner

By Shirley Povich.

Post Staff Writer

At the invitation of the Cleveland Indians, who were seized with an attack of sixth-inning jitters, the Nats dug themselves out from under a 7-2 deficit yesterday and swept the three-game series from the erstwhile league leaders.

With the Indians making a sorry mess of a five-run lead, the Nats packed seven runs into the sixth inning, with the aid of only three hits, and eventually won the ball game, 11 to 8.

Manager Oscar Vitt paraded five Cleveland pitchers to the mound, but the chief guilt attached itself to one Joe Dobson and Johnny Allen. Dobson couldn't get the ball over the plate and Allen couldn't get anybody out. The Nats had the cooperation, too, of Third Baseman Ken Keltner, who messed up things generally for the Indians with a wild throw to the plate in that wild sixth.

Myer, West Heroes

Buddy Myer and Sammy West emerged as the heroes of the Nats' sixth-inning uprising. Myer slugged the first two runs across the plate, and Pinch Hitter West delivered a highly important single against Allen that fetched home what was then the tying and winning runs.

Washington's pitching, at least until little Rene Monteagudo appeared on the scene in the sixth inning, was nothing to chronicle for the home folks. Joe Krakauskas started giving the Indians runs in pairs, then Alex Carrasquel took over to the great delight of the Indians. Monteagudo preserved the Nats' lead through the late innings, allowing only one run, obviously unearned.

The delightful details of that sixth inning were these:

Dobson, who hadn't allowed a hit for three innings after relieving Harry Eisenstadt, started to scuttle the game for the Indians by walking the first three men to face him in the sixth—Lewis, Walker and Bonura. He found the plate for only one strike during those proceedings. He eased the tension somewhat by slipping a third strike past Bloodworth, but Buddy Myer jolted him for a single to right that moved two runs home.

Wild From Start

In panic, Vitt called Allen from the bull pen and that gent's first act was to walk Pofahl to load the bases again. In this crisis, Rick Ferrell handcuffed Third Baseman Keltner with a hard grounder that went for a single, and another run moved home.

Harris inserted Sammy West as a pinchhitter for Carrasquel and it was a happy choice. After tak-

Colored Post, $51.50 Shot, Wins Feature Race at Hagerstown

2 Horsemen Suspended By Stewards

W. G. Whitney, W. G. Merion Barred; Officials Refuse to Discuss the Charges

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Hagerstown, Md., July 16.—Colored Post, an aptly named daughter of Color Sergeant and Postillion, turned in a surprise victory today in the running of the Boonsboro Purse, featuring the program here. With two dismal 1940 efforts and one cheap victory in seven starts last year as a recommendation, the 3-year-old clung to the rail and finished a head in advance of Mrs. M. Sensenich's Satin Royce. Mrs. H. Horst's Way Out was third in the battle over the 5-furlong route, known here as the Mason-Dixon course.

Carrying the colors of A. J. Pannell and the baby of the field of fillies and mares, Colored Post was given scant thought by serious bettors and hung up a $51.50 mutuel. She was ridden by Jockey Noble Godfrey, an unfashionable rider hereabouts. Her time of 1:03 3-5 was better than average.

The day brought official rulings against two horsemen. Trainer W. G. Whitney was suspended along with Shanteb and Single Ply, horses under his care, "for practices detrimental to the best interests of racing." W. G. Merion was denied the privileges of the course and his case was referred to the Maryland Racing Commission. Stewards would not discuss the charges against the two men.

Getting back to the day's feature, Colored Post just refused to quit. She had clear sailing all the way in contrast to some of the trouble suffered by her rivals but she never gave up trying. Honey Maid flashed in front going to the first turn, but Colored Post saved ground to get to the top and no one could dislodge her.

Jockey Danny Scocca made a foul claim against the winner but, after hearing his story, the stewards ordered the official light flashed.

The daily double paid $43.30. Smart Lad, ridden by Jockey John Hernandez, came from far back to defeat the favored Mr. Jim. The latter ran out enough to allow the winner to come through on the inside entering the stretch. Hurdy Gurdy took a nose victory over Serrano in the second race. Smart Lad paid $8.70 and Hurdy Gurdy paid $6.40 in the individual betting.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SMART LAD, $8.70, $3.00, $2.90; MR. JIM, $2.30, $2.40; SATIN MARIE, $6.70.

SMART LAD, slow to begin, came wide for racing room while improving position, came to inside of MR. JIM approaching stretch, took command and was kept to drive to end. MR. JIM went to front in opening furlong, was steadied, went out at stretch turn and closed gamely. SATIN MARIE was taken up repeatedly going to first turn and weakened in closing stages. HOSPITABLE was in trouble early and failed to rally.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:00½. Off 3:03. Winner, A. D. Alexander's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HURDY GURDY, $6.40, $3.80, $2.70; SERRANO, $4.40, $3.40; LIMERICK, $3.30.

HURDY GURDY assumed command at once, saved ground and withstood long drive to barely last. SERRANO was steadied closest to pace for 3 furlongs, came to outside when placed to drive and just failed to get up. LIMERICK was hard ridden and had no excuses. BOO'S LETTER could not reach contention at any stage.

Daily Double, SMART LAD and HURDY GURDY, Paid $43.30

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:35. Off 3:37. Winner, Mrs. H. S. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WINDSOR CHIEF, $15.80, $6.50, $3.40; STEALING HOME, $4.50, $3.00; PERFECT LIAR, $3.20.

WINDSOR CHIEF, hustled to contention from outside position, came to inside of STEALING HOME entering stretch, responded when shaken up and drew clear in stretch. STEALING HOME was rushed to take command, could not shake off winner and was weakening at end. PERFECT LIAR was in close quarters early and came willingly at close. REMOLEE was squeezed back between horses in opening furlong and was hard ridden thereafter.

FOURTH RACE—Mason-Dixon course (5 furlongs). Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:07. Off 4:08. Winner, A. J. Pannell's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLORED POST, $51.50, $27.50, $17.90; SATIN ROYCE, $22.00, $9.80; WAY OUT, $3.80.

COLORED POST saved ground while racing forwardly from start, took command when HONEY MAID was squeezed back, withstood long drive and just lasted. SATIN ROYCE was hard ridden, swerved entering stretch and closed willingly. Scocca's foul claim against winner was not allowed. WAY OUT was strongly handled while close up and weakened. HONEY MAID tired gradually after meeting slight interference early.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:40. Off 4:42. Winner, Mrs. H. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANTER BELLE, $9.60, $5.40, $3.60; PETEE LAD, $6.80, $4.40; COUNTER PASS, $4.90.

CANTER BELLE, close up from start, responded when placed to drive, disposed of PETEE LAD to get to front and held away thereafter. PETEE LAD went to front at once, set good pace, but could not resist winner. COUNTER PASS was outrun early and closed full of run after going wide for racing room. SEA FINN was well placed from start, but failed to rally.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:45. Off 5:47. Winner, J. R. Cale's b. g. (8), by Salmon Trout—Shirazy. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:56⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAHI, $7.10, $5.10, $3.60; PIN HOOKER, $8.50, $4.40; STEPPING IN, $2.80.

MAHI took command at once, saved ground and held on gamely. PIN HOOKER, raised in early stages, found racing room on inside to improve position, was shut off entering stretch and closed gamely while in close quarters. STEPPING IN was steadied while in close quarters early, moved up menacingly and closed full of run. HICKORY LAD bore out at turns.

Selections at Hagerstown

Dear Al:

Jockey A. F. Martinez was painfully injured yesterday morning in a training accident. The Cuban boy was working Web Foot when the horse bolted at a turn and crashed into the outside fence. Martinez was cut up about the head and face. I wish Art Brown wouldn't sing "Under the Yum Yum Tree" on the same day that the horse Yum Yum runs. Cost Galt Davis and myself a buck each yesterday. Sort of disrupted us. Jockey George Cardoza was sore from his fall here last Saturday and did not take mounts. One of the Benningites wants the tracks to have a special window at the entrance where a bettor can buy $20 worth of betting checks which would allow him a reserve seat. In other words, he contends that the seats are hogged by non-wagering customers. It looks like a new deal for Benningites as far as winners are concerned. But I'm going to keep still and try to hold the little luck we've been having. H. O. Wilt has shipped out Lead Please and Trizie Lass. I got rid of another horse (?) yesterday. Patchpocket goes in new colors today. You can have him. Jockey Willie Obert, America's oldest active rider, accepted his first mounts at the meeting yesterday. Just can't keep the kid down. Paste the name of Bay Farewell, a 2-year-old, in your hat. They can't kid all the people all the time. Judge J. Gilbert Haus was slightly indisposed yesterday—too much watermelon. No racing at Belair on next Monday and Tuesday. The meeting starts on Wednesday and goes right through the ten days instead of laying off on two Mondays as was the case here. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Misty Eye has won two over this track and appears capable of taking still another purse in this field. Needs only the right handling. Glitter Girl had plenty of speed at Charles Town and is dangerous. Asunder gets in light and is a threat.

Second race—Amerlee could be the right one in this sprint. Promises to get to the top early and I believe the son of Busy American will be right there at the end. Plain Ace turned a good effort first out at the other track and is dangerous. Geantell for the show end.

Third race—Square Play's last was encouraging and this could be the spot for a crackdown. Dressmaker gets in light and has that good last as a recommendation. Depinard for the minor award.

Fourth race—Summer Stock showed speed at Delaware Park and gets in action here with light weight. I'm going to string along. Schley Al was miserably handled last out and is dangerous with better racing luck. Congo Prince may not like the turns.

Fifth race—Pandoramint could do a lot of running and will be all the better if the track is off. Needs only some intelligent handling. Eltonhead downed a somewhat similar field here and is a threat. Little Harpist should get into the money circle.

Sixth race—Moon Harvest jogged at Charles Town and is the natural choice in this event. Artist's last was bad, but he belongs with these. Kenner probably will take care of the show money.

Seventh race—Mastake seems the best suited of these and promises to have the right rider. I see no reason for mistakes. Home Hunter had a rough trip last out and is a threat. Sedate for the show end.

Best bet—Misty Eye.

Monida Captures Suffolk Feature And Pays $3.40

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 16.—Miss Constance Morabito's Monida, third in the recent Hannah Dustin Handicap, easily handled five foes in the $1,200 allowance mile feature at Suffolk Downs today, scoring by a length and a quarter over T. D. Buhl's Domkin.

Jockey Willie Duffy held the 3-year-old daughter of Pilate off the fast pace set by Domkin and Ben Lister's One-O-One, sent her up after a half-mile and easily ran down Domkin in the stretch. Domkin took the place by two lengths over B. P. Woodson's Uncle Walter.

The winner ran the mile in 1:39 3-5 and paid $3.40, $2.40 and $2.40. Domkin paid $3 and $2.80, while Uncle Walter returned $3.20.

Caster Holds Tigers to Six Hits as Macks Triumph, 3 to 1

Three Hits And an Error Decide Game

All Happens in 3d Inning as A's Win; Higgins' Bobble Aids Macks to Score 2 Runs

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 16.—Paced by George Caster's six-hit pitching, the Athletics dampened the Detroit Tigers' pennant hopes with a 3 to 1 victory today for their third third triumph in the four-game series.

Like Caster, Freddy Hutchinson, making his first start for the Tigers since his recall from Buffalo, allowed six hits, but the Athletics bunched three with "Pinky" Higgins' error in the third to score two runs. Sam Chapman added the third run with his thirteenth circuit clout of the season in the eighth.

Barney McCosky's triple followed by Charley Gehringer's single gave Detroit its lone run in the sixth.

Nats Score 7 In 6th, Beat Indians, 11-8

West, Myer Stand Out As Cleveland Calls On Five Hurlers

Northwestern student in the first set until the sixth when Greenberg ing two strikes, West singled past Trosky into rightfield and the fourth and fifth runs of the inning moved home, tying the score at 7-7. But the Nats weren't through.

George Case grounded to Keltner and that fellow, in his haste to catch Ferrell going home from third, chucked the ball into the dirt past Hemsley. Ferrell scored on the error, with West taking third. The seventh run of the session was sort of involved. Lewis grounded to Mack, who attempted to tag Case on the base lines but was foiled when Case retraced his steps toward first. Mack then threw to first to catch Lewis, and Case was doubled up at second base, but West meanwhile crossed the plate with a run that counted despite the double-play inasmuch as it was no force play.

It was a wild affair from the outset. Krakky gave up two runs in the first inning on three solid hits and an error by Bonura, and the Indians upped their lead to 4-1 in the second on two more runs aided by another Bonura misplay. The Nats meanwhile scored a first-inning run off Eisenstat when Lewis tripled to the centerfield corner and Walker singled, and they came up with another run in the second when Pofahl and Case singled.

Rene Impressive

Carrasquel and Dobson got the pitching jobs in the third inning and against the big Venezuelan the Indians upped their lead to 7-2, with two runs in the fourth and another in the fifth. Dobson, meanwhile, was holding the Nats hitless. But, eventually, came the sixth and bye bye Dobson.

Monteagudo, who was entrusted with the Nats' 9-7 lead, yielded a run in the seventh which was scarcely his fault. With two out, Allen reached base when Ferrell tipped his bat and singles by Chapman and Weatherly scored him. Case halted that rally by going back to the fence for Boudreau's long smash.

The little Cuban held the Indians hitless in the last two innings, but he had the added comfort of two more Washington runs. They occurred in the seventh. Gee Walker knocked Allen out of the box by knocking a home run into the left-field bleachers and Zeke Bonura greeted Johnny Humphries, the Injuns' fourth pitcher, with a long triple to the centerfield wall. Jimmy Pofahl scored Bonura with a single through the box and Ferrell brought Cleveland pitcher No. 5 into the game with a single to center. Bill Zuber finally got the side out.

Cubs Outhit But Shut Out Giants, 2 to 0

Gumbert Allows Only Four Hits; Single in Seventh Wins Game

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 16.—The New York Giants outhit the Cubs again today, but were shut out, 2 to 0, by Lefty Vern Olsen for their fifth defeat in seven games on the current Western swing.

Harry Gumbert held Chicago to four hits, but the Bruins managed to tally twice in the seventh on one safety, a single by Phil Cavaretta with the bases filled. Gumbert walked Bill Herman and when Augie Galan bunted both runners were safe on Hank Danning's low throw to second. Then Hank Leiber waited out a walk and Cavaretta broke up the game.

The Giants got six hits and five bases on balls from Olsen, whose shutout was his second in five days, but they hit into four double plays and once were retired scoreless with the bases loaded.

Pirates Rally, Beat Dodgers in 8th, 5-3

Bucs Tie Score in Sixth and Push Over 2 Runs in Eighth to Turn Back Flock; Wasdell, Former Nat, Hits Homer

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 16.—The Pirates spotted the Brooklyn Dodgers three runs today and then battled back to beat them, 5 to 3, with some concentrated hitting in the sixth and eighth innings.

The loss dropped the Dodgers to 3½ games behind the idle Cincinnati Reds.

Each team got eight hits, but Pittsburgh crowded four, including three doubles, into the sixth inning to tie the score and added two more and their winning runs in the eighth.

John Lanning went the route for the Pirates for the first time this year. He was touched for two runs in the first inning on three walks and a double by Dixie Walker. He might have been spared some trouble, however, if Arky Vaughan had held onto a throw from Catcher Al Lopez when Pewee Reese attempted to steal second. Reese was safe and Lanning later purposely passed Babe Phelps to fill the bases before Walker doubled.

Jim Wasdell homered for Brooklyn's other run in the fourth.

When the Pirates finally started rolling, they knocked Tex Carleton out of the box in the sixth. Lanning himself led off with a double into the leftfield corner, and went to third on a fly. Bob Elliott singled him home. Vaughan forced Elliott and then scored on a double by Elbie Fletcher.

Tot Presnell halted this rally, but in the eighth he gave up two runs on a single by Young, a triple by Elliott and a forceout, and was charged with the loss.

Bob Uhle Is Sold To Detroit Tigers

Dallas, July 16 (AP).—Robert (Bob) Uhle, star left-hander for the Dallas Rebels, was sold today to the Detroit Tigers for "a sum of money greater than the $7,500" major league draft price for Class A-1 players, President George Schepps of the Dallas Baseball Club said.

Uhle, who leads the Texas League in strikeouts, will remain with the Dallas club during the remainder of the season. He has won ten games and lost ten games this year, fanning 129 batters and walking 77.

Slaughter's Home Run Breaks Tie and Wins For Red Birds

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 16.—Enos Slaughter's tenth home run of the year in the sixth inning today broke a tie and gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 4-to-3 victory over the Boston Bees.

It was the sixth consecutive triumph for the Cards and also gave them a sweep of the four-game series with the Bees.

Big League Scouts Working in Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, July 16.—With six members of the Washington County Baseball League batting over .400, and some fine pitching performances displayed in recent weeks, major league scouts have been here looking over possible recruits.

Schlotterbeck, of the Boonsboro team, is leading the league in hitting with an average of .491. Three other members of the Boonsboro team are also in the .400 class, Sterner, .424; Rowe, .419, and Talbert, .413. Morris, of the Chevies, and M. Brashears, of the Exports, are also hitting over .400.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Numerous Nats covered themselves with honors yesterday in the come-from-behind victory over the Indians, but the man who made the greatest gain in the Man of the Month contest was Charles Solomon (Buddy) Myer. We distributed Man-of-the-Month points as follows:

To Myer, six points, because his single with the bases full in the sixth inning drove in two runs that put the Nats back in the ball game.

To Sammy West, five points, because his single as a pinch-hitter with the bases full in the sixth, drove in the two runs that tied the score.

To Rick Ferrell, four points, because his single in the sixth put the tying runs in scoring position.

To Rene Monteagudo, four points, because he pitched clever relief ball to hold the Nats' lead in the last three innings.

To Buddy Lewis, three points, because he hit a triple and single and played a clever game in the outfield.

To Gerald Walker, three points, because his single drove in a run and because he hit a seventh-inning homer.

To Jimmy Pofahl, two points, because he singled twice and drove in a run, the totals:

Sidney Hudson	41	Jimmy Pofahl	9
Rick Ferrell	32	Dutch Leonard	5
Cecil Travis	22	Alex Carrasquel	5
Buddy Myer	21	Jimmy Bloodworth	5
Rene Monteagudo	21	Sammy West	5

Challedon Carries Top Weight Today

13 Entries Revealed For $50,000 Handicap At Suffolk Downs

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 16.—With W. L. Brann's Challedon carrying top impost of 130 pounds and George Woolf up, 13 entries were announced today for the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs tomorrow.

Three-year-olds and up are eligible for the classic, which will be over a mile and one furlong route.

Winner of seven consecutive outings, Challedon was expected to go to the post the favorite.

Turf enthusiasts looked to George D. Widener's Eight Thirty, carrying 126 pounds, and Belair Stud Farm's Isolator, with 122 pounds, to furnish lively competition. Greentree Stable will make its bid with Hash, bearing 115 pounds.

Other entries were: The Finest, 103; Upstream, 108; Aethelwold, 108; War Dog, 108; Fenelon, 104; Pass Out, 106; Star Boarder, 104; Masked General, 115, and Big Peeble, 109. Scratches were expected to bring the field down to 11 or 12 horses.

Postscripts . . .

In an expansive mood no doubt, since beating the Yankees in their last two games, the Chicago White Sox move into Griffith Stadium today for the start of a three-game series . . . Mr. Dykes' Sox will be greeted first by Dutch Leonard, who has encountered evil times of late and has lost his last three starts . . . Bespectacled Bill Dietrich will be the Chicago pitcher . . . Manager Oscar Vitt withheld Bob Feller from the Washington series to his sorrow . . . He was saving Feller for today's game with the Yankees . . . Vitt was the picture of panic in that sixth inning yesterday, making a half dozen false starts to bring in a relief pitcher before finally signaling for Allen . . . The Indians, with supposedly the best staff in the league, used 13 pitchers in their three games with the Nats . . . Johnny Allen didn't like it when he was removed from yesterday's game after Walker banged him for a home run at the start of the seventh . . . He tossed the ball high in the air and left the scene in a hot stew when Vitt motioned him out . . . Ken Keltner can now understand why they call third base the hot corner in the last three games the Nats literally bombarded him with hot shots and won two games because Keltner couldn't handle the stuff that came his way . . . Jimmy Bloodworth substituted for Cecil Travis at third base yesterday, but you'd never know it by the box score . . . he didn't make a hit and he didn't have a putout, an assist or an error . . . but he saw a pretty thrilling ball game . . . At one point during that sixth inning Joe Dobson made 13 pitches, 12 of which were balls wide of the plate . . . When he was waved out of the box he took up his old rerain, "New Orleans, here I come, right back where I started from." . . . Rick Ferrell, hitting in his old-time style, has suddenly blossomed as the most dangerous clutch hitter on the club . . . Carrasquel received credit for yesterday's victory, but only because he happened to be crossing the diamond at a lucky time . . . Monte Weaver, jobless since being released by Louisville, applied for a job with the Nats yesterday . . . He may be signed. POVICH.

Mrs. Mitchell, Hal Gooding Win D. C. Mixed Scotch Foursome

Register 65 Low Net At Columbia

Mrs. Meckley, Burnett Take Low Gross With 74; Record Field Of 60 in Competition

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. R. C. Mitchell, of Beaver Dam, and her 19-year-old partner, J. Harold Gooding, jr., playing in his first tournament, won low net in the District Golf Association mixed scotch foursome tournament yesterday at Columbia Country Club with a net 65. Play was selective drives and alternate shots, with half-handicap allowance.

Low gross went to the favored team of Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, Kenwood, and Volney Burnett, Beaver Dam, who started 3 over par for the first two holes and still finished with a 74, only 4 over par. Mrs. Meckley and Burnett are holders of the all-time low mixed scotch foursome score, a 70, at Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Mitchell and Gooding played the course in 83 strokes and deducted an 18 handicap for the winning net 65. The largest field in the history of the mixed event competed, 60 teams, only 4 short of the Maryland State field last week, where 19 Baltimore duos were entered.

Gooding in Debut

A birdie deuce on the eighteenth hole helped the Mitchell-Gooding tandem play the out nine in 41 strokes, and they came back in 42. They went over five only twice, on the long par five fifth and twelfth holes, while they played the par three holes in even par, with a birdie, two pars and a single bogey. They played the par fours consistently well. Gooding, a member of Beaver Dam since the first of the year, had never before played in tournament competition, and he picked the most difficult type event for a starter.

Mrs. Meckley and Burnett had their work cut out after starting 5-6 on the first two holes, but they settled down and were out in 39. They played the alternate shots to perfection on the incoming side, every hole in par for a regulation 35 and the 74.

D. C. Golf Association Secretary Dr. W. C. Barr awarded four gross prizes instead of the usual one, and second low gross was a tie between last week's Maryland State victors, Mrs. Myron Davy and M. Parker Nolan, Congressional, and Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, Manor, and Charles Malone, Indian Spring, both with 75's. The latter team came to the eighteenth for 5 for the tie but took 5, while Mrs. Davy's 40-foot bid for a birdie and a tie on the eighteenth fell just short of the cup. Mrs. Davy and Nolan scored 39-36 and Mrs. Stokes and Malone 38-37.

Draws Decide

Bernice Baker, Indian Spring, and Pat Martino, Capital, won second low net with 40-38, 78-11, 67, taking the net prize in preference to fourth low gross. The host club team of Mrs. J. M. Epperly and George Miller, playing as partners for the first time, won their low net with 43-39, 82-14. 68.

Pro-Am Event Today Draws Record Entry

Sweepstakes, Amateur Handicap Also Slated At Chevy Chase Club

The largest pro-amateur field of the season is expected to compete in the Maryland State Golf Association three-in-one tournament today at Chevy Chase.

Pros will be allowed three amateurs in the pro-am event, the simon-pures allowed half handicap allowance. The entry fee will be $2 for the professionals and half that for their partners.

A $2 pro sweepstakes and an amateur handicap event will also be run in conjunction with the 18-hole pro-amateur tourney.

Play will be any time during the day. The tourney is the first Maryland State pro-am to be held over a local course this season, and will give the pros an opportunity to test their games for the Maryland Open championship next Tuesday at Columbia.

Mexican Embassy Staff Invited To Attend Rassles

The entire personnel of the Mexican Embassy, including Dr. Castillo Nagera, Mexican Ambassador, have been invited to attend tomorrow night's wrestling show at Griffith Stadium in which Lupe Acosta, Mexican woman wrestler, will participate.

Lupe, said to hail direct from Mexico City, will attempt to toss around the blonde bombshell known as Mildred Burke, of Columbus, Ohio. Miss Burke, claimer of the world's feminine lightweight title, is undefeated in some 300 shows.

Paul Jones, the scissors expert, meets Bob Weatherly in the feature bout. The preliminary card trots out Lou Plummer against Matros Kirilenko, Joe Dusek versus Frank Sexton and Warren Bockwinkle versus Abe Yourist.

Printers Defeat Gas Light, 8 to 7

A six-run splurge in the fourth inning yesterday paved the way to an 8-7 victory over Washington Gas Light for Union Printers in the Government League.

The Printers were outhit, 10 to 8, and both teams called on two pitchers.

Baltimorean Wins Maryland Junior Open

3 D. C. Lads—Martino, Meyer, Mrstik—Toss Away Title on Finishing Holes; Johnston's 74 Gives Him 2d Straight

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, July 16.—Three Washington youngsters proceeded to toss the Maryland Junior Open Championship away on the finishing holes today and Eddie Johnston, of the Terra Mariae Club, won the event for the second consecutive year with a two-over par 74.

Buck Worsham, 20-year-old assistant pro at Chevy Chase who tied for third in the Bedford Open Championship yesterday, stopped in on his way back to the club and missed a chance to tie on the eighteenth when his bid for a birdie failed by inches. His drive on the short par four finishing hole was just short of the green but his chip shot was wide and he missed the putt for a birdie. His 75 tied Tony Martino, of Capital, for second and Worsham won by six strokes in the six-hole play-off, one under par to five over.

Martino finished with a bogey five on the easy eighteenth to toss away a chance to beat or tie Johnston, while Manor Club Champion Dick Meyer was even par for 15 holes but he finished five over par on the last three holes for a 77.

Buster Mrstik, of Capital, who won the 15 and under class last year, moved up a step by winning the 16-17-year class in yesterday's tournament after a play-off with Ed Litzeau, of Baltimore. They tied with 80's in the regulation 18 and Mrstik was awarded the six-hole play-off when his opponent unthinkingly picked up his ball on the fifth hole. They were both over par at the time.

Another Washington youngster, Logan Manders, of Manor, won the 15 and under class with an 81. Other District scores included Maryland Junior Champion Freddie Bolton, 81; Earle Skinker, 80, after playing the first eight holes in one under par, and Bob Keene, 83.

Johnston was the first to post a low score and he nearly threw away his chances. He was even par for 16 holes but was lucky to finish 5-5 on the last two holes, one over par each.

O'Donnell's Beats Russell Motors, 2 to 1

O'Donnell's Grill moved to within a half game of the leading Cameo club yesterday by hitting and fielding at the times when such things were needed most and defeating a determined Russell Motors Club, 2 to 1, on the West Ellipse.

It was a bitter loss for Pitcher Clements, of the Motormen. He hurled four-hit ball for the eight innings and fanned 10 men. What's more his mates gathered in 10 hits off O'Donnell Pitcher Senge.

The sea food lads, who celebrated their victory with a dinner at O'Donnell's last night, were unable to score until the sixth, when three of their hits were accounted for. Mizel beat out a bunt, Bonifant singled and then "Toots" Shipp, centerfielder, drove them both home with a clean single.

Despite the fact that he allowed men on base in every inning Senge managed to pull out of every hole nicely, with helpful backing, and the lone Russell run came in the last of the seventh, largely by virtue of a walk. Walters, first man up, walked, went to second on a sacrifice and scored on a single. O'Donnell's meets Heurich tomorrow at 5 p. m. on the North Ellipse.

Police Kill Association's Fireworks

All-Star Game Tonight Will Have to Go On Minus Pyrotechnics

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, July 16.—The American Association was like a small boy today—like a small boy with fireworks money on the Fourth of July, but no place to spend it.

Only the association has already spent its $500 for fireworks and now has run into an adamant chief of police.

Customers were promised an eight-minute fireworks display as a preliminary to tomorrow night's All-Star association baseball game in Ruppert Stadium. The pyrotechnics were purchased. And then Ray Hamey, Kansas City Ball Club secretary, went through the routine of asking Chief of Police Lear B. Reed for a permit.

The request turned out to be not at all routine. Reed said no.

Just Another Game

That was yesterday. Today Hamey appealed to City Manager L. P. Cookingham. Cookingham said it was all right with him, but Reed has control of fireworks.

Reed, meantime, left the city, so as far as the trimmings go it looks like just another ball game in the offing.

Judge K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball; George Trautman, president of the American Association, and Pie Traynor, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, were among the notables arriving for the game.

William Harridge, president of the American League, and Horace Stoneham, owner of the New York Giants and the National League representatives, also are expected.

Record Crowd Seen

Even without the fireworks, it is believed a record attendance will see the game. Only 4,000 unreserved seats remained unsold tonight. A turnout of 18,521 saw the Blues lose to the All-Stars, 19 to 7, a year ago.

Clear, warm weather was forecast.

A majority of the players, except the St. Paul and Indianapolis contributions, were in the city tonight. The Saints and Indians are playing off a scheduled game.

Brecheen to Start

Tom Sheehan, manager of the Minneapolis Club, reiterated that Harry Brecheen, young Columbus southpaw, would start on the mound for All-Stars. In addition to Sheehan, who is the All-Star boss, six players are in the line-up. Ernie Bonham will start for the home nine.

The All-Star team was selected by the American Association Chapter of Baseball Writers, who will hold their annual meeting tomorrow morning as will the league's broadcasters.

George Barton, Minneapolis sportswriter, and William Guthrie, umpire in chief, will be honored before the game in respect to their long service to baseball.

Keith's to Show Fight Films Tomorrow

Films taken from the ringside of the Henry Armstrong-Lew Jenkins fight tonight in New York's Polo Grounds will be shown tomorrow for the first time in any of Washington's larger theater at the RKO-Keith, Hardie Meakin announced yesterday. Films will be rushed to Washington by plane in time for a showing tomorrow afternoon.

Brinkerhoff Pulls Upset, Beats Herbert

Scores 6—0, 6—4 Victory in Public Parks Tennis Meet

Harry Brinkerhoff, jr., surprised one and all yesterday in the men's division of the Public Parks Tournament at the Reservoir Courts with a smashing upset of sixth-seeded George Herbert in straight sets, 6—0, 6—4.

Brinkerhoff's victory provided the tournament with its first major upset and advanced to the final round. Allie Ritzenberg and Ray Stocklinski, seeded No. 1 and 2, respectively, reached the semi-finals. Allis defeated Spencer Howell, 6—1, 6—1, and then mowed down his brother, Hy, 6—2, 6—4. Stocklinski had no trouble taking Hugh Trigg in straight sets, 6—0, 6—1.

SEC Notified Of W. Va. Race Track Intentions

By the Associated Press

Half Moon Racing Association, Inc., Holidays Cove, W. Va., filed with the Securities Commission yesterday a registration statement covering 75,000 shares of $10 par 6 per cent cumulative Class A capital stock and 37,500 shares of 10 cents par Class B stock, to be sold in units of two shares of Class A and one share of Class B at $20.10 a unit.

The statement said that the directors believed that $300,000, in addition to $45,000 to be paid for 220 acres of land near United States Highway 22, in Brooke County, W. Va., would be needed to begin a projected one-mile racing track. It added that if that amount was not realized from sale of the stock by July 1, 1941, the money collected would be refunded pro rata to the subscribers.

2 National City Protests Upheld

Two protests of games in the National City League played Sunday have been upheld, President Vic Gauzza announced yesterday, and will be played over at a later date—the Terminal Ice-Capitol Cafe in the "B" loop, and the Marvin's Credit-Frank Small Motors game in the "A" section.

Terminal, defeated 7-to-1, protested an umpire's decision on a ground rule, claiming that the umpire allowed a Capitol runner to take three bases on a wild throw to first instead of the two allowed. The Motors protest of their 12-9 defeat by Marvin's complained the umpire held up a Motors runner on third when he should have permitted him to score.

Armstrong or Jenkins: KO Certain Tonight

Welterweight, Lightweight Bosses Clash In 12-Round Battle in Polo Grounds; Experts Stumped; 30,000 Expected to See 'Natural'

By Sid Feder,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, July 16.—In a tussle that has the experts stumped on everything except that a knockout is a dead-eyed cinch to happen, Henry Armstrong and Lew Jenkins collide tomorrow night in the Polo Grounds ring.

No one could see how either the welterweight champion or the lightweight boss could miss belting the other guy out somewhere along the 12-round non-title route they'll begin at 8:45 p. m. (E.S.T.)

Just who was going to do it with whom was the big question, and the estimates were that some 30,000 to 40,000 will be sitting in on the proceedings to find out, in what shapes up at this writing as the biggest financial, as well as artistic, fistic festival of the summer.

Picks Jenkins

The charitable bookmaking men, narrowing their odds still further tonight, would give you 8½ to 5 if you liked Texas Lew to win and, just to hold their edge, made you lay 10 to their 5 if you wanted Hammerin' Hank. Armstrong was even money to wear the Texan down and stop him. The Sweetwater swatter, now riding along on an eight-knockout streak, including his one over Lou Ambers which won him the lightweight crown, was 4 to 1 to stiffen the dark destroyer for the first time in his career.

I like Jenkins and his right-hand anvil—a little relic he brought along from his Army horseshoeing days—to stop Armstrong inside six rounds, largely because Hennery hasn't been himself in training, is past his peak—a point even admitted by Manager Eddie Mead—and is a notoriously slow starter. If he does any waiting against Larruping Lou, he's likely to wake up some time later asking who threw that grand piano.

$160,000 Gate Seen

Armstrong will weigh a shade under 140 and Jenkins will have to take a deep breath and forget to cut his fingernails to clear 135.

Of course, Homicide Hank has been known to do a little sleepmaking for the other guy on occasion. In four years, the great little Negro campaigner, one time holder of the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight championships simultaneously, has bayoed 46 opponents.

Jenkins came up out of Texas less than a year ago after banging around the cakes and coffee circuit, to leap to the top in the same skyrocketing manner Armstrong did three years before. He made his first New York start last July 18, and since then has whipped 11 straight opponents.

Promoter Mike Jacobs figures the "gate" will gross over $160,000, making it the second biggest turnstile-clicking affair in which Armstrong has ever participated. His top was $160,380 with Barney Ross two years ago.

Each battler was as confident tonight as a hungry man taking on a steak. Jenkins "reckoned" as how he ought to do that thing in three-four rounds. Eddie Mead figured it would take six or seven for Armstrong to wear Lew down with body belting. Anyway, one and all agreed it figured to be a real nice party.

Parker Heads Clay Courts Net Advance

Sutter, Last to Make Debut Among Seeded Aces, Wins 2 Matches

By the Associated Press

New York, July 16.—Third-seeded Ernie Sutter, of New Orleans, the last of the ranking players to make his debut in the Eastern Clay Court Championships, won two matches today but still was a round behind most of the field. Ernie disposed of two local players, James Slater, 6—1, 6—1, and Robert Gastmeyer, 6—4, 6—4, advancing to the third round.

The parade into the fourth round was headed by Frankie Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., leader of the draw. Parker defeated Louis Valentine, his former roommate at prep school, 6—0, 6—1, and drew abreast of Frank Kovacs, seeded second, in the round of 16. Kovacs made the grade yesterday in a burst of activity which saw him win three contests.

Alex Guerry, of Chattanooga, went into the third round by ousting Vincent Paul, of Brooklyn, 6—2, 6—3. Bill McGehee, of New Orleans, was stopped in the third round by Donald Hawley, of Orange, N. J., 4—6, 6—3, 6—1. Charles O'Neill, of Portland, Oreg., earned the right to meet Kovacs in the fourth round by downing Hugh Riddleberger, of New York, 6—0, 6—3.

Billy Umstadter, of Milburn, N. J., national junior indoor champion, gained the fourth round with a 6—8, 8—3, 6—4 conquest of John Curtiss, of New York. Bill Reedy and Myron McNamara, of Los Angeles, also reached the fourth round. Reedy bested Joe Almirall, of New York, 6—2, 6—1, while McNamara nipped Charles Masterson, of New York, 3—6, 6—2, 6—4.

Screwball Questions Keep Fish Department Officials in Dither

Can a Fish Swim? What's a Whale Worth? Are Some of Daffy Queries; Here Are Answers

Can a fish swim?

What is a whale worth?

What is the most vulnerable spot on an octopus?

It's questions like these that seem to be bothering officials of the Government's Fish and Wildlife Service of late, and now they've published a report about it.

Ace fish quiz man, who gets most of the questions, is Talbott Denmead, a veteran in the service, and these are some of his Q's and A's:

How fast can a fish swim? No two fish can swim at the same rate, normally.

Do salmon bite only when mad? No, but bass do.

When will striped bass bite best, ebb or flood tide? Nobody knows, not even the bass. They change their minds almost as often as the tides.

Can a State make me take out a fishing license on Federal waters? Yes, but there are no Federal waters as such.

Where will the rock bite on Chesapeake Bay next Sunday? No answer.

What percentage of the United States knows how to swim? No answer.

June Power Sales in D. C. Set Record

Virgin High Levels Also Recorded for First Five Months

June consumption of electricity in Washington set a new record for that month, figures released by the Potomac Electric Power Co. revealed yesterday.

Advancing .47 per cent over the same 1939 month, kilowatt hour sales reached 70,976,658 in June.

For the first five months this year, power consumption treaded virgin high levels in company records. Kilowatt hour sales for the period totaled 413,785,533, compared with 376,791,949 in the same 1939 period.

Comparative monthly figures in kilowatt hours follow:

Month.	1940.	1939.
January	71,130,014	63,667,180
February	68,831,620	60,481,416

Banks Fifth Among 1,500

National recognition for his personal paid production record last month was won by B. C. Mayberry, Washington representative of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., according to word received here from the home office in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Mr. Mayberry ranked fifth among the company's more than 1,500 sales representatives.

Six Return From Parley

The local chapter of the American Institute of Banking was represented at the regional American Institute of Banking Conference in Harrisburg, Pa., last Saturday by the following: John M. Christie, Riggs National Bank; Kenneth Birgfeld, American Security & Trust Co.; James B. Ahalt, The City Bank; Edward C. Holmead, Suburban National Bank; Neal W. Wels, National Savings & Trust Co.; Robert C. Christie, National Savings & Trust Co.

Two New Directors Named

The Home Life Insurance Co. of New York has elected two new directors. They are N. Baxter Jackson, first vice president and director of the Chemical Bank & Trust Co., New York, and Walter Hoving, president of Lord & Taylor.

Joins W. W. Chambers

Herbert B. Nevius, retired funeral director, has become an executive director with the W. W. Chambers organization. Born in Burlington, Iowa, Mr. Nevius came to Washington and established his own business in 1910 after an association with the J. R. Wright Co. and the Thomas M. Hindler Co. He retired in 1938.

'One-Arm' Farms Of South Cited At I. C. C. Hearing

Atlanta, July 16 (AP).—Southern representatives, contending a "one-arm farm system" has developed in Dixie areas, continued their fight before Interstate Commerce Commission examiners today to gain lower rates on livestock hauling.

Dr. Clarence Poe, of Raleigh, N. C., editor of the Progressive Farmer, told the board that Southern States should be given "equal opportunity" to revive livestock raising.

The editor said that concentration of cash crops like tobacco and cotton, to the exclusion of livestock, resulted in soil and human erosion that was detrimental to the entire Nation because it lowered buying power.

Virginia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky are seeking a lower rate structure on livestock shipments, claiming rates in other areas discriminate against them.

H. C. Barron, of Chicago, attorney for a group of Western railroads, charged Poe's testimony was "propaganda" and unsuccessfully sought to have it stricken from the record.

Cotton Futures

New York, July 16 (AP).—New crop cotton contracts improved today but July deliveries shot off on a tangent and posted sizable losses. Old July dropped 14 points and new 13, while later months were up 5 to 6 points.

At the close, brokers said, July appeared to be thoroughly evened up in readiness for the final half day of trade in that month Wednesday.

Weather news was a dominant factor in demand for later months. Not only was overnight weather in the South rated bullishly but the trade expected the Government summary tomorrow to reveal unfavorable growing conditions.

Helping to sustain the distant contracts were the strength of securities and recurring gossip a Government loan on 1940-41 staples may be announced at a basis above 9.50 cents a pound.

Only small lots of cloth moved at unchanged prices, Worth street reported.

This was equivalent after preferred dividend requirements to 72 cents a share on common stock as compared to 39 cents a share for the 12-month period a year ago.

Rustless Iron & Steel Corp.

Rustless Iron & Steel Corporation, of Baltimore, earned net profit of $332,754 in the June 30 quarter, equal after $2.50 preferred dividend requirements to 33 cents a common share. This compared with adjusted net profit of $209,001, or 21 cents on common, in the like 1939 quarter.

Crude Oil Output Declines in Week

Tulsa, July 16 (AP).—Daily crude oil production in the United States declined 48,874 barrels to 3,563,984 for the week ended June 13, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

Heaviest decline was in Illinois, down 18,461 to 486,025. California was off 7,900 to 623,250; the Rocky Mountain area, 7,020 to 95,300; Oklahoma 6,700 to 411,575; Louisiana, 5,957 to 281,975; Kansas 4,250 to 178,200, Michigan, 1,750 to 54,163, and Eastern fields 500 to 105,750.

East Texas increased 1,848 to 374,746, with all Texas up 4,998 to 1,143,333

Sugar Futures

New York, July 16 (AP).—Domestic sugar futures retained balance after an early drop of as much as 8 points today and closed only 1 to 2 points down.

Liquidation of long positions in nearby deliveries dried up as the session progressed and covering by trade interests took up the slack. Sales totaled 15,200 tons.

The world list slipped ½ to 1 point in lackadaisical trade. Sales amounted to only 700 tons; September .98 bid, December .99 bid.

Raw sugar held steady despite sale of over-quota supplies at 10 points below the previous spot sales of 2.70 cents a pound. Other raw sorings were scaled from 2.70 up.

Week's Imports Include $119,765,938 Direct From England

By the Associated Press

A large shipment from England boosted gold imports to $154,212,780 in the week ended July 10.

The Commerce Department said yesterday the week's gold cargoes, nearly double the preceeding week, include $119,765,938 from England.

Although the British Empire has been the principal gold shipper for many months, the gold usually has arrived from Canada or some other part of the empire, rather than direct from England. Other British shipments last week included $24,457,685 from Canada.

Other shipments included $2,699,009 from Portugal, $1,990,774 from Brazil and $2,112,051 from Colombia.

The department said $68,359,495 of the incoming gold was added to earmarked deposits of foreign governments and central banks in the Federal reserve system, increasing the total of such deposits to $1,722,480,453.

Silver imports slumped in the week to $667,600, including $135,782 from Canada and $217,052 from Mexico.

L. O. F.-Glass Net Doubles in Half, Hits $5,176,748

Toledo, Ohio, July 16 (AP).—Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. netted $5,176,748, or $2.06 per share, in 1940's first six months, directors were informed today. This compared with $2,654,813, or $1.01 per share, for the same 1939 period.

Directors declared a dividend of 50 cents a share, payable September 16 to shareholders of record August 30.

Total manufacturing profit and other income amounted to $8,443,624, against $5,082,955 in six months last year.

"The eventual effect on our business of the world situation is not yet clear," President John D. Biggers said. "However we are fully prepared to take care of all probable needs of our customers in the automotive, building and allied fields and to manufacture certain glass specialties which fit into the defense program."

Biggers, who is executive assistant to W. S. Knudsen, manufacturing coordinator of the new preparedness program, said Libbey-Owens-Ford paid $2,269,292 for 70.24 per cent of the outstanding shares of Plaskon Co., Inc.

North American To Spend $7,000,000 On Wisconsin Unit

New York, July 16 (AP).—The North American Co.'s subsidiary, the Wisconsin Electric Power Co., has completed plans to order equipment for 80,000 kilowatts additional capacity at the Port Washington plant near Milwaukee, says a letter sent to Government defense authorities.

The new facilities will cost approximately $7,000,000 and bring the North American's construction program to close to $100,000,000 from the figure of $90,000,000 established as of the end of June.

North American proposes to increase its system's generating cacity to a level adequate for any demand which can be foreseen over the next few years.

Exchange Market

New York, July 16 (AP).—The free British pound reacted 3 cents in relation to the dollar today following Monday's jump.

Resulations were announced over the week-end which at first sight pointed to the elimination of free sterling in international trade. The rate immediately shot to within less than 10 cents of the official rate of $4.02½@4.03⅛ which London wants to substitute for the free.

But local banking quarters later discovered a few knotty angles in the announcement, especially in the sections devoted to the future curumbelled free of the free pound, and the price dropped back while New York waited for official word from abroad.

The latest resulations provided for elimination of free sterling to pay for exports from Britain after July 17. Whether or not U. S. individuals or banks can trade free sterling with other U. S. individuals, and what they can do with it, were the questions under discussion.

The Canadian dollar rose ⅛ cent to 87⅞ cents. The Swiss franc was unchanged.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents).

Individual Income Taxes Dip $49,729,240 in Fiscal Year

By the Associated Press

Collections of individual income taxes and excess profits taxes declined slightly, but returns from all otheer forms of Federal internal revenue increased in the fiscal year just ended.

The Treasury, in an analysis of colections in the year ended June 30, reported yesterday that individual income taxes totaled $979,103,556, compored with $1,028,833,796 in the preceding fiscal year.

However, corporation income taxes increased from $1,122,540,000 in the previous fiscal year to $1,124,551,988.

Employment taxes (social security and railroad retirement) increased from $740,128,865 to $833,521,224, and miscellaneous internal revenue rose from $2,262,714,117 to $2,384,072,385. Excess profits tax collections dropped from $27,056,372 to $18,333,839.

This made up a total internal revenue collection of $5,339,583,925, compared with $5,181,573,952 the preceding year.

Call for Sound Economics At Havana Parley Sounded

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
Economic Commentator

The prospects for success in the forthcoming Havana conference for Western Hemisphere solidarity will be enhanced if the project is approached in a realistic spirit.

Unless proposed arrangements are anchored in sound economics, then the sloganeering and passing hysteria will lead only to disappointment.

Contrary to some political assumptions, proximity alone is not enough to create economic solidarity.

The best foreign customer of the United States has never been Latin America, but the far-flung British Empire.

In a large degree some of the South American countries are our normal competitors in foreign trade, especially in commerce in agricultural staples, rather than our natural customers. In the last European industrial nations, some of which have inadequate home agriculture, have been the best customers of agricultural South America.

In my book, "Financial Security in a Changing World," I state these ratios in elementary manner, as follows: "In an effort to state these points in specific terms of 1939 experience, I shall express the United States exports to Latin America in terms of ratios to total economic activity in the United States that year. The United States Department of Commerce computed the national income of the country, which is a measure of the net value of goods and services produced, at $68,500,000,000. Stated in terms of daily results (figuring 300 working days in the year), this figure amounts to $282,000,000 per working day.

"Thus we find that our total export trade to South America, expressed in comparable terms, provided one and one-half days' work for the American people.

"Our exports to Cuba amounted to one-third of a day; to Brazil, one-third of a day; to the Argentine, one-third of a day; to Mexico, one-third of a day; to Colombia, one-quarter of a day; to Venezuela, one-quarter of a day; to Chile, one-tenth of a day, and to Peru, one-tenth of a day.

"The foregoing figures are not presented for the purpose of belittling our desirable export trade, but rather to give a better sense of proportion in evaluating economic data."

No Hitler hating should blind us to the underlying realities, for failure to face facts as well as potential enemies do will in the long run represent merely unwittingly playing into their hands.

The spirit of boycott beclouds the true nature of trade. Horror-stricken and revolted by barbaric religious persecution in Germany and by Japanese aggresison in China, well-meaning Americans sought to express their disapproval by withholding orders for goods produced in offending nations. No one can blame individuals for thus making articulate the voice of their own conscience.

But with the whole world in ferment and with vast raw material areas passing into new national hands, it is important to remember that the boycott is at best an indirect byproduct of international trade. Bona-fide exchange should represent mutual benefits to buyer and seller. Legitimate foreign trade is based on exchanging what one nation has in excess for things it lacks.

Clear economic reasoning is blurred by the new passion for boycott, which assumes that the act of buying is a means of conferring favors on foreigners. This concept is a far cry from the observation of the late Henry P. Davison that in business, sentiment counts only when you are confronted by two propositions of equal merit.

In tending to limit trade to peoples whose political ideology we admire we seem to be falling unwittingly into the Nazi pattern. Instead of looking objectively at human worth, the Nazis limit their favor to the so-called pure Nordic type, closing their eyes to the remarkable inventions and contributions to civilized thought and living by Jews, Catholics and other types out of favor with the ruling clique in the Reich.

Stocks Break Out of Rut in Brisk Buying; Bethlehem and Chrysler Lead Advance

New York, July 16.—The stock market today made the most determined effort to break out of its rut that it has displayed since the nomination of Wendell Willkie. Trading was not large, amounting to only 437,840 shares, but that is about twice the recent daily volumes and the largest since last June 28.

Encouraging to the bullish forces was the fact that the heaviest trading came while stocks were climbing, and when they hesitated in the afternoon the volume dwindled. At the close the list showed a respectable rise, the composite average being up 0.39 point.

In these days of dullness, a gain like that is almost sensational. While fractional changes continued to predominate, there were a number of the speculative leaders which showed price changes of a point or more.

Chrysler Is Strong

Leading the list were Bethlehem and Chrysler with gains of 2⅝ and 2⅝ points respectively. Most active stock on the list was United States Steel, up a point. The entire steel group was in the forefront. Along with war issues these shares spurted in the second and third hours of trading. They dropped a bit from their highs before the close but held on to plus signs. Republic, National, American Rolling Mill, Crucible and many other members of the group added good fractions. Sympathetic strength was displayed by most of the companies in the heavy industries.

Politics, more than the war, was the day's chief factor. News accounts from Chicago, telling of the growing opposition to a third term and the resentment of delegates who know they are at the convention to merely act as rubber stamps when the orders came from Washington, encouraged investors in the belief that at long last a change is in the making. The action of the market paralleled almost exactly the news from Chicago, the rally coming on the stories of opposition and the later reaction and dullness developing when the New Deal started reforming its forces.

Trade News Mixed

Business news was mixed and appeared to have no effect upon prices. Reports of several of the leading automobile makers were bullish, showing sharp gains in retail business for the first ten days of July. On the other side of the ledger was the oil price situation. The recent price reduction in Pennsylvania crude was followed today by one in the midcontinent. The weekly report of the American Petroleum Institute showed another beneficial reduction in gasoline stocks. War news was indecisive, containing hints of a peace offer but also accounts of the massing of German troops preparatory to the threatened invasion of England.

Brokers were of the opinion that the technical position of the market has undergone some improvement in the recent period of dullness. For the first two weeks of the month the volume has been down around levels prevailing in 1918. While there has been no buying enthusiasm in this period, it is equally true that there has been no evidence of large blocks of stock being pressed on the market for sale, and while listed securities have been holding their own, there has been a welcome quickening in the new issues market.

Aviations Buoyant

Aviations were among the strong issues today, following along after the steels. Douglas closed up 1⅝. Most active of the group was United Aircraft, up nearly a point, as was Grumman, which just declared its first dividend of this year. Lockheed added a fraction, as did North American Aviation and Boeing. In other categories, Loft was the day's second most active stock, adding a good fraction. Standard of New Jersey was up a point and Central and Great Northern preferred led the rails slightly higher.

American Smelting, Du Pont, Procter & Gamble and Westinghouse were up a point or more. Packard was an active favorite but eased slightly.

Bonds Improved

Outside the Treasury and foreign sections, the bond market on the stock exchange had a moderately better price tone today. Total turnover also improved to some $4,862,000, against $3,081,000 on Monday.

In the Treasury list final prices on the exchange off 7-32 point to up 7-32 point, with gains and losses about equally divided. Over-counter dealings showed a final range of 1-32 lower to 4-32 higher, with trading dull. The latest Treasury issue was quoted at 102 10-32 and 102 13-32, moderate activity being shown for this loan.

Price changes in the foreign section lacked any uniform trend. German and Italian bonds were mixed.

Rail bonds furnished the best feature of the domestic corporate list, strength and some activity appearing among best grade as well as more speculative bonds and including Nickel Plates and Southern Pacifics, with rises of one to more than two points. Industrial bonds were steady while public utility issues sold off, showing a decline of 0.26 point in the averages.

Wheat Paces Commodities In Recovery

Major Grain Jumps 1½ to 2 Cents on Peace Rumors

By the Associated Press

Paced by a decisive rally in wheat, many major commodities swung ahead yesterday after recent persistent weakness.

Wheat at Chicago rose 1⅛ to 2 cents a bushel, near the day's top gains. Peace talk, a better slant to securities and weather news influenced demand. Corn was ⅛ off to up ⅜.

The July cotton contract at New York fell 65 and 70 cents a bale but other deliveries advanced 25 to 30 cents. Liquidation hit the july delivery because both the old and new contracts will expire Wednesday.

Rubber swung up more than ½ cent a pound for some deliveries and gains were posted at New York for copper, wool tops, cottonseed oil, Santos coffee and Straits tin.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale port commodities, based on 1926 as 100, advanced to 70.59 from 70.49.

U. S. Announces New Subsidy Plan For Flour Exports

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department yesterday announced expansion of its flour export program to provide for payment of subsidies on shipments of flour from all parts of the continental United States to other countries in the Western Hemisphere.

Announcement of the subsidy rate for the new destinations will be made by the Surplus Marketing Administration at 2 p. m. today.

The department said the current wheat and flour export programs would be continued in effect.

These programs provide for payment of subsidies on wheat exports from the Pacific Northwest to China, Hongkong, Dairen, the Philippine Islands and Europe; and for exports of wheat flour from that area to China, Hongkong, Dairen and the Philippine Islands.

Paris Banks Reopened, Says Berlin Dispatch

Berlin, July 16 (AP).—A DNB (German official news agency) dispatch from Paris today stated that the banks in the Department of the Seine reopened yesterday. (Paris is in the Department of the Seine.) Limitations on withdrawals were lifted and interest payment on government war loans was resumed. Reestablishment of banking service was ordered by the French finance ministry.

C. & O. Railway Net Increases in June

Cleveland, July 16 (AP).—Chesapeake & Ohio Railway had June net income of $2,833,730, an increase of $276,405 over June, 1939, the road reported today. Net railway operating income of $3,528,291 was up $181,430, and net income the first six months was $15,714,751, a jump of $10,135,341 over the same period last year, when the widespread mine shutdown curtailed loadings for a month.

Wine Sales Increase

Consumption of California wines in the United States for the first four months of 1940 aggregated 21,741,068 gallons, an increase of 16 per cent over corersponding 1939 figures, says the Wells Fargo Bank Business Outlook.

Home Loans In D. C. Reach All-Time High

Local Building League Reports $17,648,000 For Five Months

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Corresponding with a national advance, units of District of Columbia Building & Loan League have established a new high record in loans for home construction and refinancing during the first five months of the current year. Total loans by the local league for the five months of 1940 are $17,648,000, as compared with $14,043,000 for the period last year.

Reports from the league show member associations loaned for home construction and refinancing the following totals in the first five months of 1940: January, $2,715,000; February, $2,732,000; March, $4,002,000; April, $3,923,000; May, $4,275,000.

For the third consecutive month savings, building and loan associations of the Nation in May moved to new highs with their loan activity. The United States Savings & Loan League reports they loaned $114,542,000, a 6 per cent rise over April, previous high month since 1930, and a 22.2 per cent increase over May last year.

More of the money than ever went for construction of new homes, this figure being $36,956,000. A similar advance in the proportion of loan volume was for home purchases, being reflected in the record disbursement of 36.7 per cent of all loans to aid in buying of existing properties.

Repair and modernization loans were a third classification excelling all former amounts in May, while refinancing loans were the only ones of smaller volume in May than the preceding month. A. D. Theobald, assistant vice president of the national league, explains that the decrease in the latter group was in conformity with the large recovery upturn institutions are making in financing new property ownership enterprise.

held service to reduce the deficit to 5—1. Hunt wasted no time, though, and held in the seventh to win it, 6—4. Gil also captured the initial game of the second set, but then was swept aside by his fast-improving opponent who, with the score tied at 2—2, ran off three straight games to take what proved to be an insurmountable lead for Hunt.

With Hunt slipping and Greenberg coming along strongly an upset seemed imminent in the third set after Seymour had taken the advantage at 4—3 following an exchange of broken services in the third and fourth games. With the pressure on, Hunt responded to square things at 4—4 and take the lead at 5—4 as he held service after two deuces in the ninth.

Greenberg Rallies

Greenberg, though, wasn't yet through and fought off a match point while trailing, 5—4, 40-30, to stave deadlock the count at 5—5. He then really put Hunt on the spot by breaking Gil's service to win, 7—5. Here, however, Hunt called for aid to the threat and Greenberg only one point on the latter's service in the twelfth and clinched the victory in the thirteenth with a pair of lofty volley placements from up close. It was Hunt's masterful play at the net more than any other stroke that carried him home.

Welby Van Horn, second-seeded star from Los Angeles and a stylist of the same eccentric temperament as Hunt, also received a terrific scare prompted by his own carelessness before beating Harris Everett, the very talented University of North Carolina player, 1—6, 6—4, 7—5. After looking miserable in dropping the first set, Van Horn served on the last game of the 11th to lead in the second, but then relapsed again and saw Everett three times come within a point of squaring the set. The collegian won two set-point games and carried Van Horn to a fourth before losing the tenth game and the second set, 6—4.

Van Horn Is Steady

Van Horn appeared content to swap games in the third set until, 5—5, when he forced the two necessary games with loss of only two points, inserting four placements at crucial moments.

The luck of the draw in the first round of men's doubles, brought about the elimination of one of the two teams numbering District players. Davis Bonnett, of Takoma, teaming with Seymour Greenberg to defeat Ralph (Buddy) Adair, an Edgemoor clubmate, and Robert Leitch, of Richmond, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4.

Jonsson and Greenberg will play their second-round match at 4:30 today against Hunt and Gil, in an earlier encounter between George Pero and William Hardie and Littleton Rogers and Dick Morris.

Faced by top-ranked Alice Marble, the stalwart national champion, competition in the women's singles went into the quarter-final round and the last list was depleted by the elimination of Pauline Betz, ranked fourth among the American athletes, and Nina Brown and Rita Jarvis, second and third among the best foreign contenders.

Men's Singles

Second round—William Talbert defeated William Vost, 4—6, 6—0, 6—2; Ronald Lubin defeated Hugh Lynch, default; Leon Everett defeated Frank Guernsey, default.

Third round—Welby Van Horn defeated Harris Everett, 1—6, 6—4, 7—5; Eddie Allen defeated Frank Prosbling, 6—4, 6—3, 8—6; Gil Hunt defeated Seymour Greenberg, 6—4, 4—6, 6—0; Jack Kramer defeated Richard McKee, 6—3, 2—6, 6—2; Hal Surface defeated Owen Henderson, 6—3, 8—6; George Toley defeated Ladislav Hecht, 6—4, 6—2; Archie Henderson defeated Charles Kaufman, 6—4, 6—0; Henry Prusoff defeated James Wade, 6—3, 6—1; Robert Harmon defeated Littleton Rogers, 6—0, 5—6, 6—2.

Women's Singles

Second round—Alice Marble defeated Frances Matthai, 6—0, 6—1; Louise Raymond defeated Doris Hart, 6—3, 6—3; Nina Brown defeated Hazel Bishop, 6—0, 6—1; Pat Cumming defeated Marcy Lee, 6—4, 6—3; Gracyn Wheeler defeated Helen Harrison, 6—1, 6—2; Mary Arnold defeated Adie Dorfeld, 6—1, 6—1; Mary Hardwick defeated Isabel Harvey, 6—1, 6—1.

Third round—Valerie Scott defeated Louise Brough, 6—2, 4—6, 6—4; Alice Marble defeated Louise Raymond, 6—0, 6—1.

Washington A. A. Trackmen Working

tion is going to build up its track organization on a par with the New York Athletic Club and the Boston A. C. with an eye to competition in the national and sectional indoor and outdoor meets scheduled during the coming winter.

Main impetus for the idea is furnished by the prospect of bringing the "big time" indoor track events to the District next winter when the new National Guard Armory in Northeast Washington will be ready for occupancy.

Because of World War II, the big armories in New York and other Eastern cities will be unavailable for the large indoor meets, Helm explained.

Just now, the association is looking forward to a series of track meets with nearby college and athletic club squads. First of these is scheduled for August 3, when the association team journeys to Annapolis to meet the combined forces of the Naval Academy secondclassmen and plebes.

Helm, looking to the day when the W. A. A. will own its own clubhouse and track, has a crack trio to build his squad around—namely, March, Kehoe and Fields.

Kehoe ran second in the 800-meter junior day race in the National A. A. U. meets last month in California, while Fields was third in the 5,000-meter run. March took a fifth in the broad jump and a second in the 200-meter low hurdle. He also was in a photo finish in the 400-meter hurdle event, coming out third. Winning time was 51.8, a new American record. The Olympic record is 52 seconds flat and March qualified for the 1940 Olympics. Only trouble is they have been "liquidated."

Mrs. Grosvenor's Burial Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Virginia Lamborn Grosvenor, 89, who died Monday, will be held at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the Hysong funeral home, 1300 N street northwest. Mrs. Lamborn was the widow of Col. David A. Grosvenor.

Surviving are a daughter, Edith Louise Grosvenor, and three grandaughters, Helen A. Grosvenor and Mrs. Joseph A. Blanken, all of Washington, and Mrs. A. A. Woodson, of Salem, Va. She also leaves two grandsons, Richard G. and Raymond A. Blanken, both of Washington. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

$150,000 More Will Be Sought To Keep D. C. Streets Clean

Supervisor of City Refuse Blames Housewives And Inadequate Appropriation for Unsightly Conditions; Praises Group's Cleanup Drive

Increased funds and more cooperation from the Washington housewife and her family are needed to clean the city's streets and alleys, William A. Xanten, supervisor of city refuse, declared yesterday.

Lauding the work now in progress by the District Cleanliness Association, Xanten said he would seek a $150,000 boost in the 1942 fiscal year budget for street and alley work. The present budget carries $445,160 for this work.

Speaking about the housewife, Xanten said:

"There's a street in the downtown section which is really a problem. My men get out there in the morning when parking is prohibited because of the traffic flow downtown. That street is spotless after their work is done. Yet by noon you'd never think a white wing had been there. Housewives have swept new litter into the street."

Xanten believes Washington produces more rubbish per capita than any other city in the country.

His men carry off 75,000 tons of trash yearly from Washington streets and alleys. They don't work every day, either, he stated.

At present Xanten has 250 laborers, including about 180 white wings. The other men work in alley or suburban gangs.

"I would like to have about 400 men," he said, pointing out that Baltimore has about 450.

Ninety per cent of the appropriation is used for the pay roll. New York City spends $9,000,000 annually for this type of work.

The great number of trees in the city increases the problem of keeping the streets clean, he said. "Our greatest headache, however, is paper strewn about the streets," he added.

He said the work of the citizens' committee, headed by Dr. Harry A. Garfield, would be a great aid in educating the public about keeping Washington a clean and beautiful city.

"We put trash cans out on the streets, but this does not solve the problem," he stated. "People wrap their garbage in paper and throw this in the trash can. This is not the purpose of the cans."

4-Way Probe Opens in Mine Blast Killing 63

State, U. S. Agencies To Sift Worst Pa. Disaster in 12 Years

By the Associated Press

Sonman, Pa., July 16.—Grief-stricken kinfolk tonight claimed the bodies of 63 miners killed by an explosion in the Koppers Coal Co. mine while authorities mapped a four-way inquiry into the tragedy, Pennsylvania's greatest mine disaster in 12 years.

State Secretary of Mines John Ira Thomas personally took charge of the State's investigation, while the United States Bureau of Mines, the Koppers Co. and Coroner Patrick McDermott announced they will start parallel inquiries tomorrow.

The blast was tentatively and unofficially attributed to a spark from a motor that ignited an accumulation of gas or coal dust 12,000 feet back in the mine.

Eighty-four were working at the time in the 50-year-old pit, one of the largest in central Pennsylvania, but 21 escaped by running and crawling to gas-free corridors.

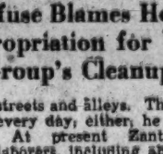
For the Leap family of Cassandra, it was a triple tragedy. The bodies of Tom Leap and two sons, Melvin and Homer, were found huddled behind a crudely made barricade of canvas and wood thrown up in a futile effort to check the spread of deadly fumes that suffocated most of the victims.

Near the bodies of the father and sons in No. 16 entry—center of the explosion—were 31 other victims.

Gen. Burnett, Who Rose From Ranks, Is Dead

Veteran of 42 Years In Army Saw Service With A. E. F. in France

Brig. Gen. Frank C. Burnett, U. S. A., retired, veteran officer who rose from the ranks to hold several high posts in the Army, died Monday in El Paso, Tex., it was announced here yesterday.



Gen. Burnett

Gen. Burnett entered the military service as a private of the Iowa Volunteer Infantry in 1898, served during the Spanish-American War, Philippine Insurrection, Mexican Expedition in 1916 and the World War. He was appointed a second lieutenant in 1901.

He was deputy adjutant general of the A. E. F. in France in 1918 and saw active service with the Sixteenth Infantry. He was assistant adjutant general from 1936 until his retirement for age, April 30.

Services for the 64-year-old officer, who was born in Casey, Iowa, will be held in Fort Myer Chapel Friday morning at 11, with interment following in Arlington Cemetery. His wife, Mrs. Ellen C. Burnett, survives.

Before the World War, Gen. Burnett served here with the General Staff, headed the officers' division of the Adjutant General's Office and was adjutant general of the Fourth and Ninth Corps Area. He was a graduate of the Army School of the Line, General Staff College and Army War College.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborne.

The coup is a method of eliminating an otherwise certain trump loser by capture with declarer's own higher trump honor. This is accomplished by maneuvering the adversaries into a position where one must ruff high and expose his partner's honor to a finesse. Incidental to the preparation for this play, which entails a shortening of declarer's trumps, both times the coup was executed, a winning trick was trumped.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable.

EAST DEALER.

	♠ A 10 7 3 ♡ 10 ◇ K Q J 2 ♣ K 8 6 4
♠ Q 8 5 ♡ 3 7 2 ◇ 7 6 5 3 ♣ J 5 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ K 9 ♡ A K Q 8 ◇ A 9 8 4 ♣ Q 10 5
	♠ J 6 4 2 ♡ 9 6 5 4 3 ◇ 10 ♣ A 9 7

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣
Pass	3 ♣	Pass	4 ♣
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 3 ♡.

"My partner on the second hand was the well-known lawyer, Dr. Martin Gottgetreu," begins Bruno Grunewald.

"West led the jack of hearts, which held the trick. East's eight, although it was his lowest card, looked like a come-on signal. That's why West continued hearts. Dummy ruffed with the three of spades. Indeed, it was a good defensive play, as it shortened dummy's trump holding. Otherwise the trumps could have been drawn. But if dummy is forced to ruff hearts the trumps cannot be drawn without the loss of two tricks.

"At the third trick, I played the deuce of diamonds from dummy, but East was on his guard and played the ace at once. He returned the five of clubs, hoping that West, in spite of his pass, would have the ace. But this card was with me and I played it at once; returned a club toward dummy's king; played the jack and queen of diamonds, on which I discarded a club and a heart. Then I ruffed a club with my two of spades, followed by a heart ruff with dummy's seven of spades.

"Here is the end position:

	♠ A 10 ♡ none ◇ K ♣ 8
♠ Q 8 5 ♡ none ◇ 7 ♣ none	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ K 9 ♡ A ◇ 8 ♣ none
	♠ J 6 4 ♡ 9 ◇ none ♣ none

"I played dummy's king of diamonds (the first stage of the coup) and ruffed it with my four of spades. Then the nine of hearts was led, and it was impossible for the opponents to get more than one trump trick."

If West plays a low trump on the nine of hearts, declarer wins a trick with dummy's spade ten, as East must follow suit. If West trumps high, dummy will overtrump with the ace; East's king may win the next trick, but declarer's jack will take the last.

Mr. Grunewald made four spades, losing a heart, a club and a trump.

Eight Indicted By D. C. Jury For Gambling

True Bills Result From Scouting Work Of District Police

A recent campaign by the Metropolitan Police yesterday led to eight gambling indictments in the District Court.

The officers scouted operations of numbers writers and racing handbooks for several days each, placing bets, which they carefully recorded. Marked money was seized in several of the arrests.

The indictments were among 46 presented by the grand jury to Justice T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday. Charges against 21 persons were dismissed.

Those indicted were:

Hewlette, 26; homicide, Katherine B. Holt, 25, colored, who was detained after Melvin Hamilton, 27, colored, died of stab wounds he suffered at 1014 Sixth street southwest on June 15.

Postlude

By Rev C. B. Brown.

Community Center Department and Office of National Capital Parks present the Tempo Choral Society at the Sylvan Theater Tuesday night in a performance of "The Merry Milkmaids," an operetta by Charles Gabriel. Cast of principal characters:

Milkmaid Queen.....Vivian Christian
Dorothy.....Nettie Wallace
Farmer Jim.....Odie Holmes
Farmer Joe....Emerson Johnson
The Judge.....E. E. Ayres
The Commodore...John Jackson
The Doctor.....Hamilton Payne
The Fortune Teller..Mary Stone
Director: Dr. W. Scott Mayo

Having hitherto devoted their annual programs at the Sylvan Theater to spirituals and serious songs, the Tempo Choral Society turned to lighter music last evening and presented Charles Gabriel's operetta, "The Merry Milkmaids," before an appreciative audience that had defied cloudy portents of rain. The performance was under the direction of Dr. W. Scott Mayo and the singers were assisted by the WPA colored dance orchestra and from recreation centers of Divisions 10-13. To give the embowered stage the verisimilitude of a farmyard, there was a background of white palings against which were trained large artificial sunflowers and the bucolic scene was further identified by shining pails and hand churns.

As a preface to the operetta, the amplifying system sent forth a recording by Paul Robeson of "Ballad for Americans," by John Latouche and Earl Robinson. While this melange of song, recitative and spoken words has but minor musical value, the collaborators have achieved their patriotic intention and the ballad produces a definite effect of mass feeling.

"The Merry Milkmaids" followed the conventional routine of operettas, inasmuch as the tenuous plot, obscure in many of its links and none too easy to trace, was merely a framework for the display of choruses, solos, duets and trios. The essential denouement, the happy outcome of the romance between the Milkmaid Queen and the Farmer, was implicit from the beginning, and the impediments to the course of true love were surmounted with song.

Charles Gabriel's music proved to be tuneful and attractive. Much of the score is in the tradition of musical comedy as to melodic patterns, with a plentiful use of waltz rhythm for choral effects. Now and then, however, the composer drew upon a good lyric vein and wrote with eloquence. Particularly pleasing moments were found in the trio, "Beautiful Maiden," the soprano solo, "Monica's Song," the tenor solo, "Hope," and the trio for soprano, alto and bass, "The Bells."

Ray Clifton Ault, Retired Harbor Policeman, Dies

Ray Clifton Ault, 66, retired Harbor policeman who served 36 years on the Metropolitan force, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital after two weeks' illness.

Before his retirement in March he was a familiar figure along the river, and in 1922 he won a medal for bravery in a rescue.

Comrades from the Association of Retired Policemen will serve as pall bearers at funeral services at 10 a. m. Thursday at Huntemann funeral home, 5732 Georgia avenue northwest. Burial will be in Forest Glen Cemetery.

He leaves his wife, three sons, John Ault, Edmund Ault and Ray C. Ault, jr., all of Washington; a sister, Mrs. Eugene May, Beltsville, Md.

A native of Ohio, he had made his home in Washington about 40 years. He lived at 1322 Concord avenue northwest.

Rev. J. M. Cotter Rites Tomorrow At G. U. Chapel

Funeral services for the Rev. James M. Cotter, S. J., 68, formerly of St. Aloysius Church, will be at 9 a. m. tomorrow in Dahlgren Chapel at Georgetown University.

Father Cotter died early yesterday at his home on the university campus. Since his retirement from St. Aloysius four years ago, he had been a member of the university's religious community.

Born in Philadelphia, he was ordained in 1908. He came to Washington ten years ago.

Surviving are a brother, the Rev. John A. Cotter, S. J., of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Preparatory School; two sisters, Mrs. Helen Lull, of Pleasantville, N. Y., and Miss Teresa C. Cotter, of Long Island City, N. Y. Burial will be in the university cemetery.

Montgomery Police Accused of Failing To Salute Flag

Montgomery County police, whose ears turn red when they hear about Jehovah Witnesses who won't salute the Flag, yesterday were on the pan themselves because they allegedly failed to proffer the proper courtesies to the colors.

Frederica F. Carlton, secretary of the William Frederick Redmond Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, yesterday wrote the Montgomery County commissioners that the members of the auxiliary were shocked by apparent ignorance of county policemen regarding courtesies to the flag.

Members of the force on duty at the Takoma Park Fourth of July parade "did not salute the colors as they passed," the secretary wrote. "Today when such matters are of such importance we feel one should show his patriotism."

The commissioners referred the letter to Acting Chief of Police Roy Bodmer, who is to instruct the policemen in courtesies due the colors.

James S. Galloway Funeral Today

Funeral services for James Sheridan Galloway, 54, a resident of Washington all his life until three months ago, who was killed by a train Sunday in Galesburg, Ill., will be held today in Knoxville, Ill.

Galloway, with his wife, Mrs. Eva Galloway and sons, Trent and Gale, moved to Galesburg, Ill., three months ago, following his retirement as engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

He also leaves his mother, Mrs. Mary W. Galloway and a brother, Morton, both of Washington.

NEW ORLEANS AND NORTHEASTERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

Washington, D. C., July 17, 1940.

Pursuant to the Interstate Commerce Commission's order dated October 6, 1939, in ex parte 54, New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad Company hereby requests bids for the purchase of all or any part of $1,000,000 principal amount of its Serial Collateral Notes to be dated and delivered on or about November 1, 1940, to bear interest at the rate of four per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, and to mature as follows:

On or before November 1, 1941, the sum of	$25,000
On or before November 1, 1942, the sum of	25,000
On or before November 1, 1943, the sum of	25,000
On or before November 1, 1944, the sum of	25,000
On or before November 1, 1945, the sum of	900,000

Said Serial Collateral Notes will be secured by the pledge thereunder of an aggregate of $1,839,000 of New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad Company First Lien and Improvement Mortgage 4½% Bonds, the said pledged bonds to be allocated to and pledged under the said Notes, respectively, as nearly as may be, in denominations of even thousands, in the proportion that the aggregate principal amount of said pledged bonds bears to the said aggregate principal amount of the Serial Collateral Notes to be sold. The issue and sale of the said Notes are to be subject to authorization by the Interstate Commerce Commission under Section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act.

Each bid shall state the name and address of the bidder, and if the bidder be a corporation, the names and addresses of the officers, directors and general manager thereof, and of the purchasing officer or agent in this trans

A PROPOSED NEW Chevy Chase, D. C., apt. hotel (lot contains 72,202 sq. ft.). A hotel license permits concession that will give this hotel apt. site probably double the income that it would receive if zoned first commercial. The present planned parking facilities (400 cars in the building) will exceed any hotel apt. in Washington. The hotel license also permits drug store, restaurant, cocktail parlors, night club, beauty parlor, barber shop, delicatessen, newsstand, dentist's and physician's offices and other valuable privileges. The late U. S. Census reports Washington and its metropolitan area the fastest growing big city of its kind in the U. S. This property is offered to investors who desire a generous income with safety. FULTON R. GORDON, 1427 Eye st. nw. District 5230. Brokers, attention.

Today's Radio Highlights

11:15 a. m., WMAL and WRC—A round table of commentators discusses the Democratic Convention in Chicago.

12 noon, WMAL—N. B. C. brings a full hour of the Democratic Convention proceedings.

6:30 P. M., WJSV—Mr. Meek has been reading one of those "how-to" books, "Winning With Words," and believes that he can assert himself with his boss. It's the latest in that new milk-toastish series, Meet Mr. Meek.

7, WMAL—National development and defense mean more than just battleships, army and planes, a truth which is discussed on This, Our America.

7:30, WOL—Who Dr. Henry Lee Smith's celebrated guest will be this week no one knows and fewer are able to tell where he is from just by hearing his voice. This interesting program of our American diction is still near the top of the novelty heap.

8, WRC—Abbott and Costello were great favorites on the Kate Smith variety hour for over a year. Now they are on their own, subbing between Fred Allen and Eddie Cantor, and they have a half-hour to fill. Benay Venuta helps out by singing Irving Berlin's "You Can't Brush Me Off."

8:45, WJSV—Brian Donlevy, in town to preview his latest film, "The Great McGinty," in which he plays a 1940 mayor, talks about life and acting with quondam actor of WJSV, Reginald Allen.

9, WMAL—From the Polo Grounds, Sam Taub and Bill Stern air the 12-round nontitle bout between Lightweight King Lew Jenkins and Welterweight Champ Henry Armstrong.

9:20 WOL—Mack Harrell, barytone, winner of the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air, sings with Henry Weber's Pageant of Melody: "Toreador Song," "Carmen," Bizet; and with Attilio Baggiore, second act duet from Verdi's "Otello." Mr. Weber conducts Percy Grainger's "Molly on the Shore," overture, "Phedre," Massenet; intermezzo, "The Jewels of the Madonna," Wolf-Ferrari; "Serenade," Anatole Arensky; "Fantasie Tiefland," Eugen D'Albert.

9:45, WJSV—Columbia opens up its mikes on the convention floor. 10, WRC and 10:05, WMAL—N. B. C. brings its audience the Platform Report of the Democratic National Convention.

Listen! with Glynn

How to make money in your spare time, picking up an odd $50 here and there, is quite simple from now on. All you have to do is know a missing heir. There's a slight catch though—there always is, you'll notice. The missing heir has to be one of those mentioned on C. B. S.'s "Court of Missing Heirs," heard over WJSV every Tuesday night at 7. Starting with last night's program, the sponsors have decided that any dialer who furnishes information leading to the discovery of an heir sought by the "Court" will be so rewarded. So you would better get to know as many missing heirs—or heiresses, if you so prefer—as you can.

Columbia's "People's Platform," the informal forum on current problems, broadcast over WJSV on Saturdays at 6, certainly does get around. Its next program comes from Havana and its participants will be delegates to the Inter-American Conference, called by Secretary of State Hull. Presumably some of the delegates chosen for the broadcast will be from Washington. Together with Latin-American representatives they'll give their unrehearsed ideas on what they think of the possibilities of Pan-American unity.

AH-H! YOU GEEV ME HOT FOOT!-WOT A SENSE OF HUMOR!-YOU ARE WOT KEEDS CALL "SUPER"!
B-BUT-I DIDN'--
-I GIVE GREEZAY A THREE-ALARM TABASCO COCKTAIL AN' HE LIKES IT!! -THEN I GIVE HIM A HOT FOOT AN' HE THINKS IT'S FUNNY!
YOU'RE TOO HOT STUFF, MASTER!
ALL LATIN PEOPLES HOT-BLOODED, MASTER! HOT STUFFS KEEP THEM HAPPY! -NOW, MASTER, TIME TO SERVE STEAK!
-WISH I HADN' STARTED THIS-- TEN MINUTES LATER
HE TOOK ONE BITE AN'-?--SAY-WHAT WAS WRONG WITH THAT STEAK?
IT WAS COLD, MASTER-HAH!

One-Hand Catch

BY MILTON CANIFF

I KNOCKED ON MISS SHERMAN'S DOOR—NO ANSWER!
MISSY SHERMAN GO OUT PAST TIME—WITH CHINESE GIRL AND BOY... HE WITH BIG EAR!
...BOY! DO YOU KNOW MISS RAVEN SHERMAN?
BUT SO! SHE GO TAXI-CLAB WITH CHINESE MUCH TIME! NOT HEAR SAY WHERE TO!
RAVEN AND HU SHEE LEAVE THE HOTEL AT DAWN, WITH CONNIE TAGGING ALONG LIKE A LOVESICK KITTEN! I SHOULDN'T HAVE WALKED OUT OF THERE!
I HAD A FEELING AFTER I LEFT THAT HU SHEE HADN'T TOLD THE WHOLE STORY! I'LL GO---

BIG CHIEF WAHOO

BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

GO! THESE ARE THE FORSIGN FOOLS WHO THOUGHT TO PHOTOGRAPH THE SACRED FACE OF ZORENA!
WE MEANT NO HARM, YOUR HIGHNESS!
YOU THINK TO SOFTEN ME WITH FLATTERY? HA! ONLY THE GODS CAN FLATTER ZORENA!
SURELY IT WOULD NOT BE A CRIME TO REVEAL TO THE WORLD A FACE AS BEAUTIFUL AS YOURS?
MY LASH WILL CUT YOU BOTH TO RIBBONS, AS A SACRIFICE TO KRISHTA, GODDESS OF VENGEANCE!
BUT BEFORE YOUR HATED EYES ARE CLOSED FOREVER, THEY SHALL GAZE UPON WONDERS NEVER BEFORE REVEALED TO DEVILS FROM THE WESTERN WORLD!
UGH, STEVE! MEBBE SHE GONNA PULLUM RAG OFF HER FACE!

MICKEY FINN

The Fog Lifts!

BY LANK LEONARD

ALL SET, FINN!
I'LL HAVE TO GO OVER TO THE STATE POLICE BARRACKS WITH 'EM TOM—YOU WAIT HERE WITH BILL UNTIL I GET BACK—AND SIT DOWN AND REST—YOU SHOULDN'T HAVE GOT MIXED UP IN THE FIGHT!
WHY NOT? I'M OKAY! ONLY I DON'T GET ALL THIS! A GUY SLUGS ME UP ON 'GOLD HILL' AND I WAKE UP IN THIS JOINT! HOW COME?
Y-YOU MEAN YOUR HEAD FEELS ALL RIGHT AGAIN? T-THAT YOU CAN REMEMBER THINGS?
WHAT ARE YOU TALKIN' ABOUT? SURE I REMEMBER THINGS, BUT—
DON'T YOU REALIZE WHAT'S HAPPENED, MICKEY? HE WAS HIT BY A BOTTLE DURING THE FIGHT—AND THE SHOCK CLEARED HIS MIND!
TOM! YOU OLD SON OF A GUN!!

HE WON'T LIVE LONG ENOUGH TO START A BATTLE - I'LL SEE TO THAT!
QUICK! HOIST MY NEW DIVE BOMBERS TO THE FLIGHT DECK. WE'LL BLAST HIS SQUADRON TO PIECES!
WHILE ABOARD WINSLOW'S FLAGSHIP- SOUND GENERAL QUARTERS, RED- SEND EVERY MAN TO HIS BATTLE STATION. WE'RE COMING INTO RANGE

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY

By Dale Allen

YOU'RE HOME SOONER THAN I EXPECTED, JOHN! YOU GOT MY MESSAGE?
WHERE IS SHE? I CAME HOME EARLY TO... TO DISCUSS SOMETHING WITH HER!
YOUR WIFE LEFT.. AN HOUR AGO, JOHN! SHE SAID SHE HAD DECIDED SUDDENLY TO GO SPEND A FEW WEEKS WITH TED AND SUE PERRY.. BUT SHE SEEMED SO WORKED UP, I WAS UNEASY!
DID SHE GET A MESSAGE BEFORE SHE LEFT.. AN ENVELOPE..?
COME TO THINK OF IT, SHE DID! AND RIGHT AFTER THE BOY DELIVERED IT, SHE WENT TO HER ROOM AND STARTED PACKING!
AUNT MARY, I'M IN TERRIBLE TROUBLE!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

YOU GOT US INTO THIS, FRANZ—AN' YOU'RE GONNA DIE, TOO!
KING! THE MINE'S CAVING IN!
YES, KID. THE WATER FRANZ TRIED TO DROWN US IN HAS UNDERMINED THE ROTTEN TIMBERS—TAKE BETTY OUT OF HERE!
BUT AREN'T YOU COMING WITH US, KING?
NEVER MIND ME! GET GOING!
